What is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food?

In appearance Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is an oval, chocolate coated pill. In the condensed form it contains all of nature's most strengthening and invigorating tonic and restorative and for this reason it is unapproached as a blood builder and nerve restorative. It cures all diseases caused by thin blood and exhausted nerves and makes pale, weak nervous men, women and children strong and healthy. 50 cents a box.

It takes two drunken men to make a pair of tights.

Minard's Liniment cures Garget in Cows.

If you ever attended a circus you probably saw dust.

DR. A. W. CHASE'S CATARRH CURE... 25c.

It is sent direct to the diseased parts by the Improved Blower. Heals the ulcers, clears the air passages, stops droppings in the throat and permanently cures Catarrh and Hay Fever, Blower free. All dealers, or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co., Toronto and Buffalo.

All is not gold that glitters. Sometimes it is a diamond.

Minard's Liniment cures Distemper.

Many a girl who looks as though she were fighting against some secret sorrow is only suffering from a corn.

A Good Stomach.

Is essential to health and happiness, but don't blame the stomach for biliousness. It is deranged, and causes poisonous bile to remain in the blood causing indigestion, headache and irregular action of the bowels. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills regulate the liver, kidneys and bowels and by their direct action on these organs effect prompt and lasting cures of biliousness, dyspepsia, headache and all kidney ailments. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers.

When a woman goes to buy a dress she always has to take some one along to help to pick it out.

To Cure a Cold in One Day

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure you. E. W. Grove's signature is on each box.

OPEN JAPAN.

But half a century ago, even more aggressively exclusive than their Continental neighbors—the Chinese—the Japanese emerged from the chrysalis state of development with a rush, and set themselves to the task of equaling those nations with whom they found they must needs associate. Now, far from seeking to confine foreigners and foreign trade to comparatively few treaty ports, they have practically thrown their country open to all-comers, and are prepared to measure themselves in competition against the most enterprising of the commercial nations in their own markets and those of the world. The year 1899 saw the inauguration of a new order of things, and introduced radical changes calculated to have an immediate effect upon trade, and suggestive of great possibilities for the future. The foreign trader may now penetrate inland, and expose his wares to a much wider body of purchasers than that to which he has hitherto been limited. Last year being the initial one of the new system, it is as yet impossible to predict with any approach to accuracy what the result or the changes will be, but they would certainly appear to indicate great opportunities for the development of foreign trade. At the same time, Japan is not a new country, and although foreign firms are establishing branches in several places throughout the country, and the ubiquitous individual Chinaman, with that enterprising activity which contrasts so strongly and strangely with the passivity of his nation, is to be found peddling his wares in many of the inland towns, it is probable that trade will remain largely in its old channels for some time to come, and that the chief centres of foreign trade hitherto existing will not lose their importance. Few foreigners have left the old treaty ports for the interior, and it must be many years before there will be sufficient inducement for such a radical change.

So far the opening of the country has had little, if any, effect upon the foreign trade of Japan. From the beginning of the year the new customs tariff with its higher rates of duty on imports came into force, and in July all duties on exports were done away with. While it is of course regrettable that financial necessities should have caused the imposition of increased duties, the Japanese statesmen are to be congratulated on the fact that they have not been led to adopt this course by reason of any extravagant protectionist tendencies, and they have contented themselves with framing a moderate tariff, calculated to serve revenue purposes. During the latter half of the year, there was a remarkable expansion in the volume of foreign trade, both imports and exports being larger than for the preceding six months. By the end of 1899, the total returns of foreign commerce for the year has reached the highest figure since the opening of the country to foreign trade, with the one exception of the year 1898. The customs revenue has, it is understood, displayed a similar gratifying elasticity, and this becomes a feature of no small importance at the present juncture, when circumstances point to the Island Empire of the Orient as being called upon to play a more than usually conspicuous part in the arena of the nations. So far it must be said that Japan having been involuntarily forced into line with the civilization of the west, has readily accepted the responsibility thrust upon her and exhibits admirable resolution as well as self-control in filling a role which must necessarily impose great burdens upon her people, and even expose it to the danger of attack, or, at least, hostile restraint from western powers, which have already shown themselves none too favorably disposed towards this important new factor in Oriental affairs.

Two characteristics of the Japanese have developed very rapidly under the heat of foreign competition. First, the Japanese are found to be veritable masters of the art of organizing, establishing and maintaining trade and manufacturing combinations and trusts, and the disposition of the people, especially the lower and middle classes, towards foreigners, which is one of jealous dislike, lends itself to the successful maintenance of these trusts when formed to distribute and sell native manufacturers through the agency of native traders against foreign manufacturers sold by foreign traders. The Japanese are exceedingly clannish, and prefer their own people before foreigners. The other characteristic tells against the Japanese as manufacturers and traders, but tells rather against the effective development of Japanese competition in Asia, outside of Japan, than inside of it. They will not adhere to their contracts when the market goes against them, and the quality of their manufactures deteriorates very rapidly. They are splendid imitators of European products, and at first their imitation articles are fairly substantial as well as fine in appearance. But very soon the quality of the article is found to become poorer and poorer, and while the appearance is often maintained, it is substantially a very inferior imitation article, for which the original price is demanded. If a Japanese contracts either to buy or sell on future delivery he will not keep his contract unless it proves profitable. The Chinese are altogether different and superior in this. The latter fulfil their bargains, however unprofitable they may turn out to be, but the Chinamen seldom makes a bad bargain. The credit of the Japanese traders does not therefore become strong outside of Japan, and is weak inside also.—Witness.

Wornout Nerves.

So Weak she Couldn't Sleep or Work—
Hands Trembled—Could Scarcely Walk——Restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.
Mrs. Margaret Iron, Tower Hill, N. B., writes:—"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a world of good. I was so weak that I could not walk twice the length of the house. My hands trembled so that I could not carry a pint of water. I was too nervous to sleep, and unable to do work of any kind.
"Since using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been completely restored. I can walk a mile without any inconvenience. Though 76 years old, and quite fleshy, I do my own housework, and considerable sewing, knitting, and reading besides. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has proved of inestimable value to me."
"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the world's greatest restorative for pale, weak, nervous men, women, and children. In pill form, 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.
Don't cough, use Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle.
