

IRON HOUSES.

We attended recently an informal meeting of business men, at the Auction Rooms of N. N. Croft, Court street, Brooklyn, New York, at which Mr. Sexton, the inventor of the iron house, exhibited his system. He constructs the frame work of his buildings entirely of cast iron, in sections, which are made to interlock by very close fitting and locking joints secured by keys. This method of building avoids the labour of drilling and bolting, which has been a great inconvenience in iron buildings. It also allows the work to be taken down and moved at a very little expense. He covers the frame work on the outside with plates of iron, by a similar system of interlocking, without any bolts or other fastenings. The interior is covered with gutta-percha, so as to exclude water under hydraulic pressure. To finish the water-tightness of the joints, he has invented a machine that can perform the work of forty men. The walls are made hollow, and the enclosed space is filled in with a non-combustible composition of beach sand and other substances, so that, as Mr. Sexton says, his fire-house is safe, when finished, a perfect fire-proof safe.

The roofs and floors are made of cast iron frames, resting on cast iron columns, the spaces between being occupied, as in the case of windows, with plates of glass, of any required thickness and transparency. The glass used is not our common glass, but is a new and improved kind, called "patent glass," called malleable glass, from its wonderful property of toughness allowing it to bend freely without breaking. It can be drawn out three times its length, and is as strong and flexible that they are said to be commencing the manufacture of piano and violin strings from this material. Mr. Sexton has also introduced a new kind of string for inspection. It was as small as the E string of a violin, and could be bent around the finger, or tied in a knot apparently as large as a ball.

Plates of this glass being let into the frame work of the floors, the whole is then covered over with a peculiar transparent cement of iron, Section in iron, which is made like our own solid plate of glass. The cost of roofing with this material is seventy-five cents per square foot. The walls inside can be covered with plate glass, and be made as strong as any option of the builder. All the interior ornamentation, such as mantel-pieces, panels, &c., may be of malleable glass, and the same may be used in the style of building are, first, its great cleanness, and the rapidity with which it allows of construction. It effects a saving of one-third the cost of three courses of brick, and every other method. Mr. Sexton stated that he could complete an ordinary dwelling house in forty days. Second, the variety of color and finish that can be obtained at small cost; different combinations of the same pattern. The inventor remarked that in the construction of the whole Crystal Palace, he had used only one hundred and thirty thousand feet of iron, and that the third, the facility with which such a building can be taken down and removed. Fourth, its security from damage by fire or other accidents. He also stated that he had insured his property, and that he had no other insurance. Other incidental advantages are its durability, freedom from vermin, &c.—New York Leader.

REASONABLE ADVICE.—Use the chloride of lime freely if the premises or vicinity of your house is impure. If bed-bugs annoy you, wash your bedstead with a solution of bleached in the white of an egg, and paste it on the wood-work infested. If rats or mice be the pests, use good traps. In poultry yards, use lime freely on the ground, and if you do destroy them in this way, you create bad odors in the house.

A FAITHFUL CLEVERMAN.—An eminent minister at Norwich made a sudden passage in his person; the congregation in some panic fled, crying "breed and attention," and he himself to the man in the gallery. "Has that poor man who is standing behind your pew a gold ring on his finger?" The gentleman turned around and replied "I believe not, sir!" "Oh, then, I suppose that is the reason he won't have a seal!" The gentleman turned round and said "I have a gold ring on his hand, and his pew nearly near!"

INFALLIBLE RECIPES.—If ever you wish to get rid of a shirt full of your own sweat, just undertake to put an Irishman and his wife when they are exchanging irons.

HOPE, HEAR.—A foreigner, speaking of the House of Commons, says: "So difficult is it for any man to get through within its walls, that the impatient members are obliged to be calling out, 'Hear! Hear! Hear!'"

An old gentleman always on the alert for the latest news from the Baltic deck, made the usual inquiry of a wag. "The latest news from the Baltic," replied the other, "is, that the fleet is in statu quo." "Ah, how do you do, Cromstedt?" asked the innocent old soul. "In short ladies and gentlemen," said an overpowered orator, "I can only say—I beg leave to add—and I desire to assure you—that I wish I had a window in my bosom, that I might see the emporium of my heart."—"Yonder boy in the gallery?" "I presume you refer to the Society like shaded silk, must be visible in all situations, or its colours will decrease us."

New National Motto.—"England expects every man to pay his duty."

Notice to Travellers.

It has become an established fact that accidents will happen notwithstanding the care and attention of travellers. Explosions will take place, bridges will be left open, and care run of the track as usual. It is therefore, in the interest of travellers, that they should be provided with a reliable and safe means of protection. The public may rely upon an efficient cure of the various diseases by using the Resolvent.

The Mexican Mustang Liniment.

Upon such occasions, it is available! The wonderful effects of this liniment have been proved by induced many, who have tried it, to always carry a bottle of it with them when they are travelling. Frequent tests have proved it to be efficacious in curing Rheumatism, Pains, Sprains, Dislocations, &c. Also Spavin, Ring-bone, Scatches, &c. It is also used for the cure of Horses and other animals. It is external in its application, and we GUARANTEE it to cure PAINFULLY in every case. Many Physicians are so because they can depend upon it as their patients.

Remedy and Laxative Coughs.

Say they will have it, and will not be satisfied without it, after giving it a fair trial. Therefore say to travellers upon highways and by-ways everywhere, that this liniment is becoming generally introduced throughout the United States, British Possessions, and all the Colonies, &c. It is the best of the cars at any Station without beholding the gay banner of the "Mustang."
