and charitable designs, began to assemble and as the weather became very fine, a goodly number soon spread themselves over the selected ground and amused themselves by scrutinzing the Tables now groaning under a load of good things.

Nor was the scene incapable of bearing the strictest scutiny,even from an eye of taste, for, in the first place, the ground itself had been admirably chosen. This spot, forming a portion of the Lawn attached to Government House, had, by the kindness of His Excellency Sir Dominic, Daly been appropriated to the purpose for that day, and was, really, well adapted to the character of a Fete Champetre, being embowered in trees, with a carpet of green sward spread over an undulating surface.

Before the arrival of the viands, a magnificent tent lined with the flags of friendly nations had been erected under the directions of Commander R. B. Pearse, of H. M. S. Arab—and, not only bore testimony to the tastefulness, and willingness to oblige, so proverbial among our British seamen, but added elegance and grace to a scene that nature had adorned with its own proper beauties.

And if art concurred with nature, thus far, to please the eye, it was not wanting in its efforts to please both eye and palate at the tables.

These, four in number, splendid in appearance garnished with befitting ornaments, and enriched with delicacies, formed an attraction which many could not resist, tho' the pocket suffered; but, as every one had gone prepared to help the good object, few were averse to receiving some remuneration, in the way of a treat, for themselves or the young ones who flocked around. And so, cakes and jellies and pine apples and ices and pastry, strawberries and sweeties dissppeared gradually, yet surely, as the evening hours came on—and, what with music, and conversation, and promenading, the evening itself passed off, and, with it, the assemblage, and, with them the contents of the tables, until there was "left not a wreck behind."

Among the assemblage we noticed His Excellency with Lady Daly and family—the officers of H. M. S. Arab—and many persons from the country—and it was admitted on all hands that the display was, in every point of view-most creditable to our young City, and especially to the Ladies who exerted themselves so indefatigably in the cause of Charity.

We understand that a sum of about £100 was realized.

HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION.

The Horticultural Society's exhibition, came off on Wednesday last at Government House. The show of flowers was not quite as good as might have been, or as we have seen it on previous occasions. The vegetables were highly creditable to the exhibition.

The day was fine, and the spectators who were numerous enjoyed themselves in promenading round the grounds of Government House listning to the strains of the Amateur band, led by Capt. Lobban.

We subjoin a list of the prizes.
