For men and women who are weak, when they should be strong; for babies and children who are thin, when they should be fat; for all who get no nourishment from their food. Poor blood is starved blood. kiss, blest if I ain't. And you may as well smile and look pretty, for them's my perquisites from all the new slaveys in this 'ere hestablishment."

"I shall have you turned out," I said, indignantly. "I know you're trespassing; and as for that pipe you are pretending to enjoy, it's turning you perfectly green."

"If I'm green, my dear, it's all on the houtside," he said, with a frightful cockney accent. "And as for havin' me turned out, why you've overshot the mark, my dear, and no mistake."

"Whoever you are, I won't have you calling me 'my dear!' "

"Holghty, toity! The airs these pretty slaveys give themselves, bless their little 'arts. 'Ere, then, at your pretty feet I kneel, and introduce myself as Higgins, born in the poor house, edicated in Gutter university, and at your service."

"Well," I said, "that's very interesting, but I don't see the use of this ceremony, as we shall certainly not come much in each other's way."

"That's all you know about it. I come very much in the way of anybody I take a fancy to, and I've taken a fancy to you, Alice. You don't mind me calling you Alice, do you? You see the missus changes her slaveys so often that I have to name 'em according to their situations, and the name for the parlor maid is Alice."

I assured him he might call me what he liked.

"That's right, Alice," he said, "you won't lose nothin' by bein' civil to me And now good night, my dear; I'll have' that kiss to-morrow, when you don't feel so shy with me."

And the impudent little man, with a horrible contortion of his features turned on his heel and got back on the top of the wall. I went back into the house after this encounter, which made me rather shy of further exploration.

I retreated to the room which had been assigned to me, and remained until my supper was brought up into the work room. The maid Anna bounced in upon me while I was eating.

"Well," she cried, "how do you like solitary confinement, eh? You get your meals in state because Mrs. Ellis is afraid the servants' tales would frighten you away," and she burst into a ringing peal of laughter, in which she was interrupted by her mistress' bell.

"Ta-ta! Shan't see you again to-night, I expect; but—I'll be sure to see you—off in the morning." And with a look of mischief she bowed herself out of the room.

I saw no one else before going to bed except Mrs. Ellis, who seemed rather anxious to be off, afraid, I think that I might insist on leaving the house at once. However, she bid me good night with great cordiality. I meant to lie awake to see if anything mysterious would happen, but being very tired I fell asleep almost immediately, to be awakened by a shriek which brought me out of bed in the twinkling of an eye. I am not strong minded, and was horribly frightened.

But Alice? What was I here for, but to find out what was being done to her? I had to fortify myself with virtuous maxims as I unlocked my door and ran along the corridor. The cries had ceased and instead I heard low moans. There was another sound, too, not so loud, but more inexplicable; a soft swish-swish, as of something rushing through the air and beating against the walls. Alice's door was not locked; there was no light in the room, that terrible swishing sound still went on. Suddenly something flapped violently against my face with a loud screech. As my eyes grew accustomed to the gloom I could faintly see that the air was full of birds, or bats, and even though I felt that this was some trick which had been played on me and Alice I confess I could myself have shrieked aloud as the creatures flapped against my face.

A light I must have. I ran out of the room, leaving the door open. Creeping cautiously back into the room, protecting the candle flutter with my hand, I received another shock. There was no sign of bat, or bird, in the room, and the air was quite still. The windows were shut, nothing had flown past me as I went though the corridor; but in some mysterious way the great flapping, screeching creatures whose wings had made a wind in the room had disappeared, leaving no trace behind them.

It Saved Our Child.

"My little daughter, three and a half year old, suffered three years with Eczema. Her little body was covered with the itching rash, and doctors did no good. Four boxes of Chase's Ointment entirely cured and saved our child. Her skin is clear and not a sign of rash is to be seen." Andrew Aiton, Hartland, N. B. Mr. Aiton is one of thousands benefitted by this unfailing cure for piles and skin diseases.

There could be no better illustration of the fatal facilty for blundering on the part of the Turkish Government than an order issued the latter part of August to all the railway companies in the Empire to substitute Ottoman subjects for all the foreigners in their service, except those who have technical knowledge. As almost all the companies are foreign, it was natural for them to refuse; and they threatened, in case the order was persisted in, to stop all the trains.

Completely Knocked Out.

