Cough medicines, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is in greater demand than ever. No preparation for Throat and Lung Troubles is so prompt in its effects, so agreeable to the taste, and so widely known, as this. It is the family medicine in thousands of households.

"I have suffered for years from a bronchial trouble that, whenever I take cold or am exposed to inclement weather, shows itself by a very annoying tickling sensation in the throat and by difficulty in breathing. I have tried a great many remedies, but none does so well as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which always gives prompt relief in returns of my old complaint."—Ernest A. Hepler, Inspector of Public Roads, Parish Terre Bonne, La.

"I consider Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a most important remedy.

For Home Use.

I have tested its curative power, in my family, many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults."—Mrs. E. G. Edgerly, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

"Twenty years ago I was troubled with a disease of the lungs. Doctors afforded me no relief and considered my case hopeless. I then began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, before I had finished one bottle, found relief. I continued to take this medicine until a cure was effected. I believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—Samuel Griggs, Waukegan, Ill.

"Six years ago I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs and soon developed all the alarming symptoms of Consumption. I had a cough, night sweats, bleeding of the lungs, pains in chest and sides, and was so prostrated as to be confined to my bed most of the time. After trying various prescriptions, without benefit, my physician finally determined to give me Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I took it, and the effect was magical. I seemed to rally from the first dose of this medicine, and, after using only three bottles, am as well and sound as ever."—Rodney Johnson, Springfield, Ill.

Quadruple Alliance.

FORMED IN EUROPE AGAINST RUSSIA — THE STANDING ARMIES AND NAVIES OF EUROPE COMPARED—OPINIONS A WAR CORRESPONDENT.

Frederick Villiers, the war correspondent of the London Graphic, is in Montreal. In an interview with a Star reporter, he said:

"You ask me what the prospects are for a war in Europe? I think it is on the cards that there will be no European war for a considerable period now. My reasons for this belief are that there is an understanding between Germany, Austria, Italy, and Britain to that effect. Therefore, I cannot see how any one power or two powers could possibly, in the face of that great alliance, create a disturbance. The only nation that might possibly take up arms is arms would be France. She is so erratic, one never knows what she will do. But I do not apprehend that they will strike for some years yet. The best land army in Europe to-day is that of Germany beyond a doubt. Next to it comes that of Russia, next France. The Italians are much stronger than we imagine, both on sea and land. Their commercial prosperity has been on the increase for many years. They ought really now to be considered a first-class power in Europe. As far as the British land army is concerned, I don't think that they are capable of doing much, as they have not men enough compared with other powers. As far as the Indian contingent is concerned it does not amount to much. You can see in the official reports that it is very small. Moreover, it could not be utilized for purposes outside of India, as, directly a portion of it was drawn from India, Russia would break through Afghanistan. As far as Ireland is concerned whenever there is any difficulty in Ireland against Britain. As an instance, I might mention the case of Batoum, which, according to treaty, was made a free port. But when Parnell began to agitate in Ireland, and the question of Home Rule came up, Russia made that her opportunity to march into Batoum and make it a Russian town. In fact the situation for years has been and still is that as soon as there is the slightest agitation with any of our colonies, Russia is always on the alert. This proves to me that Russia, day and night, has her eyes on India.

RUSSIA ALWAYS BEGINS TO AGITATE

The organization of the British army is simply perfect. Of course there are always a few hitches, but we are marvellous in being able to overcome any difficulties. The British soldier, in the words of Napoleon, never knows when he is beaten. This is the very reason of our success in the desert wars, where we were so outnumbered and handicapped as to water and food. Our soldiers never seemed to think of these difficulties, but went on when others would have fled, appalled by the terrors of the situation.

"The British navy is by far the best in the world, and next to it come the French and Italian. The French navy is pretty nearly sufficient for their purposes, as they have no colonies to defend and have not so large a seaboard. Britain requires a fleet at least three times as large as any European power, to enable her to protect her almost infinite coasts.

"Speaking of the colonies, I must say that the majority of the English people are utterly ignorant about the resources of the colonies,

INCLUDING CANADA.

I am of opinion that every member of Parliament should visit and acquaint himself with the circumstances in the colonies before being allowed to sit in the House and decide on questions appertaining to those colonies. It is ridiculous to hear them talking of things they know nothing about. As to what protection Britain would afford Canada in case of a war of the latter with another nation, I cannot speak. I don't know what Britain would do, her army is so small. The old idea that one British soldier is as good as three of other nations is exploded. To-day the number and equipment are the sole criterion; and though what there is of the British army is as well armed as that of any other nation, her army is small. Her greatest generals are Wolseley first, then Sir Frederick Roberts, then General Buller and General Brackenbury. These men have been all more or less tried, and there is no limit to their capabilities reasonably. We lost one of the smartest officers in General Stewart. He was capable of doing anything. Our Generals can compare with the best in Europe, even with old Moltke. Wolseley follows keenly everything that is done in the science of war. His study is all overhung with maps of every move of the armies and portions of the armies in the Franco-German and other wars, and he has them at his fingers ends.

THE GENERAL SITUATION.

