DANIEL'S WIFE.
 "Can't say I believe in superstition myself."
 "Nor me. Though I've seen the time when I wouldn't look over my left shoulder for fear of seeing the new moon."
 "But you can't change the law of the universe to suit yourselves, an I for one know that a dog howling in a sure sign of death."
 "I broke a looking-glass once and didn't have no luck for a year."
 "Now I don't believe in any of them signs, but if I spill the salt I'm bound to get into a quarrel with a neighbour."
 "You never know it to fail."
 "If a fork drops from your hands and sticks in the floor it's a sure sign that somebody's coming. And you can tell by the way it slants where he's coming from."
 "Hush! Here's Daniel's wife coming in from the kitchen. Don't let her hear you."

They were a company of plain country folk who had assembled at a neighbour's deathbed, that of a deceased old man, Uncle Abner Field, who had just passed away. He was feeble and childish, but as a relative of their young neighbour, Daniel Field, he commanded some respect. For himself he was covetous, grasping and

"WHAT DOESN'T COME TRUE?" ASKED LORETTA. ill-tempered, and as no one cared to have him about, he lived alone in a tumble-down house, when Daniel's wife—pretty Loretta Price, that was—took pity on him and invited him to make his home with them. Daniel agreed to everything that she suggested.

"It's too dreadful to have the old man living and dying alone there when we have a room to spare and a bite and sup for him. He's your own flesh and blood, Daniel, and we must do as we would be done by."
 Loretta had said.

Of course the people who attend to everybody's business but their own said that Loretta expected to get something for her goodness, but she argued at the suggestion that poor old Uncle Abner, who had always been the personification of poverty, and any money she would have destroyed it as if it were only to make him more comfortable, for her husband was poor, farming not being his vocation. Like herself, Daniel was a dutiful, and longed to see the world, but she was more practical and did not disdain present opportunities. But she was working beyond her strength before she took Uncle Abner in.

And never once did he try to lighten his burden by any consideration on his part. As long as he was able to be about he spent much of his time in the old house which he owned, as well as the three acres of ground pertaining to it, and the he devoted to Daniel with much formality and many specifications. The whole property was worth a few hundred dollars, if over a purchaser could be found.

We'll tear down the house and plant an orchard on the land," Daniel had said, but his wife had no interest in it one way or the another. More land was not one of her hobbies; less would have pleased her better.

Now Uncle Abner was dead, but in dying he had involved a strange and pretentious man from the realms of superstition. He had lain for many hours in an unconscious state, with all the friends and neighbours of the family gathered about him, as the custom obtains in rural districts, and several times he had actually ceased to breathe—when in one of his returns from the border land, he opened his eyes and looked upon the faces of those about him, then said, in his shrill voice:

"Daniel's wife!"
 Loretta stepped hastily to him, and took the cold hand in her soft warm palm, but with those words he ceased to breathe. There was no more coming back to the realm of the living the way of all flesh since Adam, and the only one to shed a tear for him was she whose name was last on his lips. But the form of address customary with him.

But the effect of his words on all gathered there, excepting Loretta herself, was most remarkable. They left the deathbed with precipitate haste, and grouped together in the other room began to talk in hushed tones over Uncle Abner's last words and to discuss their different forms of superstition which had proceeded so far as the spilling of salt, when Loretta herself appeared among them, and immediately became an object of the greatest interest.

"Don't take it to heart," suggested one.
 "He just wanted to see you," remarked another.
 "It doesn't always come true," said one neighbour in a tone that indicated exactly the opposite of what she expressed.