"I was so much run down I had to give up work, and I felt as if life was not worth living," writes Wm. W. Thompson, Zephyr, Ont. "I took Scott's Sarsaparilla and am now feeling as I did years ago." Scott's Sarsaparilla tones up the entire system, purifies the blood, and eradicates rheumatic and scrofulous poisons. Ask for Scott's and get it.

Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Chase's Pills have gained popularity because they are a specific for the uric acid condition, prevent Bright's disease, cure Rheumatism and all Catarrhal conditions of the Kidneys and Bladder. A FAMOUS MAN!

What His Researches Have Done for the World.

DR. CHASE.

All successful and distinguished men have imitators, and Dr. Chase, the well-known author of Chase's Recipe Book, proved no exception to the rule. Dr. Chase's discoveries have many pretended rivals, but no equals.

Long scientific researches produced Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Chase's Ointment, the first a certain cure for all kidney, liver, stomach, bladder and rheumatic troubles; the latter an absolute specific for chronic and offensive skin diseases. Among his other discoveries were Chase's Catarrh Cure and Chase's Linseed and Turpentine for colds and bronchitis.

During 1895 the Canadian manufacturers, Edmanson, Bates & Co., 45 Lombard street, Toronto, gave away free 500,000 samples of Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and 100,000 samples of Chase's Ointment. The return they brought proved how much they were appreciated. The same free distribution of samples will be continued during 1896. Those at a distance should enclose a 5-cent stamp and also receive a sheet of the latest music in return.

THE BURTON TRAGEDY.

BY LEROY GRIBBER.

Continued

"Who lived here in Mr. Jones' time, ma'am?" I asked Mrs. Ellis, who had just informed me of the manner in which the brewery came into Miss Clarke's possession.

"Nobody, I think, except a caretaker. And so of course, stories go about of ghosts, and that sort of thing."

"And does Miss Clarke think she sees ghosts?" I asked.

"I don't know what she thinks she sees," said Mrs. Ellis, hastily. "I think it is some trouble with her fiance that makes her so depressed."

I remembered Egbert's complaint that Alice was jealous. I had not time, however, for reflections, as Mrs. Ellis asked me whether I could stay at the house that very night, and send for my boxes. I at once assented to the proposal and Mrs. Ellis led me upstairs.

I was shown into a little room overlooking the river and opening into Mrs. Ellis'.

"I don't know how long you'll stay," said that lady, dubiously. "Miss Clarke has a fancy for changing her bedroom, so that any day we are liable to be turned out. I have been moved twice already. This room opposite," she went on, "is where you can do your needlework. We keep the linen in this dresser."

She unlocked a huge piece of furniture in which the linen of a regiment might have been stored, and then saying she was late, left me, saying she must go and dress for dinner. It was a very uncomfortable position for me, and I felt so guilty when Mrs. Ellis had left me that I resolved to confess the deception I had practiced upon her, and with that intention ran down stairs. But I could not see her. Well, if I could not see her I would see Alice, and I re-entered the room and looked out of the window for her.

It was nearly half-past six. Beyond the lawn there was a great space of mingled orchard, which looked neglected but picturesque.

As I hung out of the window I heard the door behind me open and looking round I saw a merry-faced girl with black hair and eyes, shut the door softly and make me a mock courtesy with an expression full of mischief on her pretty features.

"Allow me to introduce myself as Anna," she said. "I'm Miss Clarke's maid, and I only stay because the wages are good and the work light. You, I beg leave to say, won't stay at all. No, not if they give you £100 a year. So now you know."

"But why not?" asked I. "What shall I have to do that's so dreadful?"

"Sleep here," said Anna, solemnly. "They tried it on me once, but never again, oh no! So now I sleep where the rest of the servants do, in the wing on the right there, and at present Miss Clarke and Mrs. Ellis have this floor to themselves. And doesn't poor Mrs. Ellis wish she could come into our wing, that's all."

"But why—why?" I asked. "What is the reason for all this?"

"Oh, you'll find out soon enough," said Anna, mischievously. "Only five girls have tried the place. You'll be a regular heroine if you stay two nights. Here's your tea, ma'am. Ha! ha!"

The girl went off into fits of laughter as a house maid came in with a tray for me, and turning to Anna told her she was "always on the giggle."

"Well," said the maid, "they want some one to giggle for them in this place, I am sure. But treat this young lady well, for she must stay long."

"Hush," said the house maid, "how you do go on."

