The tow which started last Wednesday, was accomplished through gales up to 90 miles an hour.

Representatives of the ship's agents in New York greeted the Greek-owned Adamas as she docked. She was completely blacked out because of the lack of fuel for generators. Only two feeble red oil lamps were swinging from the mast.

FUEL SHORTAGE

The Captain radioed last Monday that his ship, which encountered extremely rough weather, had only 24 hours fuel remaining in the tanks.

The freighter was en route from Kobe, Japan, in ballast and was to be placed in drydock on arrival here for repainting and cleaning.

Salt Assistance Plan Outlined

Machinery for the processing of claims from individual fishermen under the government-sponsored salt assistance program has been set up in the Maritimes and the necessary forms for distribution to fishermen have been sent to fisheries offices in all districts. The announcement was made by the Federal Department of Fisheries in Halifax.

Under the salt assistance program, the government will reimburse fishermen 50 per cent of the laid down cost of salt used in their 1955 production of certain types of fish and under specified conditions. Details of what claims may be made, applications for payment and other information about the scheme may now be obtained from any fisheries officer in the Maritimes area.

Payment will not be made on salt used in products that have been — or will be — exported to the United States.

Briefly payment will be made on all salt used in 1955 for the production of light, heavy or wet salted cod, haddock, hake, pollock and cusk (except pickled or green salted which has been or will be exported to the U. S. A.); bloaters, pickled or dry salted alewives, pickled split herring or mackerel, and pickled turbot, salmon and shad.

A second group of products on which payment will be made provided they have not or will not be exported to the United States includes light (slack) salted soft dried cod, pickled or green salted cod, haddock, hake, pollock and cusk either to be sold as such or to be used in the production of boneless or semi-boneless fish; herring which has been scotch cured, vinegar cured, pickled headless, pickled filleted, or smoked boneless; vinegar cured alewives; dried salted squid; and other similar products.

Indian Tells Of Wild Ride With Body Of Girl

TIMAGAMI, Ont. (CP) — A 21-year-old Timagami youth told a coroner's jury Friday of a panic-striken ride through the night with the body of a girl beside him in a half-ton truck.

Albert Lalonde was testifying at the inquest into the death of Grace Beaucage, 21-year-old Indian girl whose body was found 16 days after she was last seen at a dance with Lalonde.

The jury returned a verdict saying the girl died Oct. 17 or 18 from skull fractures received when she jumped from a moving vehicle driven by Lalonde.

A rider to the verdict said Lalonde was negligent in not stopping his vehicle as soon as Miss Beaucage opened the door.

JUMPED FROM TRUCK

Lalonde said he met Miss Beaucage at a dance in Timagami Oct. 17. He took his father's half ton truck and drove a short distance south on Highway 1. The couple parked and apparently Miss Beaucage did not agree to his advances. He turned the truck around and was driving up a grade near the road leading to the Beaucage home.

"She said she was going to jump —I went tense-then she jumped out."

Lalonde said he stopped the truck and coasted back. He said he picked her up and there was blood coming from her mouth and the back of her head.

He said that he was driving 35 or 40 miles an hour when she jumped.

Lalonde said he drive north in a panic and could recall little of the 75 miles drive to where he had taken Grace to Rouyn in northwestern Quebec. He said that the girl went into the washroom of a bar and never came back to his table. The same day he went to the provincial police at Timagami and told them the same story.

Cpl. Bob Purdy of the Timagami provincial police detachment said that Lalonde stuck to his story until Oct. 27.

New Delhi Servants In Demand For Living Wage

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — New Delhi servants, some of the best-trained and worst-paid in the world, for the first time have formed a union and are demanding a living wage and paid vacations.

About 20,000 of Delhi's 100,000 domestic servants have joined the union. Their demands, by Western standards, are modest. They want a minimum wage roughly the equivalent of $1.40 a week, with room and board. A "room" usually means only a mat on the floor to sleep on. "Board" means two helpings of rice or wheat-cakes a day with some beans.

They are also asking for an 11-hour working day, one day off a week, and a two-week vacation with pay each year. Nearly all of them are men, since Indian women go into domestic service only as "ayahs", to look after children.

