Athenians Distrust the Sultan.

LONDON, May 25.—The Athens correspondent of the Times says that the intentions of the Sultan are greatly distrusted here and it is believed that it is his policy to avoid negotiations for peace through the powers because he wants Edhem Pasha to march to Athens.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL.

The Cabinet and the Tariff.

OTTAWA, May 25.—The cabinet was in session yesterday trying to agree on the features in dispute in the tariff amendments. There is great want of harmony in respect to some of the proposed amendments. Hon. Mr. Fielding is under bonds to move the House into committee today and seems to be sorry for it.

Probably the first two days will be occupied with a discussion of the preferential clauses.

THE "ISLANDER" AGAIN.

Wins First Prize at Kingston.

Congratulations by Governor Howland.

KINGSTON, Ont., May 25.—Ivan McKinnon, of Charlottetown, won first prize in the bicycle races here yesterday and was heartily congratulated by Governor Howland, of Prince Edward Island.

Dining Room

Where the walls and ceilings are made dainty and attractive by our unique designs and rich and beautiful coloring in wall papers, is an incentive to a failing appetite. At no time of the year does your room need a new dress as much as when Spring comes out in her new garb and shames the dingy room where Winter has left its impress in smoke and dust. Look at our new and lovely stock of wall papers.

QUEEN BESS' GHOST.

A GRENADEER OFFICER SAYS HE SAW IT IN WINDSOR CASTLE.

Queen Elizabeth's ghost has recently been seen walking in the library of Windsor Castle in broad daylight. To be more exact, a Lieut. in the Grenadier Guards, whose connections are highly respectable, asserts that he saw a female figure in black where no living person could be, and the librarian at Windsor says that his description tallies with that of the apparition of the Virgin Queen who haunts that part of the castle. The story was first told in Le Petit Journal of Paris, and on the London Daily Mail, investigating the truth of it the following extraordinary facts came out:

The officer is Lieut. A. St. Leger Glyn, a grandson of the first Lord Wolverton, who was a member of the banking house of Glyn, Mills & Currie and a nephew of Dr. Carr Glyn, the new Bishop of Peterborough. He is 27 years of age, the son of a soldier, and is described as a healthy, matter-of-fact young man. He was sitting in the library of Windsor Castle one afternoon reading a history of Dorsetshire, when he became aware of some one passing into the inner library. He looked up and saw a female figure in black, with black lace on the head falling to the shoulders. He did not pay much attention to it, thinking it was some one reading in the inner room. Soon after, as it was 4 o'clock, an attendant came to close the library. Lieut. Glyn asked who the lady working in the other room was, and the attendant answered that there was no one else in the library. Lieut. Glyn insisted that a lady had just walked across the inner room.

"Then where can she be?" asked the attendant. "She must have gone out of a door in the corner," said the Lieut. "But there is no door," answered the man. Lieut. Glyn thought no more about it, but the attendant reported the matter to Mr. Holmes, the librarian, who asked the officer to describe the figure, and then told him that he had seen the apparition of Queen Elizabeth. He said that there was records that this apparition haunted the rooms, but that Lieut. Glyn was the only man that had seen it in modern times. Since then Mr. Holmes has spent much time in the library, day and night, in the hope of seeing the ghost. Lieut. Glyn has been questioned about the matter by the Dean of Windsor and several members of the Royal family.

Mr. Holmes showed the scene of the apparition to the Daily Mail's reporter. The chair occupied by Lieut. Glyn is on the east side of the first room in the library. In front of it is a large globe, and beyond a few steps lead up into a gallery, the sides of which are lined with books, with windows on the left and a series of bays on the right, the windows of which look out upon the terrace.

"At the far end of the gallery is a turret two windows of which looking on the west, make a broad space of light, against which any figure traversing the gallery would be sharply silhouetted. On the south side of the gallery—which was built by Queen Elizabeth, and used by her as a picture gallery in which she was accustomed to walk, and when she deviled, or reflected upon, those masterpieces of statecraft which have made her reputation what it is—stands a fine chimney piece, over which a bust of the 'Virgin Queen' looks down somewhat severely upon the spot where her shade has been so recently seen."

Here it is that Lieut. Glyn saw the apparition, which passed from him along the gallery turned quick to the right, and disappeared into the bay, from which in former times a staircase led to the terrace where Queen Elizabeth used to promenade. The Dean of Windsor is ready to believe that Lieut. Glyn saw something supernatural, but he doubts that it was the Virgin Queen. He believes more strongly in the apparition some years ago of King Charles I., whose spirit is said to visit a house in the Canons close, opposite St. George's Chapel one June 26. The last person to whom the ghost made a manifestation was Mrs. Boyd Carpenter, wife of the Bishop of Ripon, who occupied the house as a Canon of Windsor, between 1882 and 1884. On June 26, late at night, while she was reading in her bedroom, waiting for her husband to come up, she heard steps approaching in the passage to the room; saw the door open, and the door slowly open, but nobody appeared. After a while the door was closed again, and she heard steps receding in the corridor. When her husband got upstairs she told him what had happened, and he recollected that it was the night on which the Royal Martyr was supposed to walk in that house.

LONG before the discovery of South America by the Spaniards, the aborigines used and highly valued the Coca Leaf as a medicinal agent, but it has not been until recent years that its true value has become universally known and appreciated. Those who have used
