Teachers Of East Prince Begin Two-Day Convention

Addressing the East Prince Teachers Federation convention which opened in Summerside yesterday morning in the Baptist hall, Mr. Murray Shanks, president of the Federation, delivered a forceful address on the subject of the teaching profession.

"What is wrong with the teaching profession and what makes a person a professional?" he asked. Mr. Shanks went on to say that most professions usually demand a university training or its equivalent. In European countries university degrees and diplomas are prerequisites for training secondary school teachers. In this country, in one year after leaving high school teachers have two weeks practice teaching before taking over actual teaching.

"Would you like?" he asked, "to be operated on by a doctor who had had but two weeks practice? Still we trust our dearest possessions to people who have two weeks or less practice. In some Provinces the two weeks course was believed to be the answer to the teacher shortage but teaching will never be made a profession by lowering the standards. On the contrary it has been the experience of many American states that by increasing the entrance requirements and raising the standards, the number of persons seeking teaching training has increased."

President Shanks said that there is a great move throughout the country to build large regional high schools but no move is made to ensure that these beautiful buildings will have capable and qualified teachers to fill them.

Dwelling further on the matter of teacher shortage he said that many Provinces have tried short range measures as an answer to teacher recruitment. He said that the basic philosophy seems to be that if the requirements for teacher training are reduced then the teacher shortage will disappear. They have been doing it for 15 years, he said, and the teacher shortage is greater than ever.

He said that the only teacher training institutions in Canada that have actually increased their enrollment in full courses are those institutions that have raised and stiffened their entrance requirements.

Quoting Dr. Tait, the director of teacher training in Saskatchewan, he said further "short range measures to procure teachers and hold them in the profession have failed almost everywhere. Some short sighted ways are being suggested to make the present teacher supply go further. Many of these sound appealing to the harrassed tax payer. They offer so much to so many for so little."

President Shanks pointed out professions usually have control of admission requirements and one cannot help noting, he said, that teaching is the only profession which has no control over the training and certification of its members. Full responsibility for this rests with outside authority.

"The problem of providing schooling for our young people in the next ten years is an urgent one," said Mr. Shanks. "It should compel the full use of the vast reservoir of the experience of teachers, not only at the conference level but at the policy making level. Participation as full partners is the surest recognition that teachers are worthy of their responsibilities".

"I submit "he went on" that the control of teacher training and certification should be shared by those concerned, the Department of Education, Teachers Training Institution, Teachers Federation, School Trustees Association."

Summing up, Mr. Shanks said that "until the teacher training institutions are affiliated with the universities and become degree conferring institutions, offering certainly more than six months or a years training, until we have some control over admission requirements, until teachers are paid a decent living wage, we will never have a teaching profession. There seems to be a great lackadaisical attitude toward education. The school is fast becoming a place where parents can get rid of the children for a few hours each day so they can have some peace and quiet around home — nearly everyone you talk to agrees that teachers are underpaid but nobody does anything about it."

He concluded by saying that "If we are going to stay in this business of teaching it is high time that you and I stood up on our hind legs and did a little fighting to help build a real profession, to get out of this position of subordination in which we are at the present."

Committees appointed yesterday were: Resolutions, Donald MacLean, Wendell Phillips, Miss Mary MacLure Nomination, Mrs. Easton, Mrs. Enid Birch, Mrs. Matilda Mugridge. Press, Mr. Francis MacNeill.

Other speakers who yesterday addressed the convention were Mr. Norman Macdonald who spoke on literature in grades 9 and 10. Mr. C. B. Jelly on "Instructing teachers in routine procedure" and Dr. L. W. Shaw, Director of Education.

The convention will continue today with election of officers and other items of business. S

HISTORICAL EXHIBITS AT MISCOUCHE

Objects of historical interest in an exhibit at Miscouche last week including the large cross cut saw, an old one dating back to the first settlements in Miscouche.

A part of the exhibit included an ancient photo of a man and his wife who are said to have built their home with the help of this saw about 1832 - 132 years ago. These ancestors of Urban J. Des-Roches of Miscouche built their home on the property which he now occupies.

The old muzzel-loader shot gun, with its powder horn, bears an inscription or insignia which places it among the oldest guns in the Province today.

The church bell at the end of the table was the first bell in the first church built in Miscouche and summoned people to worship, over roads and by means of transportation vastly different that to which the people of today are accustomed. (Photo by Wotton)

"GAMBLER FROM NATCHEZ"

This action-packed film brings together for the first time on the screen the talents and charm of two of the most popular rising young stars in Hollywood, Dale Robertson and Debra Paget.

Fresh from her starring role Panoramic's "Princess of the Nile," Miss Paget plays the daughter of a riverboat captain portrayed by one of Hollywood's top character actors, Thomas Gomez. Together with her father, Miss Paget tries to aid Dale Robertson, a young cavalry officer to track down the murderers of his gambler father.

Investigating the circumstances of the killing, Robertson discovers that three Southern aristocrats were responsible for his father's death, originally made to look like he was cheating at cards. One of these men, Andre Rivage, ably portrayed by Kevin McCarthy has a sister, Yvette with whom Robertson falls in love, although this affection is strictly one-sided at first. Lisa Daniels, a lovely Hollywood newcomer gives an admirable performance as this "aristocratic flower of the South." In hand-to-hand combat with the three men, Robertson eliminates them one at a time and thus solves the mystery of the crime. Realizing now that she really loves Robertson, Miss Daniels finds it is too late since he has fallen in love with the beautiful Miss Paget.
