HUNTER'S CORNER

by dogs enter a field it spells trouble in box car letters. To the Huns a dog is all the same for but of a different colour.

When a covey of Huns is caught napping and the hunter is literally standing on their tails before they are aware they'll sometimes freeze and try to sit it out. When they do it takes some digging around to get them into the air. Too well they know what will happen when they become air-borne. Several years ago my hunting partner with a friend and Timmy were out after Huns on a follow up after a covey that had been shot at they were traversing a field whereon the hay hadnt been cut for years. It was knee high with an accumulation of matted growth from former years on the bottom. Suddenly Timmy dropped flat on his belly and looked over his shoulder as much as to say: "Hold it fellas, I'm right on top of them".

They knew it wasn't the covey they were following and after kicking around for several minutes with no action decided it was a false point. When they started to move off the dog refused to follow...just crawled on his belly for a couple of feet and gave with another appealing look. That settled it. My partner remarked: "They're here". He kicked around a bit more and then waited while his friend smoked a cigarette. As he tossed the butt aside and took a step a Hun exploded from in front of his boot toe and zoomed upward within a foot of his nose. He missed with both barrels. Shoved two more shells into the breech and relaxed. Just as he remarked: "All this fuss over one bird" six others rocketted into the air squealing like Banshee's. Both hunters missed. They had been sitting in a tight little circle around the dog.

How many dogs or hunters would have handled that situation? Not too many. The dog handler would have remarked: "The dog has gone loco" and walked away. If Timmy hadn't been steady as they come he'd have tried to grab one. Such action is not in his book. An ordinary mutt would have done better in this instance. He'd make a pounce as if they were field mice and that would be that.

Some years ago I owned an Irish Water Spaniel who loved to hunt Huns...just hunt with no fancy pointing. The morning of the last day of the season I met a farmer friend. "Where have you been all year, I haven't seen you for months," was his greeting. He told me there were three large covey's on his farm that had never been fired at. One hung out in the buck wheat patch, another around the back pasture spring and one in 'the bog'. The bog turned out to be a patch of springy alder swale.

I covered that farm thoroughly in the afternoon. Old Jack worked like a Trojan without finding a single covey. I sat on ridge with my back against a tree, with the dog curled at my feet, and was content to watch the last day of the Hun season pass into the memory column. As the sun sank in the west and night shadows crept up the valley I heard the call of the coveys, from three different points of the compass, reporting "All's well.' As I trudged wearily carward I thought out loud: "You won this round but there's another year coming. Don't lose any sleep fellow hunters over the Huns being shot out...they're smarter than us or our dogs when the chips are down.

Soldiering No Cinch In Igloos

OTTAWA (CP)—In the windchill on the sub-Arctic tundra near Fort Churchill, Man., the army is using the "buddy" system to help prevent frostbitten faces.

Everyone is paired off and it is the duty of each man to stay close to his partner. Every few moments they glance at one another to make sure there are no signs of frozen noses or nipped ears.

Fifty officers and non-commissioned officers Monday left Fort Churchill on foot to spend a week on the barren, snow-drifted tundra. The objective: To learn how to live and fight effectively in Canada's sub-Arctic.

The army reported Thursday that not a single incident of frostbite occurred during the first three days of the exercise. And it was 50 degrees below zero one night

LIVE IN IGLOOS

The group of 50, drawn fom the 2nd Battalions of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, Royal 22nd Regiment and Royal Canadian Regiment, carried on their backs or dragged on toboggans their weapons, rations and protection against the elements.

Their homes during the exercise are igloos built from snow blocks and caves carved into the concrete-hard drifts. Primus stoves are used for cooking and heat. Arctic bedrolls keep them comparatively warm through the long nights. The men shave in melted snow.

The group, all instructors, are testing for the first time a newly-developed face mask. The army said it gives excellent protection against the cold.

One lesson learned is that the flame from a single candle will given sufficient heat to make a snow cave liveable

BOMBAY (AP)—Rioters, looters and arsonists surged through Bombay again today, continuing the fourday outburst of violent protest against making the city a separate state.

An official government broadcast said at least nine persons were killed by police firing into mobs today. Additionally, one policeman was stoned to death by rioters and several members of one family were attacked and killed in their car, other sources reported.

The government report raises to at least 40 the number killed in disorders this week in Bombay state.

ATTENTION FARMERS BEAN CONTRACTS

The Department has been contacted by a Mainland firm regarding the possibilities of contracting for the growing of 300 acres of yellow eyed beans. This crop is cultivated similar to potatoes and harvested with a combine. Plots of at least two acres are recommended. If you are interested in receiving further information, write immediately. The number and location of inquiries will determine if and where these beans might be grown.
