

Relations With State Biggest Medical Problem

EDMONTON (CP)—Dr. Renaud Lemieux of Quebec City says the most important single issue now before Canada's medical profession "concerns the future relation of the physician to the state."
The retiring president of the Canadian Medical Association told the annual meeting Thursday that the annual meeting Thursday that "all the signs suggest that the practice of medicine is going to have a closer relation to government, both at the national and the provincial levels."
This new relationship "has hardened in some countries into an open conflict between the two," Dr. Lemieux said.

In the United Kingdom, government had refused to grant the just claims of the profession. There were troubles in France. Belgian doctors had "managed to avoid the worst features of a plan which would have done nothing to maintain the standard of practice."
This new relationship "has hardened in some countries into an open conflict between the two," Dr. Lemieux said.

RIFT WITH GOVERNMENTS
"In Sweden and various countries of South America there also have been sharp differences of opinion between our medical conferees and governments anxious to promote so-called social security without giving thought to the quality of practice involved."

The bidding:
South West North East
1 NT Pass 2 NT Pass
3 NT

Opening lead—three of spades.
The bidding followed standard lines. North's two notrump bid showed 8 or 9 points and a hand suitable for notrump play. South, though privileged to pass two notrump with a minimum opening bid, naturally went on to game opening a maximum notrump.

After winning the spade lead, declarer led the queen of diamonds and lost the finesse to East. A spade was returned. South took it and cashed the nine of diamonds. West shaking a heart.

Declarer could count eight winners—two spades, three diamonds and three clubs. The problem now was to get the ninth. Cashing the

A-K-Q of clubs would lead nowhere since the crucial ninth trick would then have to come from hearts, and this possibility had to be dismissed because the defense in the meantime could take two spades, two hearts and a diamond to set the contract.

There was only one genuine chance to make nine tricks and that lay in the hope West had the jack of clubs. So declarer led a low club, and when West followed small, the ten was played from dummy. The finesse succeeded and South made his three trump.

A first round ten-spot finesse where declarer's side also has a A-K-Q of the suit certainly is not an every day occurrence. But the fact that a finesse is unusual should never preclude its use. The situation called for the production of a ninth trick. The ten of clubs was as good a card as any to get it with. So it was tried.

The finesse might have lost, of course. If this had happened South would have been down two instead of one. It would have cost him an extra 50 points to try for the contract.

Considering that if the finesse succeeds declarer gains a game, worth roughly 400 points, the investment of 50 points is well worth the risk. Whether the finesse is successful or not is beside the point. There is much more to gain than to lose.

BEDTIME STORIES

One Missing

Then "missing" there is seldom heard.
A sadder or more cruel word.
—Old Mother Nature.

Bird babies grow fast. Because they grow fast they must have a great deal of food. That means that father and mother must spend most of their time from daylight to dark trying to find food for the babies.

In the nest of Redeye the Vireo were four babies. Three belonged to one mother. One had been wished on Mr. and Mrs. Redeye by Sally Sly the Cowbird. Because the baby Cowbird was from the beginning bigger and stronger than the baby Redeyes he got a bigger share of the food and grew faster than they did. Almost from the time they were hatched the young Cowbird managed to get every much more food than the others because he could snatch it right out of their mouths. The bigger and stronger he grew the more of the food he got. So the three baby Redeyes didn't grow as fast as they should have, and they were not strong enough to help themselves much.

One morning when Mother Redeye came back with a bill full of food she found only three babies in the nest and one of these was the young Cowbird. One of her own babies was missing. Where could it have gone? What could have

It must have fallen out of the nest. One morning when Mother Redeye came back with a bill full of food she found only three babies in the nest and one of these was the young Cowbird. One of her own babies was missing. Where could it have gone? What could have happened? Had someone stolen that baby out of the nest? S he suspected Sammy Jay, because Sammy sometimes does steal baby birds. So does Blacky the Crow. But neither Sammy nor Blacky had been seen in the neighborhood that morning.

Father and mother looked everywhere under the tree in which was the nest. Finally the helpless baby was found in the grass under the tree. It was dead. How did it get down there? It must have fallen out of the nest. Anyway, that is what father and mother decided. Of course they were upset, very much upset. Now they had only two babies of their own.

