China's Young Red Guards Seen New Wine, Old Bottles

By JOHN RODERICK
TOKYO (AP)—China's young Red Guards are new wine in old bottles.

Young volunteers, wearing red headbands and carrying pikes, served the Red Army in its fight against the Nationalist armies of Chiang Kai-shek about three decades ago.

The Red Guard wear red armbands. And they fight what they call anti-Communist party elements in the purge now sweeping Red China.

No one knows how many Red Guards there are now. But it is apparent their numbers are increasing throughout the country. So far, their activities have been confined to the big cities. Their next move will be to the countryside.

Now made up of middle school, high school and university students, they probably will be enlarged to include other young revolutionaries. One thing is unquestionable: They sprang up Aug. 18 and indulged in a series of unexpectedly spontaneous acts, including violence and coercion.

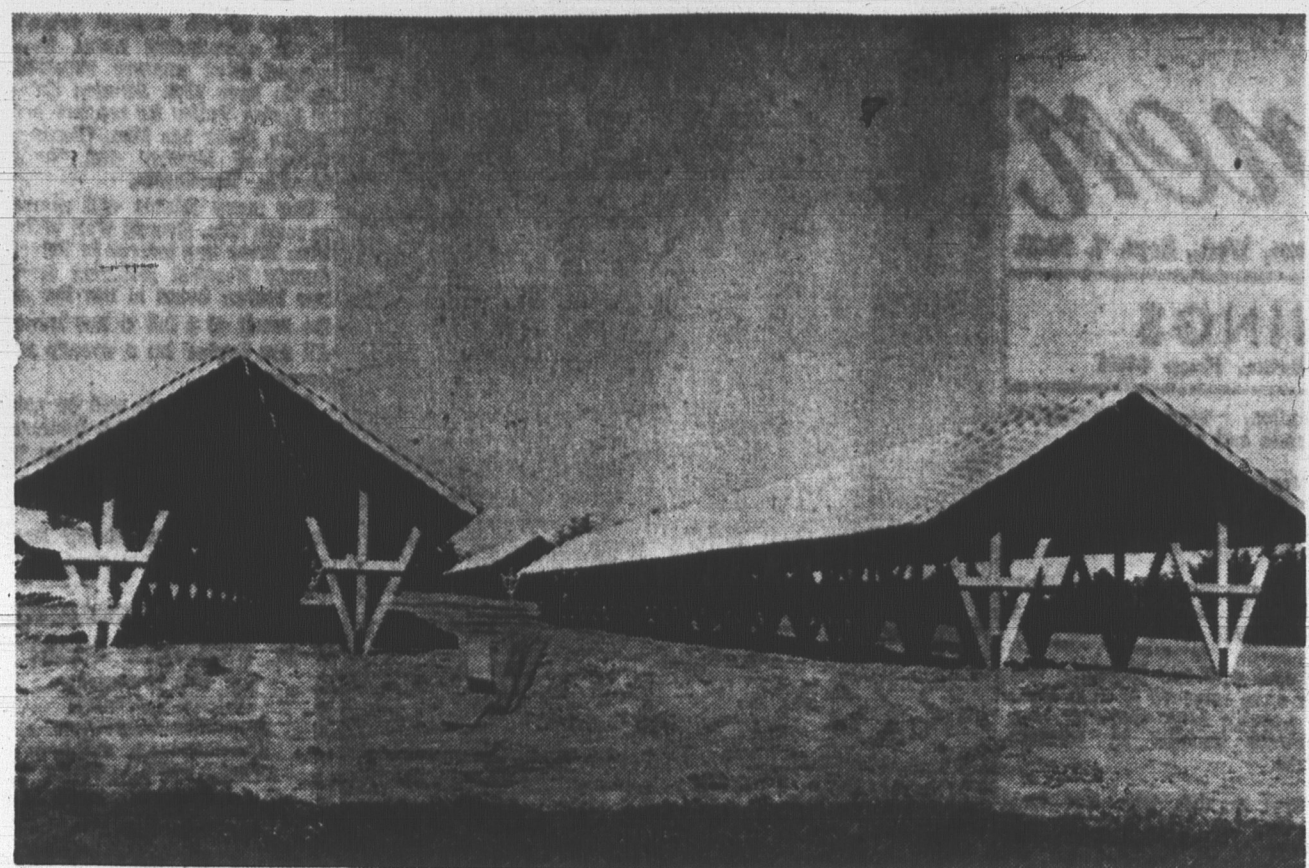

LAYS DOWN LAW
To put them back under control, Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung and Defence Minister Lin Biao, directing China's current anti-party purge, called 500,000 of them together last week to lay down the law: No force, no coercion. The response has been immediate. The lid of authority was clamped on even more tightly during the weekend as Lin became their "commander-in-chief."

