pany sponsoring the program to which you object or the channel broadcasting it will welcome advice. If you feel that further steps should be taken, women's clubs have done a remarkable job in improving the tone of programs in general, and children's programs in particular. If you are sure your 5-year-old watches only those programs intended for her age group, you'll find constant improvement in the entertainment provided for her. The status of television varies so widely across the country that it's impossible to make a statement about programs in one part of the country that will be true of other sections. Though I don't have young children in my own household, I frequently watch TV with my small nephews, and I have been impressed most favourably with the programs I've seen. A year or so ago—perhaps even a few months ago—the situation was not so healthy, but the general state of today's TV is considerably better than were earlier efforts. In order to maintain this state of affairs, or to improve it, when necessary, constant vigilance on the part of parents is necessary. When something offends you, write a note of constructive criticism to your local station; be assured your comments will be given consideration.

DEAR MISS DIX: Although my boy friend phones me two or three times a day, and sees me every night, I can't believe that he really loves me. Sometimes he says things about other girls to make me jealous: I guess that's why I doubt him.

Phyllis D. ANSWER: He certainly seems to be in love with you, in spite of his teasing. If you stop showing him you are angered by it, his talk of other girls will cease. Try a little indifference on this particular subject.

At this point the chestnuts may be flavored with 2 or 3 more tbsps. of brandy, curacao kirsch, etc.

Put chestnuts through a ricer. Let them fall lightly onto a large plate into a mound. If necessary to touch them, do so lightly or they will mash. Whip until stiff 1 cup heavy cream. — and you might as well do them first as last? "But," with a merry grin, "I'd rather 'last'!" And for us, it was last of June — last of "lay-lacs" and apple-bloom. And July the ruby-month had come. Along its days of enchantment how, and where shall we work?

"Father, where shall I work today?" And my love flowed warm and free. Then He pointed me toward a tiny spot. And said, "Tend that for me."

I answered quickly, "Oh, no not that!" Why no one would ever see, and topping with sweetened whipped cream.

In that little place for Thee." And the word He spoke, it was not stern. He answered me tenderly: "Ah... search that heart of thine: Art thou working for them or Me? Nazareth was a little place, And so was Galilee."

pleas increase, but there was a great increase in the number of convictions — from 58 per cent to 83 per cent — by both court and jury. It is felt that the increase in convictions was due to the confidence both the court and jury had in the truth shown about the condition of the driver by these chemical tests and their value in backing up other types of evidence. Moreover, the number of cases dismissed for lack of evidence decreased from 22 per cent to none when chemical test evidence was introduced. In general, the over-all rate of convictions for driving while intoxicated rose from 55 to 93 per cent.

Certainly in view of our nationwide automobile slaughter with its alarming increase in self-defense more communities everywhere should seriously consider the use of chemical test evidence in drunken driver charges. Also, for those who may be innocent of the charge, it is better to have a scientific test than just an "opinion."

Burned-out Liner Moved To Dry-Dock

LIVERPOOL, England (Reuters) After lying crippled for 17 months on the muddy bottom of Gladstone dock here, the burned-out liner Empress of Canada sailed again Thursday, but only into drydock. It took four tugs 75 minutes to tow the 20,300-ton hulk of the former Canadian Pacific Steamships luxury vessel on the 440-yard voyage.

The Empress burned and capsized here Jan. 25, 1953. Since then, a salvage crew has been working to get her seaworthy again.

Thursday's move to the drydock brought one of the greatest salvage operations — it has cost about $1,000,000 to date — in maritime history near to completion. Capt. W. R. Colbeck, who is in charge of the salvage crew, said remaining repairs on the hull should be finished within 10 days. Then an inspector must pass the ship as seaworthy before prospective buyers look her over. He said shipping firms from Belgium, Italy and other European countries are interested in purchasing the Empress. So are British scrap dealers.