"The general situation of Europe can be summed up like this: Russia is a standing danger to Europe, and the other powers are all looking to the northeast of Europe with fear and apprehension. Russia is a much greater power than we Englishmen are willing to admit. What Russia wants is Constantinople and India. By gaining Constantinople they gain India, as there are only Armenia and Persia to pass, which will offer little difficulty. Once Russia has Turkey, then the Mediterranean will be a nest of Russian corsairs. Italy is as much afraid of such an event as Turkey itself and Britain. In order to be able to lay hands on Constantinople, Russia now follows the policy of keeping Roumania and Servia in a continually unsettled and unsatisfactory condition, so as to have a pretext at any favorable moment to march towards the Turkish capital. She is afraid to risk this now, as all Europe is watching her. But a moment may come when other nations have their attention drawn away, and then Russia will move. But Britain is secure at present owing to the fact that all European nations are showing their teeth to Russia, excepting France, and in the event of a sudden necessity there will always be one chance left, and that is a general conscription."

Mr. Villiers will join the party of the Governor-General on the sixteenth, and will send regular communications to the Graphic as he goes on. He says that he finds so much matter of study here, that he experiences difficulty in making a selection. But he hopes that he will be able to do his work so thoroughly that English people will get a fair idea of Canada and her resources.

Are Your Hens Healthy?

Owing to extreme heat, moisture and other causes, there has been much dullness and disease among poultry the past summer, and especially among chickens and young pullets expected to lay this fall and winter. For this reason it would be a great mistake to kill off all the old hens when the moulting season is at hand and the hens have stopped laying, get fat, and seem to be eating their heads off; because it is a fact that a year old hen, if properly cared for helped in the moulting season to get her new coat quickly so she can be got to laying early, will lay more and better eggs than young pullets, particularly if the pullets are weakened by diarrhœa, cholera, gapes, etc. Many people have learned by experience that Sheridan's Condition Powder given once, daily, in the food, will supply the needed material to strengthen and invigorate sick chickens or moulting hens and get them to laying earlier than anything else on earth. Mrs. Edwin Brown, East Greenwich, R. I., says: "I could not do without Sheridan's Condition Powder when hens are moulting. It is the only thing to keep them healthy. I use it for gapes and diarrhœa, for when chickens are small they often droop and die. To a pint of clabbered milk I add a teaspoonful of the powder, mix well, and let the chicks eat all they will once a day; it does seem to be just what they need, they soon become so vigorous. People laughed at me when I began to use Sheridan's Powder, and I had no idea I should win a premium. They laugh best who laugh last, however. I got more eggs than any of my neighbors, and some of them had over 100 hens." We hatched 66 chickens from 77 eggs, obtained while forcing our hens to lay with your powder; so you can see there was no trouble about eggs hatching." I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House Street, Boston, Mass. (the only makers of Sheridan's Condition Powders), will send, post paid, two 25 cent packs of Powder and their Poultry Raising Guide for 60 cents. The book alone costs 25 cents. For $1.00 five packs of Powder and book; for $1.20 a large 2½ pound can (regular price) and book; six cans $5.00, express prepaid. Send stamps or cash. Interesting testimonials sent free; also, for 5 cents, a sample copy of the best poultry paper published. d6i w1i

Healthfulness of Corn., Celery, &c.

Corn is claimed to be a medicinal as well as a fat producing food. The medicinal effects of corn arise in part from the roughness of the particles gently irritating the surface of the intestines, &c., and in no way can you have the full medicinal properties as from the corn in the ear; green corn is then food and medicine combined. Celery, perhaps contains more medicinal properties than any other plant. It is the American's cure-all, or rather preventive, for they go under the head that prevention is better than cure, and there is a good deal of inconsistency in the average American, and as a rule they are inveterate smokers; they smoke to soothe the nerves, at the same time eat largely of celery to nullify the bad effects of the tobacco upon the nervous system. Celery acts as a gentle laxative, cools the blood, relieves the kidneys, feeds and nourishes the brain and nervous forces and aids materially in the building up of the entire system; it assimilates with other food assisting in its proper digestion. The celebrated Dr. Hall, of New York, advises if you are sick to diet for it, and our advice is not to gulp down quack medicines, but by a judicious observance of the foods best adapted to your requirements, to build up a constitution that will stand.

Gay & Son keep a full supply of Celery, Corn, Cabbage, Pickling Cucumbers, Tomatoes, Fruits, &c, Orders attended to promptly. Send for our wholesale prices. Address

An Admiral's Flag.

The admiral's "flag" is the distinguishing mark of an officer in command of a squadron or fleet of her majesty's ships, who holds the rank of rear admiral, vice admiral or admiral. It is the white flag of England charged with the red cross of St. George. An admiral flies it at the main masthead—that is, in the centre of the conventional three—a vice admiral at the fore top, i. e., the fore or front mast, and a rear admiral at the mizzen top or the mast nearest the stern of a ship. The vice admiral's flag is distinguished by a red ball in the dexter or right upper square of the flag, and that of a rear admiral, by two. The flag with its distinguishing marks is always painted on the boats of a "flagship." Modern ships of the first class, which only have a single, or fighting mast, cannot follow the old rule as to the position of the flag. The distinguishing balls serve the purpose of indicating rank. It may be noted that an admiral of the fleet, a rank which, like that of field marshal in the army, is generally held by retired or non-active officers, hoists the Union Jack "at the main," as the mark of his rank. A flagship is one in which an admiral sails.

An admiral "shifts" his flag when he changes his headquarters from one vessel to another.

"IT goes right to the spot," said the old gentleman, who found great benefit in Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He was right. Derangement of the stomach, liver, and kidneys are more speedily remedied by this medicine than by any other. It reaches the trouble directly.
