New Zealanders Here Search For Relatives

New Zealanders with Prince Edward Island in their heritage are currently visiting in Charlottetown.

They are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wyatt of Auckland, who have travelled over 9,000 miles to look up relatives.

Mrs. Wyatt's grandfather, Ronald MacDonald, emigrated from P.E.I. to New Zealand during the gold rush of 1859.

Her paternal grandmother was an Islander. One of her three daughters of a Captain Nowlan, she married Ronald MacDonald when her family arrived in New Zealand.

Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt were met in Halifax by a cousin, Rev. Francis MacDonald, and were greeted by Dr. Gus MacDonald on their arrival in Charlottetown.

RELATED TO LT-GOV. Mrs. Wyatt is also related to Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. W. J. MacDonald, and to Mrs. Bill Brown through the Nowlan side of her family.

The Wyatts reported that when they left New Zealand, it was their winter, with temperatures at 40 degrees.

Before returning to their home, the Wyatts will visit the World's Fair in New York and attend a Lions' convention in Toronto.

Scargill, the president of the organization, is at left. He is from the University of Alberta. With him are, from left, Dr. R. J. Gregg, University of British Columbia; and Prof. E. Marchheimer, University of Alberta (Edmonton). The CLA was one of five "learned societies" meeting yesterday in Charlottetown.

Alberta Professor Elected To Head Linguistic Ass'n

M. H. Scargill of the University of Alberta was elected 1964-65 president of the Canadian Linguistic Association, whose annual meeting was held here Sunday and yesterday.

A total of 40 to 50 men and women, teachers and experts in language from across Canada, attended the meeting.

Jean Darbinet, University of Laval, was elected vice-president. Rex Wilson, Royal Military College, Kingston, secretary-treasurer, and J. Wiewers, University of Toronto, was re-elected editor of the Linguistic Journal. J. P. Vany of the University of Montreal is past president.

Presented during the session were 17 original papers, prepared from extensive research, and representing work not previously done.

Emile Seaton, University of Montreal, spoke on Belgian linguistics. Gaston Dulong, Laval University, on variations in the French used in Quebec and in Acadia. A third paper was presented by Gaston St. Pierre, St. Jean Royal Military College.

Other speakers and topics included Jean Darbinet, the use of specific and general words. W. N. Lilienowicz, McGill University, a dictionary of Pashian's language, and Roman Bolman, a comparison of the Russian and French languages.

Norman Baifour Levin, Howard University, gave a phonetic study of Buba, an African negro language, and Raymond C. Gagnon, department of Northern affairs, spoke on the spatial relations and patterns of localities in Eskimo.

A case history of urban social dialects was given in separate papers by Raven J. Davies, University of Chicago, and William Austin and Alma Lee Davis, both of the Illinois Institute of Technology.

Charles B. Craie, Vancouver, spoke on the language of Canadian hantooke zailing. Louis Gerald Kelly, Laval, on the phonetics of New Zealand English, and Brother Leopold Tallon, University of Moncton on the case for and against dialogue texts in a second language. Howard B. Seaton, University of Alberta, dealt with the use of computers in establishing a list of verbal categories.

Pierre H. Thomas, Laval, presented a paper on social concepts, familiar and ceremonial forms and John D. A. Weddowson, Memorial University, on items of a central Newfoundland dialect.

The meeting ended with a reception by Lieutenant-Governor W. J. MacDonald and a dinner, both held at Dalvay-by-the-Sea.

Four Clubs Denied Permits Under New Liquor Laws

Four clubs in the Charlottetown area have been refused temporary licenses following more than two weeks of negotiations since the new liquor control regulations went into effect on June 1.

Each club had entered application at that time for issue of a permit, without which no liquor dispensing establishment can operate.

Spokesmen from the clubs — the Rod and Gun, the Sportman's, the Horse and Sulky, and the Canteen Club — have indicated that no reasons for the delayed refusals were given in the P.E.I. Temperance Commission.

Under the new regulations the commission, refuse to grant a license "without assigning any reason therefor."

GIVEN NO REASON
Lorne Perry, operator of the Sportman's Club, said yesterday that he had asked the commission why his application had been denied, and that he "was given no reason." He went on to say that he was willing to cooperate in any way to qualify for a license, adding that he was even willing to turn the club over to the membership with "no strings attached."

He was of the opinion that members would like to have a social club, "the same as others, such as the golf and curling club."

Earlier Mr. Perry had presented a brief to the commission giving reasons why he believed the application for a license should be accepted.

The Rod and Gun Club "does not know where to go from here," according to Jack Brown. This club has, however, been open for the past 10 days. Dances are planned and members can use the recreational facilities provided by the club which has 600 members, most of whom, said Mr. Brown, "can not afford to belong to the other type of club."
