OUR GRAND DISPLAY
—OF—
SPRING CLOTHING
AND FURNISHINGS
IS VERY TEMPTING.

The Custom Tailoring Department is full of Neat, Nobby and Reliable Goods.

The Men's Department is loaded with an immense display of New Spring Suits. The Hat Department—well, everybody understands that our Hat Department has advantages over the smaller establishments that place it at the head, and secures for it the bulk of the trade. We are displaying the largest variety of Spring Styles of Hats ever shown, and include all the popular shapes.
The Boys' Department is unquestionably the best and most attractive in the city. The Furnishing Goods Department is not only well stocked with all that is solid and staple, but contains much that is choice and novel.

No doubt about it. Ours is the largest and best selected stock ever seen in this city,—not only largest in quantity, but largest in variety of shapes,—largest in variety of materials,—largest in correct styles,—largest in every way. What more could we say, unless it be that OUR PRICES ARE RIGHT,—RELIABLE, HONEST.

THOMAS ALLEY.
April 11, 1885—2aw & wky

not got Dinah's gift, nor her spirit; and she's seen that, and she thought it right to set th' example o' submitting, for she's not held from other sorts o' teaching. And I agree with her and approve o' what she did.

Seth was silent. This was a standing subject of difference rarely alluded to, and Dinah, wishing to quit it at once, said: 'Didst remember, Adam, to speak to Colonel Donnithorne the words my uncle and aunt intrusted to thee?'

'Yes; and he's going to the Hall Farm with Mr. Irwine the day after to-morrow. Mr. Irwine came in while we were talking about it, and he would have it as the Colonel must see nobody but thee to-morrow; he said—and he's in the right of it—as it'll be bad for him t' have his feelings stirred with seeing many people ere after another. 'We must get you strong and hearty,' he said, 'that's the first thing to be done, Arthur, and then you shall have your own way. But I shall keep you under your old tutor's thumb till then.' Mr. Irwine's fine and joyful at having him home again.'

Adam was silent a little while, and then said: 'It was very cutting when we first saw one another. He'd never heard about poor Betty till Mr. Irwine met him in London, for the letters missed him on his journey. The first thing he said to me, when we'd got hold o' one another's hands, was, 'I could never do anything for her, Adam—she lived long enough for all the suffering—and I'd thought so of the time when I might do something for her. But you told me the truth when you said to me once, 'There's a sort of wrong that can never be made up for.''

'Why, there's Mr. and Mrs. Poyser coming in at the yard gate,' said Seth. 'So there is,' said Dinah. 'Run, Lisbeth, run to meet Aunt Poyser. Come in, Adam, and rest; it has been a hard day for thee.'

[THE END.]

Canadians as Allies.

Captain Edward Pellister thus writes to the London Morning Post: 'It is usual when a country expects war with a brave, powerful and somewhat unscrupulous enemy, to seek alliance with other powers, to subsidise them, increase their naval and military establishments, and in fact, put forth every resource to secure not only their good will, but the greatest fighting power possible. The exertions of England in this direction during the wars of the First Napoleon are too well known to need comment. The question is, what can now be done on those lines? Where is the power prepared to assist England in a life or death struggle with a powerful foe? I fail to see any outside the empire, and what is more, I do not regret it. Have we not Canada, Australia, and India to back us? All they require is for England not to hesitate, but to take action towards them as she would take action towards the Turks—viz., to subsidise them and help them to put forth all their strength. I am not beating the air. My letter, which appeared in the Morning Post of the 7th ult., on the Canadian Militia Act, proved that the Canadians have carefully prepared the ground for England to act, and there should be no shyness or false modesty on the part of the latter. To commence with, England might at once form a Canadian navy out of the 40,000 splendid seamen of Canada. She should also raise six regiments of Canadian guards and rifles. It should be remembered that such a steamer as the Oregon, now an English cruiser, could run from Plymouth to Quebec in eight days; and that by the great strategic railway the troops, guns, and stores she carried would be delivered at the admiralty dockyard in the Pacific in six days more. Let this be compared with the time it now takes to get our Pacific dock and coaling station. This railway, constructed at such enormous cost to Canada, runs throughout the British territory, and will be completed next August. I believe a great war will beat the British Empire into a compact and most powerful alliance for defence on true military and naval principles. As it is, there is much to be done. I repeat, action is required. Do not let us wait till the storm is at its height to commence what ought to be now in course of active arrangement.'

SAYS an Upper Canadian exchange: 'That target practice will develop good shots for active service notwithstanding its manifest imperfections, is shown by the prominent notice taken of the skill of the Mitchell Brothers at Batouche. In the fight of Sunday we read that Colston, the youngest of the brothers, who belong to the 90th Rifles, dropped a rebel off the roof of a church, which he had chosen as a point of vantage, while the Winnipeg Sun correspondent recounts that Thomas, a staff-sergeant in the 10th Grenadiers, silenced a rifle pit across the river, making splendid long range shots.'

If you have a piece of fine machinery to mend that you know cannot be mended in any other shop on P. E. Island, just carry it to Brown and ask him when he can have it done, for he can make any piece of machinery that ever was made by the hands of man. Brown on the Athenaeum corner.
