

Viet Nam War Is Rough On Women And Children

By JOHN T. WHEELER
 DA NANG, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. marines are schooled to kill under fire. And in South Viet Nam they are under orders to try to win over villagers who—freely or under duress—harbor the Viet Cong guerrillas.

Women and children sometimes are caught in the middle. The same problem may beset other American combat troops as they become more deeply involved. This anti-Viet Cong war has long been called primarily a political struggle for loyalty of the people rather than a massed military operation for conquest of territory.

This week marines teamed with South Vietnamese troops to overrun the Viet Cong-dominated village of Chan Son, 10 miles south of Da Nang, the big U.S. air base 380 miles northeast of the capital of Saigon. Among 25 persons they killed were a woman and four children.

As it turned out, the marines didn't burn those particular huts, since they did not go back into the village. But many others have been burned. Some are set off with phosphorus rockets, others with cigarette lighters, matches, grenades and flame throwers.

a major Viet Cong force, destroyed it and then pulled back to the main base. U.S. troops so far have failed to come up with an explanation of one such battle.

If American perimeters are to expand as planned, some day these villages will be behind American and South Vietnamese forward positions.

The French found in the Indochina war that village hatred and apathy turned their forward positions into isolated outposts subject to a attack from any direction. An control faltered and collapsed outside Hanoi, now capital of North Viet Nam, Communist battalions submerged isolated strong points one after another.

Dr. Sylvester Drabbit appeared at a public hearing in Frobisher Bay, N.W.T., to address a government-appointed advisory commission studying the development of government in the Northwest Territories.

He was quoted to have described remarks made by Miss LaMarsh at Frobisher Bay last year as "a dough head talking, not a leader."

Dr. H. A. Proctor, the department's director of medical services, said Monday he has asked Dr. Drabbit to make a report on the matter and describe the circumstances under which the remarks were made.

Dr. Proctor said he is not attempting to interfere "with the entitlement of any citizen to sound off." But this depended on whether Dr. Drabbit had been appearing in any official capacity as a civil servant.

Opening lead — Jack of diamonds.

The element of luck determines the outcome of many a contract, but declarer's method of play can sometimes overcome bad luck and change what appears to be a losing cause into a winning one.

Let's say you're playing this hand at four hearts and West leads a diamond. The possible losers are two diamonds, a spade and a heart, so all your thoughts are devoted towards saving one or more of these tricks.

You have to assume a heart loser at the start, without a heart loser you have ten sure tricks. The problem therefore resolves itself into saving one of the other losers.

One way of playing the hand is to win the diamond with the ace, cash the A-K of hearts (hoping the queen will fall), cash the A-K of clubs, and then ruff a club (hoping to find the suit divided 3-3, in which case you can discard a loser on the ten of clubs).

This method of play, while certainly reasonable, results in going down one when the clubs turn out to be divided 4-2. Eventually, you lose four tricks.

There is a better method of play which makes the contract. It covers the possibility that the clubs are divided 4-2, and, in that event, is a vast improvement.

Win the diamond with the ace, play a club to the king, a heart to the ace, and follow with a club to the ace. Now you ruff a club with the nine.

If West overruffs you make the hand, so let's assume he discards something. West's failure to overruff should not fool you, because it is possible for him to have the queen and yet decide to discard.

Your proper play now is a low heart, since this play guarantees the contract come what may. The best opponents can then do is take the queen of hearts and two diamonds, after which you establish dummy's fifth club for a discard. You have two sure entries to dummy which make this possible.

 is LONGFELLOW.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