As "shock forces" of the purge, the Red Guards can be expected to become the mouthpieces of the Communist leadership. They will be permitted to change street names, to attack anti-party individuals already marked out for purging, to advance some youthful, new ideas.

But when they conflict with higher policy, they will be brought up short. Mao and Lin without question were disturbed at the prospect that they might emerge—as they seemed to be doing—as a force of their own, with power which could ultimately become dangerous.

The adolescent immaturity of the Red Guards, who want to abolish red lights because they mean halt rather than go, to prohibit walking on the right side of the road and to abolish cancellation of postage stamps bearing Mao's likeness, must have embarrassed the regime. Charges from European bloc Communists that the Communist movement is being made ridiculous may have had effect.

CONSTRUCTION UNDERWAY

Burnt Point mink farms, now under construction, will have several shelters as above. The ranch owned by

Jens Moe Inc. and Norwegian interests will be under the guidance of a mink rancher from Norway. 3000 mink will be housed here starting early this fall. The shelters are nearing completion and are being built by William Whiteaway Construction of Dover, P.E.I.

Shortage Of Skilled Help Is Reported From Manitoba

WINNIPEG (CP)—An aggravating shortage of skilled workers is driving Manitoba businessmen abroad in an attempt to recruit employees for their plant.

While the October junket is planned to meet a pressing need, Mr. Spivak says he hopes it will open a channel for immigrants for future years.

"In many ways it will be a question of Manitoba getting a bigger share of the immigrants already coming here (to Canada)," he says.

It's not just a question of wages—although that is an important thing. It's a question of wages versus cost of living, plus other things the community has to offer.

He says the long-range program will continue after the October drive in the hopes of assessing the over-all requirements and acquainting federal immigration officers with the provincial plan.

Assets for Winnipeg, in the eyes of European workers, is its Royal Winnipeg Ballet, the Manitoba Theatre Centre and other planned cultural activities.

Immigrants coming to Manitoba will secure their passage through federal loans and will be reimbursed equally by their employer and provincial government over a two-year period.

Employers must provide a grant equal to one month's salary to the immigrant worker, provide temporary lodging and give assistance in finding a permanent dwelling accommodation.

Under the passage loan plan, the employer repays the federal treasury 40 per cent of the loan after one year and pay another 10 per cent after the second year when the provincial government will make its 20 per cent payment. After the third year, the provincial government will retire the loan.

"This is a long range program we are embarking on," says Mr. Spivak and adds that he expects it to be highly successful.

ASSASSINATION

Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith—whose white minority regime has depended on South African economic support since it seized independence from Britain last November—looked pale when expressing deep shock in the Parliament in Salisbury. He moved the adjournment of the House as a mark of respect.

Portugal, another friend of South Africa, said Verwoerd's death was a criminal act which aroused the deepest indignation and condemnation.

Arnold Smith of Canada, Commonwealth secretary-general, said: "Meaningless violence and assassination are unlikely to solve the political problems of South Africa."

Edward Heath, leader of Britain's Conservative opposition, said he deeply disagreed with Verwoerd's pursuit of apartheid, but deplored "this barbarous murder."

SEEN AS WARNING
British Liberal Leader Jo Grimmond commented: "Clearly the regime has driven white men to a violence of this kind. This should surely be a warning to all those who hope to run autocratic regimes in Africa."

Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore, attending the London Commonwealth conference, commented: "This is very sad, but if you run machines like that, this is part of the risk."

Milton Obote, president of Uganda, declared: "I think it is a very bad thing to solve political problems through assassination, and I regret his death."

The prime minister of Gambia, Sir Dawda Jawara, expressed sympathy for the South African people and added: "I can only hope that the new leader of the South African government will steer South Africa away from a policy which can only be described as disastrous."

PEOPLE NUBBED
South Africans were numbed by the sudden loss of their leader. The country's biggest chain of movie theatres was closed Tuesday night, and soccer matches, sports events and social occasions were cancelled. Newspapers brought out special editions with huge headlines, and all regular radio programs were cancelled.

