Wise Packing Can Add To Pleasure Of A Trip

It's a bonanza season for winter cruises, and ships are going out jammed for voyages to the Caribbean, the Mediterranean and to South America, with prices tags that range from budget bargains to the stratospheric.

So here are some suggestions to help ease the travelers' problems with luggage.

WISE PACKING
Wise packing can increase travel pleasure so much, no matter how little or how much time and money are available.

If the ship is to be the passengers' hotel, as it is on all-inclusive cruises, a trunk is a good choice. There are large ones which hold dresses on hangers, with plenty of drawer space for shoes and accessories.

A traveling garment bag is a practical accessory, since it will keep wrinkles out of the fussy party dresses that make such a hit at the ship's galas. Such bags hold coats as well.

Increasingly popular, after a long eclipse, is the flat packing trunk, with a removable tray to accommodate small articles.

The passenger who is planning stopover visits to several different places, will find a pullman case, hatbox and a duffle bag or cosmetic case of real value.

These pieces of luggage should prove adequate for the woman who is able to travel without toting along her entire wardrobe.

Porter problems are neatly solved by adding luggage wheels to the large pullman case. Wheeling your own, too, is sometimes the best way out of a horde of screaming porters and guides.

MAPLE NUT TREATS - Warm and bubbly from the oven, topped with whipped cream and a sprinkling of maple sugar, they make a fine springtime dessert and excellent late-night snack. Halved wieners are dipped in egg and maple syrup, glorified with a crunchy topping of maple sugar and chopped walnuts, and butter-dotted for a golden glaze. Just put out a pitcher of ice cold milk and let everyone help themselves.

Maple Syrup Recipes Are An Early Spring Favorite

They're tapping the maple trees - again which means that across Canada, we'll soon be able to enjoy the new harvest of our famous maple syrup and maple sugar - and use them in cooking and baking, as well as on the table. That's why we're bringing you some brand new recipes today on the theme, a wonderful way to give your family their first taste of this year's crop from the sugar maples.

Incidentally, you may be as surprised as we were to discover that maple syrup is a strictly North American institution. Of course there are maple trees in other parts of the world, but it is chiefly on this continent that the sticky sugar maple stores up a crop worth harvesting commercially.

An interesting story is told about the discovery of maple syrup and sugar. It seems that an Indian squaw in Vermont was getting some moose meat ready for her brave, boiling the meat in the "sweet water" that came from a tree near her wigwam. So while the meat boiled, she worked away on a pair of moccasins, becoming so engrossed that she forgot about the meat. When she suddenly realized that her husband's dinner wasn't burned, and she wept for joy, not only because the moose meat was just done to a turn, but also because the "sweet water" had turned into a brown sugar. She tasted it, and according to the legend "nothing sweeter has ever come from her lips", and when her brave came home, "he ate as he had never eaten before". Proud of his wife's culinary achievements, he went out and told the neighbors about it, with the result that they all tapped the tree again for some of the "sweet water", and every day was a feast day while the sap ran, for the Indians decided that the recipe was heaven sent - and that was the beginning of maple sugar.

Today, sugaring-off parties are still held in sugar maple areas and the candy made by pouring butter, the taste is not one bit impaired.