Servants are at present so cheap and plentiful in India that even the most poorly paid clerk's family manages to have oone. He will probably be a 10-year-old boy, younger son of a peasant family in the hills, who has no future on the land and is sent off to one of the big cities to earn his own living in service.

Dressed in a ragged turban and over-size cast-offs of his master, this grubby urchin is a willing slave for 24 hours of the day for his meagre keep and perhaps 70 cents a week pocket money, some of which he probably sends home to his family.

For this, he will, cook, polish and dust, scrub the floors and wash the dishes, serve at table and even mind the baby.

At the other end of the scale are the aristocrats among servants, those who work for embassies, for foreighn businessmen or for ministers and senior government officials. They earn princely wages of between $2.80 and $8.40 a week and pad about their work in spotless white turbans and starched coats, belted with gold-braided sashes.

The ragged little slaves at the lower end of the scale are too timorous and too ignorant to join the union. The servant aristocrats at the top end are too superior and in any case consider themselves well paid. But a large group in between the two extremes is determined to win better pay and living standards for themselves.

Agreed Charges Deals Are Being Stepped Up

By JOHN LEBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — A developing change in a segment of Canada's freight-rate structure is being stepped up in pace.

It's the application of the controversial system of agreed charges, whereby the railways cut rates for individual shippers in return for a guaranteed part of their annual traffic.

The railways have used this method more and more in recent years—and particularly in the last few months—to cope with toughening competition, notably from growing long-distance truck haulage.

REVENUE INCREASE

Though the revenue from agreed charges is still only a small fraction of the railways' $1,000,000,000-a-year freight intake, it is estimated at least to have tripled over the last four years.

Four or five years ago, the term "agreed charges" was virtually unknown to anyone except the railways and a relative handful of freight rate experts. Since then the mushrooming use of the t que has made it a household in parliamentary debate an brought it under the scrutiny royal commission.

Two relatively-unrelated fa have brought it into promin

1. A 1951 decision of Parlia to extend to the interior of we Canada a share in the low "t continental" freight rates bet the East and the British Colu coast, depressed by water com tion. Parliament passed the called "1 1-3 rule" saying that freight tolls between the East western interior points may nc more than 1 1-3 the coast r

2. A surge in long-haul high transport, partly stimulated by strike-impelled railway shutd of 1950.

The railways discovered could beat the 1 1-3 rule by neg ating agreed charge contracts consignees on the west co avoiding the necessity of cut rates for the Prairies. A trial c fought bitterly by Prairie grou found the lines upheld by Board of Transport Commissi ers.

RECOVER BUSINESS

The same process of negotiati low rates with individual shippe enabled the railroads to recover considerable amount of east-west business they had lost to t trucks. And before long they we taking away from the trucks bu ness that originally travelled ov the highway.

Protests from various shippe against this type of rate-maki led last year to the appointme of a royal commission to inves gate. Far from recommending th the railways be restricted, t commission proposed legislation make it easier to negotiate agree charges.

Royal Winter Fair Closes

TORONTO (CP)—The 27th edition of the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair closed Saturday night with a promise from Finance Minister Walter Harris that the federal government will assist expansion plans for the world's largest indoor agricultural exhibition.

Before a capacity audience in the Coliseum, which seats about 7,500, Mr. Harris said it would be "short-sighted" on the part of the Canadian taxpayer not to assist the fair's development.

Expansion plans for the Royal were announced by C.S. McKee, general manager, earlier in the eight-day exhibition.

Mr. McKee said the fair directors hoped to increase facilities by 50 per cent in the next two years in a $3,000,000 expansion project.

The province of Ontario and the City of Toronto, he said, have already promised to contribute $1,000,00 each. Mr. Harris' pledge of federal aid last Saturday assured a quick start to the building project.

Already covering 26 acres, the expansion project will add about 13 more acres to the fair.

Fish Stick Output Now Being Doubled

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's fish stick industry, main foreign supplier of raw material for United States factories, is more than doubling output of its finished product this year.

The fish stick, which first appeared in the New England states late in 1952 and won admirers at a phenomenal rate, is being hailed as the biggest development to hit the fishing industry in 200 years.
