

Buckles Under Heavy Weight

Sacks of grain lie exposed after their weight caused the flooring in this Cincinnati, Ohio, warehouse to collapse. A section of the third floor buckled, took the second floor with it, and then came in part of the building's wall.

Timely Notes

Silver Fox And Mink Farming

The following market report from The Black Fox Magazine and Modern Mink Breeder gives a very good size up of the pelting situation as it is at present. . . . The few mink auctions held in the United States and Canada during the past two months have little market significance. Offerings were light and of only fair quality at best. The total number of skins at any one auction were so small that any comparison could not justly be made. Buy backs and late pelts predominated. As far as mink breeders are concerned the 1953-54 marketing season is over. Practically all of the quality pelts have been sold and there will be no more offered until the new mink come to market in December. The fact that there will be no carry-over into the new season should be a factor of strength for the 1954 pelts. . . .

Recently retail stores have reported a material increase in fur sales. Mink continues to predominate. The reduction of the excise tax has been a great stimulant to the consumer demand. Inventories are low in most all retail stores and manufacturers anticipate a growing volume of business. Fewer full length mink coats have been sold. This has been more than offset by the great increase in the demand for stoles, scarfs, jackets and capes. The excellent consumer advertising of the three large marketing associations is stressing these so-called small furs. Mink continues to dominate fashions in furs. Women in business are now making more money than ever before and these women are greatly interested in the prestige of mink and are financially able to buy it.

The more orderly marketing of mink, which was featured last season, promises to continue. . . . The various auction companies have announced sales dates which do not conflict and give buyers sufficient time to inspect skins. These dates were arranged by auction officials in co-operation with marketing groups during the summer. Foreign buying added great strength to the early sales this season. European buyers came to American auctions and bid prices for choice pelts above those made by the domestic trade. It is hoped that this foreign interest will continue during the coming year. The largest crop (1953) ever produced was and darks. Little can be reported about foxes. There has been considerable favorable publicity for this fur. Light offerings of fresh pelts have sold. There is still a backlog of old skins in storage and until these are disposed of the fox market expected to be sluggish.

Back from a two months tour of Europe Adolph Nussenow, New York broker, reports a pick up in wholesale fur activity in France the past two weeks after a slow September start. Preferences in France, he said, are running similar to those in the United States, with mink and Persian lamb leading sales. He reports wholesale activity in Germany as quite satisfactory but notices that Italy's business is on the dull side. Sweden, he observes, is the most active of the Scandinavian countries with Persian lamb, muskrat and beaver dominating sales. Denmark and Norway are lagging behind Sweden. Persian lamb and other curly goods are best sellers in Denmark.

Canadian Fur Auction Sales Co. (Quebec) Ltd., will hold its next general sale October 27. To be offered are beaver, muskrat, otter and mink. . . . Hudson's Bay Company's auction in Montreal dates have been set as follows: December 6 and December 15, auction sales of ranch mink; January 10, early collections of wild mink, squirrel and ermine.

American mink ranchers are expected to set a new record in production this year, with the total number of standard ranch and mutation mink kits likely to reach 3,000,000. Sharpest increases in production are predicted for sapphires and pastels. There is likely to be a less substantial increase in whites. Declines are expected in standard ranch mink and gunmetal, and little change is foreseen in platinum production. This is the consensus in ranching circles, with the opinions substantiated by the latest report on 1953 mink production, prepared for the National Board of Fur Farm Organizations by Willard B. Sheldon.

son. These are the figures reported by Mr. Sheldon in the September issue of the Black Fox Magazine and Modern Mink Breeder. Kit production in 1953 was 9.9 per cent above the 1952 crop. For the first time in the history of mink ranching, Mr. Sheldon observes, a single type of mutation mink has outnumbered standard ranch mink production, and this trend will continue in 1954. Pastel production in 1953 increased over 44 per cent, reaching a figure of 849,470 kits. Some 734,363 were pelted. Standard or dark ranch mink production declined 22 1/2 per cent to 750,869 kits and 743,326 pelts.

