GODFREY'S WHITE QUEEN.

BY EDWARD RAYMOND.

CHAPTER VIII.

It was night, a hot moonlight night, and Mrs. Neville could not sleep. In vain she tried all the devices well known to the sleepless—she paced her room, she drank water, she counted the designs on the paper on the wall. Sleep, nature's kind nurse, had deserted her to night. At last she rose altogether and went out into the passage. The moon streamed in, and filled the house with pale mysterious light. She put out the candle she held and slowly walked to the window.

All was silent, and she leant her forehead against the cold glass and looked out on the colorless scene. Trees shut in the garden and hid from view the wide surrounding landscape with its living fires and rolling smoke. This little spot was all cold moonlight and shade. As she looked, the troubles of her life seemed to press heavily on her heart; that yearning for the past, that agonizing yearning "for the touch of a vanished hand, for the sound of a voice that is still," came on her, as it comes on those who have sorrowed, in the night season, when the body is worn and weary, and the spirit, strong and unshackled, seems to wrestle for communion with spirits that have already found their rest.

The weary woman bowed her head on her hand. Then slowly began a sound that thrilled to her heart, a sound unparalleled in nature for its intense sweetness, for the joy it brings to the happy heart, for the balm and comfort to the sorrowful. Yet it was only the song of a little bird, only the wondrous melody of the nightingale.

When God made the world, He bestowed upon Day a beautiful harmony, a chorus of sound, various, joyous, triumphant, full of love and joy and praise. Then Night bowed her silver-veiled head and prayed also for music; and God, denying her harmony, bestowed on her a yet choicer gift—a melody almost divine.

Mrs. Neville listened, and soft tears rushed to her eyes. She threw open the window and leant out; but, alas! the too human sound broke the spell, and, ending abruptly, the songster flew away. Thick clouds scudded rapidly across the sky, and black shadows quickly chased each other over the earth; a cold breeze drove in her face, and the trees rustled with a sough as of coming rain, making the yellow leaves float sullenly down.

Mrs. Neville was about to draw back and close the window, when she was startled by the sound of a door opening below. She leant over and looked down with a sudden thrill of fear. A cloud passed over the moon; when it floated away she saw the figure of Godfrey standing in the garden. The sight struck her with intense terror; his face was white and drawn, his eyes fixed as though he saw some vision before him that was gradually drawing him on; his hands were outstretched before him, as if repelling from him that which he was compelled to follow. In this attitude he was slowly crossing the garden towards the trees.

"WHAT BRINGS YOU HERE ON THIS HORRIBLE NIGHT?"

She leant down with a sudden cry, "Godfrey, Godfrey!" but he paid no heed. Holding her breath, she could hear him utter words in hoarse, broken gasps—

"I deny it not! an ideal, an ideal! I deny it not!" Then, as if something answered him, he cried—

"No, no! not false! I am thy slave—I obey." Another pause, than—

"What! I deny thy thraldom? do you not see that I am coming, coming with Castaletti?" He reached the trees and in one instant was out of her sight. Once more she cried out, "Godfrey, Godfrey!" then tore open the door and ran down the stairs. It was pitch dark, and the house-door resisted all her efforts to open it. Blindly she rushed to the morning-room; in the darkness her hands strayed wildly over the panels; she could not find the handle. At last succeeding, she rushed in; one of the long windows was wide open; and through it, she saw two men entering. The foremost was Godfrey, walking still with his eyes fixed straight before him. Keeping tight hold of his arm came the other, who put Mrs Neville aside with his free hand, muttering, as he did so, in the familiar voice of Roger Girwood—

"Wait!"

And the two passed straight on and upstairs, and the unhappy mother sank down on the sofa, while gasps, almost convulsive, shook her from head to foot. It seemed hours, though in reality not more than ten minutes, before the door opened again, and Roger Girwood returned. He held a candle in his hand, and by its light Mrs. Neville saw his flushed and careworn face.

"You here, Roger!" she exclaimed. "What brings you here on this horrible night?" and she gasped again. Girwood put down the candle, and drawing the back of his hand backwards and forwards over his brow, he said—

"Do not be too much alarmed, ma'am. Mr. Godfrey has often walked in his sleep."