"It must have been an accident," said Mrs. Redeye sorrowfully. "That one was the smartest of the three."

"He must have gotten too near the edge and so fell out," said Redeye.

Meanwhile the three left in the nest were crying for food and the young Cowbird was crying loudest of all. So Redeye and Mrs. Redeye hurried away for more food. Now there were only three. It should have been easier work, but somehow it wasn't. This was because that young Cowbird demanded so much food and so much attention.

In a way this was a good thing, because they didn't have much time to think about the missing one. All they could think of was getting food enough for the three still in the nest.

"Never have I seen such an appetite," complained Mrs. Redeye. She had just dropped a worm into the opened mouth of the Cowbird. "This fellow is twice as big as either of the others now. I don't know what is going to happen if he keeps on growing so fast."

Meanwhile all the neighbors were gossiping. They were saying what a shame it was that Redeye and Mrs. Redeye should have to feed that young Cowbird when their own babies needed food. "They are too tender hearted," declared Welcome Robin. And he spoke truly.

Professor Is Critical Of Army University Education

BIGWIN INN, Ont. (CP)—The Ontario Urban and Rural School Trustees' Association heard criticism Tuesday of the system that allows students to take a term in the armed forces for a free education.

Dr. Perry Lowe, mathematics professor at Royal Military College, Kingston, told the group's annual convention that the scheme whereby the government pays for the university education of a boy in return for three years' service in the armed service gains "practically nothing except poorer quality at greater expense."

He said the Regular Officers Training Plan "is a wonderful bargain for the boy and undoubtedly has attracted hundreds of boys who would otherwise not be interested in a commission or able to take a college course. And what do the services gain from it? Practically nothing."

Liberals Plan Post-Mortem On Election Results Friday

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberals will hold an election post-mortem here Friday.

Prime Minister St. Laurent called Liberals elected June 10 to a special caucus to discuss the party's defeat and its immediate and long-term future.

The meeting, to be held the same day Progressive Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker is sworn in as prime minister, will be in the railway committee room of the centre block of the Parliament Buildings. It is scheduled to start at 2:30 p.m. EDT and is expected to last about three hours.

The caucus, similar to one held by former prime minister W. L. Mackenzie King when the Libs. were defeated in 1930, will map short-term strategy for the first session of the new Parliament expected to be called in the fall. It also will consider plans for the party's future, including the possibility of another general election within a year.

All the 104 Liberals elected June 10 have been invited to attend the meeting. Also invited are

William Benidickson, Liberal-Labor member for Kenora - Rainy River who was parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Harcourt in the last Parliament, and Sam Boulanger, elected as independent Liberal in the Quebec riding of Drummond-Arthabaska.

Mr. Boulanger has been accepted as a full member of the Liberal party and will sit in the next Parliament as a Liberal. This means that the gap between the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives in the new Commons has been reduced to four members.

New standing in the Commons: Conservatives 109; Liberals 105; CCF 25; Social Credit 19; Independent Progressive Conservative 1; Liberal-Labor 1; vacant 1; voting deferred 1; total 265.

It is understood that Liberal headquarters now are conferring with other independent Liberal, Gerard Loiselle, elected in Montreal St. Ann. It is considered likely that he also will be accepted as a full member of the party.

Polite Warning Is Useful In Handling Montreal Traffic

MONTREAL (CP)—Tolerance and goodwill are paramount in Montreal's handling of traffic-law violations by visiting tourists.

The traffic division of the police department under inspector Girard Brodeur, has devised a system in which two types of tickets—white and blue—are used.

The white ticket is for a simple parking violation and is not recorded by the constable. The blue ticket is numbered, any of which can be checked off. It says: "A summons could have been sent you for this offence, and, in return for your leniency in this case, we beg to ask of you to grant us your co-operation to train the observance of the traffic by-laws in Montreal."

"We hope that in the future you will not compel us to apply the law in all its severity; instead, that we can rely upon you for a better observance of the traffic by-laws in Montreal."

The ticket is signed "Traffic Bureau."
