

Cardinal Manning on England's Greatness.

We are a vast people, and a wise and understanding people, too. We have taught the world the manufacture of machinery; we have taught the world the application of physical science to the industries of the world; we have taught the nations to use steam by land and by sea; we cover the whole ocean and all its seas by our commerce and our carrying trade. We are a great people, and a great empire. So was Rome once; and so was Spain a little while ago. Have we a perpetuity for our imperial greatness? Is there no worm at the root, and is not the drunkenness that is spreading among the millions—is not that worse than any worm at the root? Can any man be a Christian, can any man be a citizen, can any man be a member of the Commonwealth and not have not only a shame, but a fear, when he sees these things? There was a time when the port of Rome had quays of marble—of the most costly marbles in Egypt and the East; when great galleys full of wealth were moored along those quays. What is it now? The river is choked by sand; the quays are gone; the wreck of those marbles is hidden; the mud of Tiber has covered all its greatness. Why should not the mouth of the Tyne one day be so? Human things are all mutable, and the day may come, when our busy city of Newcastle may lie like the port of Rome, when Tyneside, with all its wealth and all its activity, may lie dead and dormant. As surely it is righteousness that exalteth the nation, and there can be no righteousness without temperance. Temperance is government. When the people are temperate they can govern themselves. The time has come, then, to stay this evil by all the might and all the wisdom we possess: to stand between the living and the dead, and stay the pestilence, lest the hour should come when the judgement should fall, because we have not known the day of our visitation.

Amusements for Children.

Children have a strange way of amusing themselves sometimes. I happened to be in a room the other day where two little girls were playing. The one was 'laid out' on the floor, and the other was bending over her. In answer to my query as to what they were playing at, the elder informed me, laughingly, that they were 'playing dead.' I thought this rather an unusual game for children to play at, so watched them. As I have said, one was 'laid out' upon the floor, her red dress of soft crimson wool was stretched around her like the petals of a rose, of which she was the heart; the laughing blue eyes were tightly shut, and the dimpled smile at the corners of the rosy mouth did its best to resolve itself into the quiet likeness of the marble sleep. Then the other child became the mourner, and the two children were 'playing dead.' Happy, holy childhood, so unstained and pure that the grim terror of humanity is to them but as the sunshine and the flowers, and the skeleton myth of our manhood becomes in their hands not a plaything for babes. Are not our cemeteries full of such children, who have only laid down there to sleep, to wake up to look upon the sweet-faced angel of the resurrection morn, and laugh as they tell him that they have been 'playing dead?'

"Medicinal" Purposes.

To judge from the very large quantity of strong drink sold by the Halton druggists as "medicine" one is led to conclude that the physicians of that county place as high an estimate on the medical virtues of whiskey as did the Highland guide in the following story. An English tourist, when traveling in an out-of-the-way parts of the Highlands, which seemed entirely shut out by lochs and mountains from the rest of the world, asked his guide what they did for want of a doctor when any of the inhabitants of the glen fell sick.

"We'll shut give her a dram," replied the guide. "But if the dram does no good, what do you do then?" said the tourist. "We will then give her two drams," was the answer. "And if two drams won't cure the patient, what then?" inquired the traveler. "We will give her one dram more," replied the Highlander. "But if that does no good what will you do next?" "If three drams will not cure her she'll no be worth a savin'," was the guide's final reply.

The Duty of Husband's

The first duty of husbands is to sympathize with their wives in all their cares and labors. Men are apt to forget, in their perplexities and annoyances of business, that home cares are annoying, and try the strength and patience of their wives. They come home expecting sympathy and attention, but are too apt to have none to give. A single kindly word or look, that tells his thoughts of her and her troubles, would lift a weight of care from her heart. Secondly—husbands should make confidants of their wives, consulting them on their plans and prospects, and especially on their troubles and embarrassments. A woman's intuition is often better than all his shrewdness and wisdom; and all her ready sympathy and interest is a powerful aid to his efforts for their mutual welfare.

Thirdly—Men should show their love for wives in constant attention, in theiranner of treating them, and in the thousand and one trifling offices of affection which may be hardly noticeable, but which makes all the difference between a life of sad and undignified longing, and chery, happy existence.

Above all, men should beware of treating their wives with rudeness and incivility, as if they were the only persons not entitled to their consideration and respect. They should think of their tender feelings, and their need of sympathy, and never let the fire of love go out, or cease to show that the flame is burning with unabated fervor.

BETTER FRIEND THAN HE KNEW.—"Never! I speak to him again, never!" said the man in the tweed suit, as he shut his teeth together.

"Oh, come now, he's your best friend," replied the one with the white plug hat.

"He can't be. He had a party at his house, and never invited me."

"That proves his friendship beyond question. He had invited no less than twelve of your creditors, and he realized what your position would be."

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs; none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me." HORACE FAIRBROTHER, Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Group.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude?" Sincerely yours, 120 West 128th St., New York, May 10, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effective remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried." A. J. CRANE, Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH W. WALDEN, Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles." E. BRADSHAW, Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.