The proportion of all mutations in the total crop was over 71 per cent in 1953 as compared with 61 per cent of the total and pastels of other mutations in order of quantity, was as follows in 1953: Sapphires, 337,652, an increase of 81.9 per cent; Platinum, 156,252, a decline under 1952, though there were more Breath of Spring types, nearly all sold at mid-season. Production this year is expected to be fully as large as last. More mutations in 1953. Gun-metal, 46,775, a decline of 26.6 per cent. White, 34,029, an increase of 69 per cent. In addition, there were 83,462 gunmetal carriers, 200,895 other carriers, and 24,987 miscellaneous mutations.

Mr. Sheldon notes that the mutation crop represented over 82 per cent of the total pelt value of the 1953 kit crop. The average price of all classes of ranch mink pelts for the calendar year—1953—was only $1.21 more than for the average of the same classes for 1952. However, because of there being a larger percentage of mutations in the 1953 crop, and because there were almost a quarter of a million more total pelts in 1953, the pelt value of the 1953 crop figures $14,083,485 more than in 1952, or better than 25 per cent more money.

Libel Suit Against Chambers Dismissed
NEW YORK (AP) — A million dollar libel suit against Whittaker Chambers was dismissed Tuesday in state Supreme Court. . . . Willy Pogany, artist and sculptor, had claimed Chambers falsely and maliciously wrote in his book, "Witness," that the artist was a brother of a Hungarian named Joseph Pogany and that Joseph Pogany was a high-ranking member of the Communist International.

MOSQUITOES

LA PAZ TO COCHABAMBA.

We left La Paz for Cochabamba by airplane on August 27th, 1954 at noon. Shortly after leaving, we were looking down on the great La Paz valley which lies from fifteen hundred to two thousand feet below the level of the Altiplano. In many places the walls of the valley are precipitous, these give shelter to farms that border on the river. The climate is more moderate than on the Altiplano and a number of fruits including some citrus fruit trees were seen. We climbed up and up until we were at over 18,000 ft. to cross the highest range of mountains. The steward offered everyone oxygen, but very few used it. A lady over two seats from me, who had refused it "Blacked out," the gentleman in the seat next to her, called the steward and they worked, using oxygen, for about 15 minutes before she recovered enough to speak.

The terrain below us for most of the way consisted of fairly sharp peaks, that had many eroded gullies down their sides. There were narrow valleys that seemed to be filled with stones and gravel. Occasionally we saw a small stream winding through the gravel and many patches of alkali where water had evaporated. The snow capped Andes Mountains could be seen in the distance. For miles and miles we did not see any path or road nor any trace of a living thing, not even shrubs or grass. The trip was quite rough at times, but the day was fine and we could see great distances.

At Cochabamba there were friends on hand to meet us. There was no immigration or customs to bother about, as our travel was within Bolivia. We did, however, report to the police, which is routine in South America. We arrived in time for afternoon tea at the Cochabamba Seminary, as we became accustomed to the much lower altitude of about 8000 ft. We were entertained at a home with a lovely garden, that had citrus fruits, strawberry plants and flowers and there were hummingbirds in addition to many other beautiful birds.

That evening there was a sand storm, and during the night, thunder and heavy rain, which they said was very unusual, this was followed by cold weather, that is, very cold for Cochabamba. We had expected to go to Rotary Saturday evening but the Rotarians had changed their meeting to Tuesday. We went to the market instead; a new market building is being built, in the meantime the streets for blocks around were filled with people. The sidewalks completely taken up with merchandise spread out all over the place. There were fruits and vegetables, spread out on cloths or piled in heaps in front of the women, who were doing most of the selling. These Quechua women were wearing their characteristic bright coloured dresses, said to consist of six or more skirts, large shawls of many colours and wide-rimmed, stiff, high crowned white hats, with two perpendicular black lines on the right side. Some had shelters erected that were filled with dresses and all kinds of drygoods, including hand-knit garments. A number had boots and shoes for sale, and there were great piles of sandals, made from old rubber car tires; these had holes made in them for thongs and strings to fasten them to the feet. There were those who had second hand parts from all kinds of machines, old straps, pieces of wire, everything from crankshafts to buttons. A lot of it just looked like scrap iron, but we were told that when one failed to get extras anywhere else you could usually get what you were looking for in the market.

On Sunday we drove over the Trans-American Highway to Quillacolla; this is a stony gravel road, very rough with washboard, that is only scraped they said, after each rainy season.