"Sleep! was he asleep? But the awful expression of his eyes!" "He has very fearful dreams," said the old man, sorrowfully.

"And how came you here, my good, kind friend?"

"I have been here some days," he answered simply. "He knows nothing of my presence, and we must not tell him. I have a room in Lealstone, but I have been up here and seen him every night at the window of his room."

"Has he ever come out before?"

"Once or twice."

"Heaven help us all! Roger, my heart is breaking."

"Time enough for that when there is no cure possible."

"He grows more like his father every day," said the poor mother. Girwood looked at her earnestly.

"Something must be done," he said.

"But what? what can we do?" I suppose it is still this horrible hallucination?"

"Yes, always the same. Something must be done to shake his faith in it. Can Mr. Castaletti be found? More than ever am I convinced that it is all a diabolical trick of that Italian scamp. If he could be found, I would shake every breath out of his body, but I would force him to confess it."

"But what motive?"

"Who knows? I tell you what, ma'am," cried the old man, vehemently, "something must and shall be done."

"Shall we have the statue destroyed? That creature I hate, in spite of her extraordinary beauty."

"A thousand times, no! It seems to me all-important that she should exist—exist to prove to him that she is nothing but a carved piece of stone. No, no; try to replace her image by a real living, breathing sweetheart. Bless my soul! all the poor lad wants is commonplace common-sense."

"But his beautiful visionary nature aspires—"

"Look you here, ma'am, said Girwood, harshly, "if you encourage or even countenance this visionary nature, your son will end in a madhouse.

"Roger, you dare to speak to me like this!

"I dare anything for my dear young master, anything for his father's son;" and tears rose to the eyes of the honest stone-cutter. Mrs. Neville wrung her hands.

"Oh, I know you are faithful! I can depend upon you, my good, my only friend. Make any suggestion; I care not what it may be, I will carry it out."

"Can we not persuade him that the statue he calls his ideal is only a prevision of some sweet young lady destined to become his bride?"

Mrs. Neville suddenly clasped her hands, exclaiming—

"Dare I?"

"What! do you think you have hit upon a plan?"

"It is too wild, too impossible."

"Tell it to me, ma'am."

Mrs. Neville lowered her voice, and they continued to talk together almost in whispers, until the first streaks of dawn began to glow in the sky.

Mrs. Neville, her face grey and drawn, as though ten years had been added to her life closed the long windows upon Roger's retreating figure, replaced blind and curtain, and slowly went upstairs to her son's room. She opened the door and stole to his bedside. Godfrey lay sleeping a sleep so still that she bent down to listen for his breathing, and passed her hand over his heavy hair. For one moment she looked upwards. She made a movement as if she would have knelt, then her face sank into her hands, and she uttered a low moan, and her heart sent out a cry of pain. "Oh, my boy, my boy! my love for you is idolatry. I dare not, dare not pray, lest God should put it into my heart that I may not do evil, even for so inestimable a good. I cannot pray, I dare not pray."

More forlorn than at any time of her life Mrs. Neville crept away to her bed.

Every day passed quickly to Audine. The hours were scarcely long enough for all the occupations of her bright young life. Since Godfrey had been in the house, she had not seen so much of Mrs. Neville, partly from a feeling of shyness, partly from not liking to disturb her friend in the enjoyment of her son's society.

(To be Continued.)

THE DAUGHTER'S PART.

She Can Do Much Toward Making Home Life Ideally Pleasant.

One of the sweetest things a girl can do is to receive friends graciously, particularly at home. In one's own house a cordial manner is particularly fitting. Do not stand off in the middle of the room and bow coldly and formally to the friend who has called. Walk over to meet her; give her your hand and say pleasantly that you are very glad to see her again. Stiff, cold and formals ways of greeting acquaintances are not proper in a girl welcoming guests to her father's house.

A daughter's part is to assist her mother on every social occasion. The girl pours the tea in her mother's drawing-room when friends drop in at five o'clock. Quite often, when no maid is present, she helps the guests to the sandwiches and the cakes which are served at five o'clock tea, and herself hands the cups and takes them from the guests who would like to be relieved.

