

This Little Piggy Went To Market - Slammer

DON'T do a double - take if you see a picture of pigs climbing stairs for their feed. It's just one more way to produce pork with more lean and less fat, carried out in a study carried out by the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture.

The secret? The pigs had to climb stairs built at a 90 degree angle to reach their feed, which was purposely located on raised platforms. They ate with their front feet on the platforms, hind legs reaching on the stairs.

The food had been made differently, too, thus limiting their intake and, you guessed it, lean cuts to reach their feed, which was purposely located on raised platforms. They ate with their front feet on the platforms, hind legs reaching on the stairs.

Pat reducing had been accomplished by self - limited eating and more exercise. Enough said!

CBC Revises Operations In 2 Cities

OTTAWA (CP)—A reorganization of network operations at Toronto and Montreal has been announced by the CBC.

President Alphonse Ouellet said the revision resulted in part from recommendations of the Alcaso royal commission on government organization and also out of a need to co-ordinate programming of news and public affairs.

Top post in the new setup goes to Robert W. McGill, 48, who becomes assistant general manager for English networks. This raises out the post of director of English networks held since its creation in 1958 by A. K. Morrow.

The CBC announcement said Mr. Morrow will leave his new job at the head office here early in 1963. His new duties were not specified.

Marcel L. Munro, 52, becomes director of television, also a new post. William H. Hogg, chief news editor who has been with the CBC for 23 years, becomes director of news and public affairs. Donald J. Macdonald, who succeeded Mr. Hogg as chief news editor while Reeves Hargrave was in Toronto, will succeed Mr. Hogg as chief news editor while Reeves Hargrave was in Toronto.

These appointments all involve the CBC's English network work centres in Toronto. Those for the French network operations at Montreal will be announced in a few weeks.