After drinking my tea, at which the gossipy Anna assisted me, she volunteered to show me over the house. "Come," she said, "they'll be at dinner now."

I followed her with alacrity. She showed me through a series of large, lofty rooms. "What a nice large house," said I in admiration, as I looked out of one of the open windows of a room which Anna said was "Miss Clarke's while the fad lasted."

The river here was no pretty pleasure stream, but a busy highway for large flat barges drawn by puffing tugs. A flat marsh fringed with straggling small houses, ugly and dreary, formed the outlook on the opposite shore. On the right the great body of the brewery could be distinctly seen. "What a pity," I went on, "not to use more of these lovely big rooms."

"Yes," said Anna, "the house is full of wasted space. There is a floor above this which is nothing but an immense attic. There's a splendid view from it, only you can't get up there from the house; you have to go through the door that leads to the works first, and that's kept locked, of course."

A great big attic above. Here, thought I, is where the ghosts collect, and all manner of weird night noises are heard.

"And now I shall have to be off," said Anna, "you won't mind being left alone for a bit, will you?"

I said I did not mind at all, and the girl hurried off.

As soon as I was left alone I returned to the workroom, and again looked out of the window. The sun had sunk lower, but there was still a bright glow in the west. I was hoping that Alice would return to the garden. In a few minutes my wishes were fulfilled. I saw her leave the house slowly with a heavy, listless tread. Running down the staircase and through the hall I followed her. Alice's face, when I caught sight of it, looked ghastly in the cold shade. She was standing still, her hands hanging listlessly down. My heart was beating fast, my eyes were filled with tears, and something seemed to rise in my throat and choke me.

"Alice," I cried out, huskily. "My poor old friend, Alice! Don't you know me? You haven't forgotten me? Alice!"

I held out my arms, not daring to advance, for she looked scared at the sound of my voice. As I finished speaking, however, I made one step forward. With a fearful cry poor Alice turned and ran back into the hous. I did not attempt to follow her this time. I was appalled. Alice was out of her mind. I would never rest until I had discovered who and what had brought it about.

CHAPTER VI.

I walked as far as the wall which ran down to the river path. This wall was almost hidden by a clump of trees, and I stood in the shade of these, looking at the river very thoughtfully.

"Hello, Alice, my girl!" cried a voice above me.

I looked up quickly, and saw what I took for a boy. This figure on the top of the wall, with its feet up, its sallow face peeping at me through the trees.

"What are you doing there?" I asked, angrily.

"I'm looking at you, my dear," was the cool answer, "and when I've looked long enough I'm coming down to hev a

Keep the Chain Free of Dirt.

There is one part of a bicycle to which the ordinary rider does not give enough attention—the chain on his wheel. Most chains are not cleaned often enough. The roads over which the bicyclist rides are covered at all times with fine dust, which gets into the chain and causes more or less friction. When there is no dust there is mud, which is worse than dust.

Every rider has noticed that if he is caught in a shower, and his chain gets wet, the chain runs much harder. That is caused by the dust in the chain being turned to mud by the rain. The mud makes its way into every part of the chain.

The mud works from the chain on to the sprockets and then the bicyclist feels that he isn't getting all the power out of the chain that he should. In that supposition he is correct, because the mud sets up friction between the teeth of the sprocket and the chain.

Oil is the best lubricant for a chain, but not enough riders use it. With the chains exposed as they are at present no lubricant will work well for any length of time. If gear cases were put on wheels a rider would experience none of the difficulties referred to. Gear cases are in high favor in Europe, and why they have not come into general use here is difficult to understand, when one considers their many advantages.

He says that "unable to obtain any relief from other sources, that it was on account of reading the particulars of other cures that his confidence was gained." Two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills were all that were required to complete his cure.

A rich gold discovery is reported to have been made near Grahamstown, Cape Colony.

He was persuaded by James McGarvey, Alliston, livery man, to use Chase's Ointment, which he did, was cured, he has no return of them and highly recommends this Ointment as a sovereign cure for Piles.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Granby Rubbers

It is no wonder that rubbers, which are not the same shape as the boot, should be uncomfortable. It costs money to employ skilled pattern makers but the result is a satisfactory fit. Each year new patterns are added, to fit all the latest shoe-shapes, and Granby Rubbers are always "up-to-date." They are honestly made of pure rubber, thin, light, elastic, durable, extra thick at ball and heel.