Apart from and more important even than her manner to a guest who happens in for an hour or a day is the manner of a daughter to her father and mother. The father returns to his home after a wearying day at business. He is tired in body and mind. Coming back, as his latchkey turns in the home door, he throws off care; he is joyous at the thought of the dear ones he will meet after hours of absence.

His young daughter, in a pretty gown, with the bloom and freshness only girlhood wears, should be ready to give him the attention he loves—the kiss, the cheery word—to help her mother and the rest in letting the father see how much he is loved at home. Men give up a great deal for their families—their time, their strength, the knowledge they have gained in life's experiences — they spend everything freely for their home's sake, and the home should pay its debt in much outspoken love.—Harper's Round Table.

THE ONLY HELP

A Victim of Bright's Disease for Many Years—Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills

NEEPAWA, (Special) May 4.—Mrs. T. H McKee, formerly of Listowel, came here as a last resort. Had suffered ten years with Bright's disease. Reported to be past help, and dying, her appearance on the street in apparent good health, was a pleasant surprise. The explanation given was that her little boy had insisted that she should use Dodd's Kidney Pills and prophesied that they would cure her. She says: "From the first few doses I began to feel better, and after taking four and a half boxes I say it with heartfelt gratitude I am perfectly cured." Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only medicine in the world that has ever cured a case of Brigths disease at such a stage.

Small are the needs fate does unheeded sow of slight beginnings to important ends.

The question of abolishing the Irish Lord Lieutenancy and establishing a Royal residence in Ireland, is said to find favor with the English Government.

DON'T MAKE ANY MISTAKE

When you are threatened with consumption or lung troubles and get the wrong kind of emulsion. There is only one perfect pleasant and effective preparation of that life giving substance and it is Miller's Emulsion. There is no bad taste to this preparation. It is compounded on an entirely new principle, by which the vital energy of the liver of the Norwegian cod fish is retained and incorporated with the hypophosphites of lime and soda, making the most potent blood maker known to science. It has saved thousands of young lives and is revolutionizing the old methods of consumption treatment. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In big bottles, 50c. and $1, at all drug stores.

A rotten cause abides no handling.

Fatal Result of Delay

Sickness generally follows in the path of neglect. Don't be reckless, but prudently take a few doses of Scott's Emulsion immediately following exposure to cold. It will save you many painful days and sleepless nights.

Before man made us citizens, great Nature made us men.

Tore His Flesh in Agony.

"I was troubled with blind itching piles for 20 years; was unable to work and tore my flesh in agony. United States and Canadian doctors failed to relieve. Chase's Ointment was a God-send. I am a better man than in 20 years, and am able to work every day." Philip Wallace, blacksmith, Iroquois, Ont. Chase's Ointment cures piles, eczema, and irritant diseases. All druggists, 60c. per box.

A brave man is clear in his discourse and keeps close to truth.

A Forty-Year Old Grievance Removed.

In Bath, Ont., Chase's Kidney Liver Pills are a standard remedy. Joseph Gardner, of this town, suffered for 40 years with indigestion and its ever present accompaniments—constipation and headache. K. & L. Pills are the only remedy that gave him relief. 25c. a box, of all druggists. One pill a dose.

The best hearts, Trim, are ever the bravest, replied my Uncle Toby.

Bad Blood Between Them.

The ever slaving farmer's wife, her delicate sister in the city, suffer more than they care to tell. The dark rings round the eyes, headaches, dizziness, palpitation or rheumatic twinges, betoken a run-down system. The blood is poor, and is a bar to enjoyment of life. Scott's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, strengthens and vitalizes the system, and speedily restores the bloom of health to the cheeks. It cures when all others fail.

The measure of choosing well is whether a man likes what he has chosen.

Rubbing It In.

Never use a liniment for rheumatism, says a high medical authority, Don't rub it in—drive it out. Take something that removes the acid poison from the blood—take something that will improve your digestion and build up the body to the perfection of robust health. That "something" is Scott's Sarsaparilla, a remedy that obtains the best results in the shortest time. $1 of all druggists.

Even from the body's purity the mind receives a secret, sympathetic aid.

AN OLD AND WELL TRIED REMEDY.—MRS. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Is pleasant to taste. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalulalbe. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's SoothingSyrup, and take no other kind. 135

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ar

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
