The Week at S.D.U.

Since Monday three elections have taken place to determine the president, vice-president and secretary of the St. Dunstan's Amateur Athletic Association. In the first election, Leonard Shea and Simeon Farmer were ahead of John Fisher for the office of president while the five contestants for vice-president were narrowed down to three: Leo McGinn, Alfred Rossiter and Andy MacDonald. The new secretary-treasurer Alton Craig won over Charlie Roche in Monday's election. Wednesday's election saw Leonard Shea emerge with a wide margin over Simeon Farmer while Alfred Rossiter was eliminated leaving the contest to Leo McGinn and Andy MacDonald. Yesterday the vice-presidency was at last decided in favor of Leo McGinn.

The new president Leo Shea, as required by the Constitution, is a member of the incoming Senior class and replaces Pete Dunphy who graduates this month. Alton Craig this year was the efficient secretary of the M.I.D.L. and replaces Jerome Quinn. Leo McGinn is a member of the incoming Sophomore class and last year more than proved his worth in the arduous position of Rink Manager.
Congratulations to the new officers and best wishes for another successful year.

The A.A.A. is, after the students' Union probably the most important student organization on the campus, as under its supervision comes every phase of intramural and extramural sports. This huge task is divided among seven managers in charge of the various athletics. The A.A.A. has grown tremendously in the past ten years or so and now is allotted about 65% of the fees paid to the Students' Union, leaving the remainder to the needs of the six or so other societies on the campus. The executive and the different team members and managers are to be commended on the very economical way in which their expenses are met. In fact the managers are becoming more and more notorious for their stringency! With the huge share of victories and titles brought home this year there is no one who does not agree that their money was well spent and that the amount of honor and prestige won for the players and the College is not to be overlooked.

In a situation of this kind however in which so much of the students' funds go towards athletics, there is always the danger that some other student activity will suffer neglect through the lack of funds. Such has not yet happened to any serious degree, but with our expansion into three intercollegiate sports, the possibilities for an advance of the standards and frequency of publication of the Red and White, for instance, are somewhat limited. St. Dunstan's is a small college of huge accomplishments and with the surge of sports-mindedness there is needed a corresponding impetus in fields other than sports. One of these is expression through writing. It has often been suggested that the quality of the Red and White has declined in the past years and again that if one read one issue of Red and White one reads them all. If this is so it is because Red and White is something we are concerned with three times a year. Also most of the contributions received from year to year are of a serious and down-to-earth practical vein. The thoughts of those few who are anxious to correct the shortcomings of our society. In addition there is badly needed the freer and more creative work, such as would be done by the majority of students who do not or did not contribute. It has been suggested that the Faculty could do much in the way of making the Red and White a more living and intimate field to each and every student, by discussing in class at least those articles connected with their particular work. Of course it could be objected that the material is not of sufficient worth, but it will improve little until Red and White becomes a College effort and means something to each and every one.

Contributions are now being received for the Eugene Macdonald Memorial Hockey Trophy to be presented each year to the winning intramural team. Eugene before his sorrowful and untimely death last fall was an exceptional goalie on the Freshman Intramural team of two years ago and the Sophomore team of last year. The great respect and esteem in which he is held by his classmates and the College generally, are attested to by this memorial to one of the foremost members of the Centennial class.

Until next week and our last "Week" for the year we wish you the best in everything and would leave you with this thought:
"Literacy is less important in itself than the ideas which language conveys to the literate."—The Right Honourable Vincent Massey.

his soldiers, used this very slogan.
Washington, D.C., has 1,000 moslems who will soon have the first Mohammedan style mosque in the United States. Those who have seen the newly constructed build-right out of 'The Arabian Nights'." The traditional call to prayer system and will echo through the fashionable Massachusetts Avenue section of the city.

It's all in the way you look at it. If Chinese names strike you as being funny, you are provincial.
Mississippi, Wigg, Saskatchewan, and hundreds of other place names in Canada and the U.S.A., sound just as "funny" to the Chinese.

How often we hear people say, "Why, I declare all the Chinese look alike."
A recently arrived Chinese student was asked her impression of Canada. She said she liked our country but that all the people looked alike.

The Chinese who display a great deal of agacuity never claimed divine revelation for their classics, but accepted them for what they were—the writings of gifted men who wanted to make the world in which they lived a little better.

A magnetic personality is a great asset to some folk because it enables them to get by on banana oil instead of having to use elbow grease.

Know what the three bells in front of pawnbroker's place of business means? The symbol is derived from the Medici Coat of Arms. Before they were bankers the Medici were doctors so the three round balls were originally intended to suggest pills.

Half of the 22.8 million barrels of flour milled in this country are sold abroad. Rust has taken an average of 10% of the value of all the wheat crop ever produced in Canada.

Just in case you'd like to have a dish of "everlasting stew" (as they serve it in Trinidad), here's the recipe: "Take the meat of as many animals as you can come by.
Chop into small pieces and then add a generous portion of the poisonous yellow sap of the manioc root, plus enough water and meat to make a thick soup. When this concoction is brought to a boil the poison from the deadly manioc root passes away in steam, leaving a dish fit for the inhabitants of the Caribbeans.

One of my first fishing trips, as a youngster, didn't end up as I had anticipated it would. With string for a line and bent pin for a hook, I set out for the little brook that threaded its way across the centre of our farm. Having selected the spot where I knew fish could usually be taken, I dropped the line into the water and then—then, instead of a fish, I saw a strange looking creature, about the size of a cat, swimming under the water, making a beeline for the hook.

Quick as lightning I dropped the line and fled home, to tell mother of the terrible creature I'd seen in our brook.

"That's what comes of small boys fishing alone," mother said.
"They have too much imagination!"

About one month later, we saw the animal again. I say we, because this time I was accompanied by my eldest brother.

"Danie, — Danie — Danie!" I yelled. "See! There's that thing I was telling mother about. We'd better run before it catches us!"

"Keep your shirt on," said brother. "The animal is nothing but a muskrat."