Sir De Villiers Graaf, leader of the main opposition United Party, said: "Dr. Verwoerd's integrity and sincerity will be respected and the manner of his going will be deplored as long as decent South Africans dwell in this land."

HALIFAX (CP)—The weather office says cloudy skies and showers were general throughout the Maritimes late Tuesday evening. Fog patches lay along the coasts of the Bay of Fundy and the Atlantic Shores of Nova Scotia.

Somewhat drier air will begin to spread into the Maritimes early today but clearing will be gradual. Temperatures are expected to be much the same as Tuesday in most regions.

Mostly sunny weather is expected Thursday.

Labor Board Meeting

The Labor Relations Board will meet tonight at 7:30 to discuss the application of two unions for certification.

Local Union 721 C of the International Union of Operating Engineers will present their application for certification as sole bargaining agent for certain employees of four Island farms.

The application of 721 C is being contested on nine grounds by one of the firms and Local 721 is being contested on 11 grounds by two of the firms.

Counsel for the employers is Alan K. Scales while the union attorney is D. Frank Sigsworth. The Board will convene under the chairmanship of Labor Relations Board Chairman, J.J. Revell.

South Africa's multi-racial Progressive party, described the assassination as "one of the most ghastly shocks I have experienced."

The Johannesburg Stock Exchange closed early as a mark of respect soon after the assassination and before the effects could be absorbed.

On the London exchange, the news started a slide in gold shares, with heavy selling and losses reported on some issues.

The West German government condemned the violence of the assassination and expressed sympathy in a brief statement, and the Dutch government said it had learned of the "callous murder" with abhorrence.

The African National Congress, a South African exile group based in Algiers, said the assassination would help the morale of guerrilla fighters in the South African countryside and of those who had been suffering at the hands of the Verwoerd regime. It said it would increase confusion among the republic's whites.

LIFE MEMBERS

Life memberships were presented to William Knox and Everett Buchanan, Montague, recently. The presentations were made at a dinner held in the Legion home, Montague, last week. Most citizens will recognize them as the standard bearers during Legion parades, during the past number of years. Both had served in the 1914-18 war. Mr. Knox is possibly the only member of the old contemplables in this province. While Mr. Buchanan also had a distinguished record.

Wilson to pledge that there will be no recognition of Rhodesian independence without majority rule, thus assuring that black Rhodesia eventually will get control.

Informants said the Wilson speech did not provide this pledge, although Wilson reiterated his support of his six principles which implicitly endorsed majority rule since Britain would not agree to any settlement which was not supported by Rhodesians as a whole.

BLOCKBUSTER

though some, such as Prime Minister Forbes Burnham of Guyana, suggested merely that the violence was "interesting."

There is no doubt the Verwoerd death has introduced a new issue in the Commonwealth meeting.

As the Commonwealth conference opened in Marlborough House, a delicate tactical manoeuvre took place involving the conference chairmanship.

Wilson, as host, acts as chairman but he expressed willingness to step down during the Rhodesian debate to remove any hint of British ambiguity.

There had been speculation that Pearson would replace him temporarily.

EXPRESS CONFIDENCE
But after Malaysian Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman appealed with delegates not to break up the Commonwealth, several members said they had complete confidence in Wilson's impartiality and asked him to remain in the chair.

Canada's Arnold Smith, who as Commonwealth secretary-general became the conference spokesman, later announced because there was no opposition, the decision to keep Wilson in the chair was unanimous.

Smith is convinced there still is danger of a Commonwealth breakup.

Montague Fire Chief Appointed

MONTAGUE — R. R. Beck, was appointed chief of the Montague Fire Brigade at the regular monthly meeting of the brigade held last evening in the council chambers. The appointment of a new chief was made necessary due to the resignation of Chief D. H. Coffin who has taken on the position of acting provincial fire marshal.

Mr. Beck has been secretary of the Montague brigade for a number of years, while Mr. Coffin has been chief of the Montague department for about 17 years.

Mr. Beck's appointment now requires the approval of the council and will be dealt with at the next meeting of the council to be held on Monday next. The appointment of an assistant chief and a new secretary was left over to the next monthly meeting of the fire brigade.

During the business portion of the meeting a decision to have firemen contact residents of the Montague school district in person to collect the annual dues for out of town protection was reached. It was also noted that a member or so was over the age limit and would be replaced.
