BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

By Thornton W. Burgess

OPPORTUNITY MADE THE MOST OF

Who seeks a chance will try to make it, and then is quick to see and take it.

—Blacky the Crow.

Reddy Fox looked up at Blacky the Crow. "Well," said he, "who took it?"

Blacky the Crow shook his head. "You tell me," said he. "There was a mystery over in woods where these two had met. A dreadful thing had happened there. A young Mink had been caught in a steel trap and had twisted and torn a leg off in getting away. Blacky had seen it. Reddy had come along just too late. What Reddy doesn't know about traps is hardly worth knowing. He knew perfectly well that once a trap has been sprung it is harmless, so of course this trap was harmless. He also knew that traps usually are baited. He began looking around for the bait that had been at this trap. He guessed that it would be something good that he would like to eat, and that it now would be harmless. His guess was a good one. That bait had been a piece of meat. Blacky the Crow had discovered it before that unhappy Mink had come along, but Blacky had been too wise to touch it. Now that Reddy mentioned it, Blacky began to look around too. The meat was gone!

Reddy Fox looked up at Blacky the Crow. "Well," said he, "who took it?"

Suddenly Blacky remembered something. He remembered that he had seen another little piece of meat farther down the little brook beside which this trap had been set. He wondered if that piece of meat was still there. Spreading his wings, he hurriedly flew to find out. Reddy Fox, knowing that there was nothing to be gained around that trap, started on down the bank of that little brook. He knew the ways of trappers and he guessed that there might be other traps, so he decided to follow that brook down through the woodland on a

TOP-LEVEL BRIDGE ARGUMENT

Even the most expert and experienced partnerships "fall to click" in some hands. The following deal, which occurred in a pair tournament, gave a "cold zero" to an East-West pair of famous experts.

South dealer East-West vulnerable.

♠ K Q 9 4
 ♥ 10 9 7
 ♦ 4 3
 ♣ 10 5 3
 ♠ 8 5
 ♥ 8 4 3 2
 ♦ 10 8 5 2
 ♣ A 7 6

 S
 ♠ A K 6
 ♥ A K J 7
 ♦ K J 8 2
 ♣ A J 10 7 2
 ♠ Q J 5
 ♥ Q 8 6
 ♦ 8 4

The above experts were involved in this bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	Pass	1♠
1♠	Pass	Pass	Double.
Pass	2♦	2♠	3♣
Pass	3♦	3♠	Pass
Pass	4♦	Pass	Pass
Double.	Pass	Pass	Pass

East, the declarer, could not avoid the loss of four tricks and so was penalized the 200 points which so often returns a very bad match-point score. Actually, East-West could have scored a "top," since they could have doubled the opposing three-spade contract and defeated it 300 points.

Arguing about the hand, West criticized East for putting him (West) "under pressure," pointing out that with four almost sure winners against spades, and with the club honors to boot, East certainly should have doubled the three-spade call instead of passing it around for West's decision. West argued that from his point of view it had seemed that the enemy might make three spades, since East had refused to double, and therefore that he had gone to four diamonds as a possible make, or a sacrifice that would pan out if the opponents failed to double.

East, for his part, felt that he had shown that he had done enough to push the opponents, without taking such a final step as doubling. He pointed out that West had at no time made a real bid; and he felt strongly that since West actually had an ace, it was up to him to double three spades, in the near certainty that East would produce four defensive tricks.

Which argument, dear reader, do you endorse? This writer agrees with East.