 "What doesn't always come true?" asked Loretta, who did not catch the drift of their vague insinuations.
 "Why, then, know," stammered an old lady who was rather afraid of Daniel's wife, who was considered very clever, "when folks are a-dying it is said that the last name on their lips will be the next one to go: it's said to be a sure sign, 'cause the dying have dying knowledge; but I darsay he but forgot something he wanted to say to you, Loretta."
 "If that's all, you needn't worry about me," said Loretta, quickly. "I shan't die till my time comes, and that won't be set by Uncle Abner, I'm very sure."
 "N-o," said another of the company, "but the dying are often ruffed with fear for a moment, and their husband's sister's second son; he died out in California just the same time and he said her name with his last breath—the name."
 "Yes—maybe," said Loretta, "but we'll all feel warm and cozy, and you'll all feel better, and with decision—" we won't talk about Uncle Abner's last words any more." This only added fuel to the superstitious flame, but at least the friends were soothed or enough not to talk about the matter before Loretta. They carried it to their homes, and discussed it there, and talked of it at the general store on Saturday nights, and it was not long before Daniel's wife was looked upon as a doomed woman.

Did she know it? Yes, Daniel himself told her of the reports, and they laughed over them together. Loretta declared there was not a grain of superstition in her nature, and she would not die any sooner for being "called."
 Daniel's wife was not superstitious, but from the hour of old Abner's death she began to pine and fail in flesh and spirit. She knew it was foolish, but she heard that rasping voice calling her everywhere, and at all hours: "Daniel's wife!" "Daniel's wife!" and in the night she would rise hurriedly from troubled slumbers and go over the house as if in obedience to the "call," and return pale and trembling, the cold perspiration bathing face and hands, while Daniel slept, disturbed by her waking in-dolenances.

But he, too, saw that his wife was affected by a strange happening, and to divert her mind and give her something else to think of, he suggested tearing down the old house, and planting the new orchard.

She assented reluctantly. Farming was not to her taste, but she loved her husband and tried with widely interest to take part in all his schemes.
 So a couple of neighbours were invited to assist, as the custom is in farming communities, and the old-fashioned window casements and the doors were removed, and soon a sound of ripping and tearing saluted Loretta's ears. It brought back the possession of the old man, and his last cry; she could hear it as distinctly as if he were in the next room. Often in the night when she heard it in dreams she awakened with a glad feeling that she was still alive, a breathing, hoping, loving woman, not a cold one in yonder place where he lay. She loved life even under its present disappointments, for always while there is life there is hope.

What was the matter?

"My six-year-old daughter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months, the principal seat of eruption being behind her ears. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, bought innumerable medicines and soaps, and took the child to medical specialists in skin diseases, but without result. Finally a week ago I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and the first application showed the curative effect of the remedy.
 We have used only one-sixth of the box, but the change is very marked; the eruption has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured." (Signed) MAXWELL JOHNSTON,

 A Resident of St. John, N. B., Makes a Successful Trial of Dodd's Kidney Pills.
 St. John, N. B., July 8.—Mr. Robert Moore residing in Indiantown, a suburb of this city, has recently made what is allowed by all who are acquainted with the facts to be a most remarkable recovery. He has been a sufferer from a serious complaint of the kidneys for over seven years, and during that time has suffered excruciating pain. He has also suffered considerably in pocket, having paid large sums for medical advice. Quite recently he happened to read of the many cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and with commendable promptitude made a trial of them, with the result that after taking three boxes of the remedy he was entirely restored to health.

According to Mulhall, leprosy is far more prevalent in Europe than most people suppose. He says that there are now 3,000 lepers in Portugal, 1,770 in Norway, 6,000 in Russia, and about 2,000 all told in other European countries. In India there are 131,000, and in Canton, China, less than 10,000. The above are given figures for other countries and islands but it is estimated that the leper population of the world is but little, if any, short of a million.
 Fatal Result of Delay.
 Sickness generally follows in the path of neglect. Don't be reckless! but prevent a few doses of Scott's Emulsion immediately on your coming exposure to it. It will save you many painful days and sleepless nights.

 A Resident of St. John, N. B., Makes a Successful Trial of Dodd's Kidney Pills.
 Moore residing in Indiantown, a suburb of
 this city, has recently made what is allowed by all who are acquainted with the facts
 of the kidneys for over seven years, and
 pocket, having paid large sums for medi-
 read of the many cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and with commendable
 remedy he was entirely restored to health.
