TAILOR CUT CORSETS

The long crossed silk stitching at the ends of corset bones or steels is termed the "flushing." Its purpose is to prevent the cutting and slipping through of the steels. Flushing to be done properly must be done by hand and the stitches must go through—otherwise it is sham.

Ordinary corsets "flushing" is done by machine, and no machine in existence can do genuine "flushing." If deceit be practised in such a bare faced manner on an exposed part of a corset, what about the quality of the hidden materials—the steels or bones for instance? The celebrated French, tailor-cut, hand-sewed corset, the is "flushed" by hand, and is genuine. It is the lightest, strongest, most comfortable, most fashionable, and best corset made. In all sizes and for all figures. $1 to $30 per pair.

THE ENGLISH NOT PROFANE

Little rough or rude language is used by the English. They even fight without swearing and get very drunk and noisy without employing strong language. They love to chaff and guy each other, and the crowds and the street people who drive horses and peddle goods and hang about the corners are a great deal wittier than most of us give them credit for being, but they seldom resort to bad language. I never heard much of it until I went to Petticoat lane, and I know a woman who has lived here two years and been constantly about town who tells me that in that time she has only heard one oath from an Englishman's lips. The worst word I heard in Petticoat lane was "bloody." That, however, is the worst word I could have heard—in English opinion it is the foulest word there is. I have only heard one man use it and he did not speak it. He was very angry, and he spelled it.

I am telling you this because I know that at home in America we associate it with the English and put it in Englishmen's mouths in our anecdotes, as if it were a matter of course that it should be used to give a local color to an English story. Americans come here and make use of the word for the comic value that they attach to it, and yet I assure my readers that if they tried to think of any really disgusting term they had ever heard and made use of instead they could not more startle or shock these English ears.

English sailors have brought the word "bloody" to our shores—sailors and prizefighters and stablemen, and only such persons cling to it here. What we consider a very much fouler word has a vastly wider circulation, but is not considered as bad as "bloody." All this is very strange and requires a native to explain it, especially as "bloody" is merely the contraction of the oath "by our Lady," which was more or less commonly used in the ancient days when this was a Roman Catholic country.

The people who try to swear without swearing—who in our country say "bully chee" and "by cripes," all use the word "blooming" over here. "I can't very bloomin well make you buy this bloomin thing, but I'll ave a bloomin try at it," is what I heard a street fakir say to a crowd the other day. There is no harm in that at all, and it is much more typically English than the word "bloody," besides being decent.

It is funny what mistakes nations make about one another. Over here the very smart thing in reporting the speech of us Americans is to make us all and always call ourselves "Amurricanes." It may be true of us. This whole nation believes it. But I never heard an American so pronounce the name of our country, and yet I've got a quick linguist's ear, which is a thing the English utterly lack.—Julian Ralph in Providence Journal.

THE RICH RUSSIAN

We were a family of 8, occasionally of 10 or 12 says Prince Kropotkin in The Atlantic, but 50 servants at Moscow, and half as many more in the country, were considered not one too many. Four coachmen to attend a dozen horses, three cooks for the masters and two more for the servants, a dozen men to wait upon us at dinner time—one man, plate in hand, standing behind each person seated at the table—and girls innumerable in the maidservants' room, but how could any one do with less than this?

Besides, the ambition of every landed proprietor was that everything required for his household should be made at home by his "own" men.

"How nicely your piano is always tuned. I suppose Herr Schimmel must be your tuner?" one of the visitors would remark.

To be able to answer, "I have my own piano tuner," was in those times the correct thing.

"What beautiful pastry!" the guests would exclaim when a work of art, composed of ices and pastry, appeared toward the end of the dinner. "Confess, prince, that it comes from Tremble" (the fashionable pastry cook).

"It is my own confectioner, a pupil of Tremble, whom I have allowed to show what he can do," was the reply which elicited general admiration.

To have embroideries, harnesses, furniture—in fact everything—made by one's "own" men was the ideal of the rich and respected landed proprietor.

It seems a dream—I cannot make it clear— That 'twas but yesterday, dear love, that thou wert here,
But one brief day ago felt thy pulsing breath. And this is death.
The world is changed; no, nothing, nothing's right.
My soul is bathed in deepest, darkest night,
A few short hours, and yet the sun's bright ray Cannot transform my darkness into day.

For freedom! Ah, will Cuba ever know How her redemption fills my life with woe? Be brave, O heart, like unto him who gave, As thou, his all, those suffering souls to save.
