Drugs are expensive. Sometimes they are more expensive than need be. And sometimes they are not so reliable as they ought to be. There was a time when the prices of drugs were away up—too high altogether. That is not the case now. The Apothecaries Hall changed that some time ago. You can get prescriptions from pure drugs at the proper prices—no fancy profits. You can get all my reliable special remedies; they've been tried and found effective.
The price—the main thing—will be found right in every case.

THE DAILY EXAMINER
JULY 29, 1899.
CONSUMPTION.

The report of Sir Herbert Maxwell, M. P., F. R. S., and Dr. Pye Smith, F. R. S., the delegates of the British Government at the International Congress on Tuberculosis, has lately been issued as a Parliamentary paper. Dr. Pye-Smith adds a memorandum on the medical aspect of the results of the congress. After giving, in some details the most important conclusions which were recognized—that consumption and other tubercular diseases are caused by the presence and multiplication of the specific bacillus discovered by Professor Koch; that tuberculosis, as a condition directly transmitted by inheritance, is extremely rare; and that phthisis, or pulmonary tuberculosis, in particular, is not catching—Dr. Pye-Smith goes on to describe the following practical points in the prevention of tuberculosis as a widespread and destructive disease which were inculcated by various speakers at the congress:—

A.—The primary importance of free ventilation and wholesome and abundant food. Improvement in the dwellings and the food of the poorer class in this class in this country, and their increasing cleanliness and sobriety, have not only diminished sickness generally, but directly reduced the number of deaths from consumption until the mortality from this cause is less in London than in any other large city.

B.—The prevention of infection of the lungs by the bacillus of tubercle depends chiefly on rational treatment of the sputa of consumptive patients, or rather, for practical purposes, of the sputa of all those affected with cough or expectoration. The phlegm should never be deposited on the ground or on a handkerchief where it can dry up; it should be kept moist until it can be destroyed by heat, and the vessel used to receive it should contain phenol, or some other antiseptic solution.

C.—The prevention of infection by tuberculous milk may be accomplished either by boiling all milk given as food to children or by inspection of dairies, so as to prevent tuberculous milk cows being used.

D.—The prevention of infection by infection by meat can be secured by careful and thorough inspection of carcasses or by diagnostic testing of cattle with tuberculin. This, the only undoubtedly useful application of the so-called tuberculin, has the drawback that after the effect of the inoculation has passed off a tuberculous animal becomes immune to it for a time, and so may be passed as healthy. (It is said that cattle suspected of tubercle are thus rendered immune to tubercular test before being sent over the French frontier.)

Though the question of the treatment of phthisis was only a supplementary part of the work of congress, Dr. Pye-Smith gives the following facts, which are, he says, "important for the people as well as their governors to be aware of":—

A. That tuberculosis disease of the bones and joints, of the glands and skin and abdomen, though dangerous, is not incurable, and, by the modern methods of operative medicine, is in most cases successfully cured.

B. That tuberculosis of the lungs (phthisis or consumption) is frequently cured, and probably more often now than formerly. (Carschmann, of Leipzig, fourth day of congress.)

C. That there is no specific drug which has direct influence upon consumption, but many, both old and new, have valuable effects upon its complications. (On the Action of the New Tuberculin, see Briger's paper, on the second day of congress, and Dr. C. T. Williams in the R. Med. Ch. Trans. for the present year.)

D. That abundant food, particularly of a fatty nature and a life in the open air, are no less valuable in the treatment than in the prevention of phthisis and that the hospitals and asylums for providing these essentials, which are now numerous in Germany, and far from rare in England, Austria and Hungary, France, and the United States, are of essential value. That the open air treatment has been long known and practiced in the United Kingdom was handsomely acknowledged by Professor Von Leoden (first day of congress). Compare papers by Kaurin (Norway), Westhoven (Ludwigshaven), J. R. Walters (London), Desider Kuthy (Budapest), Schmid (Switzerland), Domeneo (Spain), fourth day.

E. That the influence of climate, altitude, temperature, and dryness of the air and soil of travelling, and of sea voyages has been very differently estimated at different periods, and that, while each is in various degrees important, popular opinion probably exaggerates their power. (Hermann Weber of London, fourth day of congress.)

F. That the prospect of improved success in the treatment of tuberculosis in general, and of consumption in particular by the advance of pathology and the progress of surgery and medicine, is a hopeful one, almost as hopeful as that of limiting the spread of the disease by preventive measures.
These are points to be noted—particularly by those who have a tendency towards consumption. Under the whole, the report encourages the belief that consumption can be prevented, and in the early stage, cured.

ESTEEMED EXCHANGES.

Huntington Gleaner (Liberal): "The Premier and his colleagues may not realize it, but the enormous expenditure they are forcing on the country is ruining the Liberal party. The worst enemies of that party are not to be found on the opposition, but on the Government benches. The ministers who, by their actions, are giving the lie to the old policy of the Liberal party in favor of bringing the expenditure within the income, in favor of making Canada a cheap country to live in, will yet have to answer for blasting the splendid prospects with which the Liberals came into office. He is no true Liberal who keeps silence at a time such as this, and does not urge an immediate and complete reversal of policy."

DR. AYEPS

On the Way to School.

"My mother's always cross in the morning," said the straw-haired boy, rattling half a lath along the picket fence. "She came down this mornin' and went for the girl because the breakfast table wasn't set and it ain't supposed to be set till after she comes down."
"I know the way it is," said the red-headed boy. "Women is always that way more nor less."
"Then she went for me," continued the straw-haired youth, "hit me a clip on the side of the head because I hadn't got my hair brushed."
"Wouldn't that jar you?" exclaimed the red-headed youth.
"Then she sailed into pop. Said he never did nothing but read the newspaper when he was home. He said there wasn't much else to do. She said that was just like him all over, and started to cry. Pop looks at her for a moment, then he sort o' gives it up and grabs his hat. 'Guess I'll get my breakfast down town to-day,' he says."
"I guess he was pretty mad just the same," said the red-headed youth.
"I guess so," said his friend with the lath.
"What was the matter with her," asked the red head.
"Darned if I know," said the other, "she ain't so bad only in the mornin'."
The good lady was simply suffering with Nervous Dyspepsia which is always more pronounced in the morning. Doid's Dyspepsia Tablets would have cured her. She should have taken one after every meal. Her digestion would then have been perfect and her nerves would have been relaxed and comfortable. Her temper would have been angelic both morning and evening, and Doid's Dyspepsia Tablets would have only cost her fifty cents a box at any drug store.

Bankrupt Hayti.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, July 27.—At a meeting of the creditors of the government of Hayti, held yesterday here, the minister of finance submitted a proposition for the consolidation by the interior debt of the Island, which amounts to about $7,000,000. The suggested contemplates the suspension of payment on the principal for one year and during that time there shall be a reduction of 86 cents on the export duty on coffee. The creditors retired without having reached a decision, but appeared to be unfavorably disposed towards the proposition of the minister of finance. There will be another meeting on Thursday, at which a definite understanding may be reached. The financial situation is regarded as critical.

The farmer who owns one hundred acres of land, clear of debt and well stocked is the most independent man in Canada today. This is the deliberate opinion of the manager of a large western Ontario loan company, who was asked by a Globe correspondent as to the condition of a farming community.

A business man is not the most patient creature in the world. He cannot wait to hear any long drawn-out story of the cause of his ailment. He doesn't care two straws about a fine spun theory of how he should treat himself. He may be predisposed to scrofula or consumption. "That," he will tell you "has nothing to do with the case." He wants to be well. If he can't be cured, write out a prescription and send in your bill. So, here is the first part of the proposition.
