Centennial License Plate Project of Kinsmen Opens

The Kinsmen Club of Charlottetown got its centennial license plate project underway yesterday with a presentation of the first plate to A. J. Gallant, registrar of motor vehicles, by H. C. MacDonald, chairman of the Kinsmen committee. The plates are available at the Motor Vehicle Branch for $1 over the costs of the numbered license plate for registration, as this year the province is only issuing a front plate for the cars and the back plate of the vehicles will be free. It is hoped by the Kinsmen that the people of Prince Edward Island will be well publicized. The proceeds of the sale of the plates will go to support the valuable service work done by the Kinsmen. Chairman of the Kinsmen plate committee, H. C. MacDonald said yesterday that the project has full approval of the central committee and the provincial government and that the plates are being sold very rapidly even though they have just been brought out. The centennial plate is the same color as the new vehicle registration plates, a white background with blue lettering. In the middle of the plate, the cradle of confederation is written, flanked by 1864 on the left side and 1964 on the right, with Prince Edward Island written above.

Vehicles Ditched On Icy Highways

again began to rise but a fine mist and wet windshield so that visibility was almost nil, and all traffic had to proceed with extreme caution.

MONTAGUE BURSAU OF THE GUARDIAN
Light snow followed by rain in the early morning Thursday left the roads in the southern Kings area almost impassable due to the icy conditions. The department of highways trucks were sanding continuously throughout the day; however even this left many sections dangerous for the traveling public. No serious accidents were reported although several cars and light trucks had to be assisted onto the road in many instances. One truck loaded with potatoes slid to a stop and then turned on its side. The driver, Cecil Jensen who was alone at the time admittedly $300 damage was done to the box of his truck. In the town of Montague motorists were able to travel with caution throughout the day. The previous storms have narrowed the traveling portion of the street but the street was kept well sanded and no accidents were reported within the town. In the evening temperatures dropped for a short time making the highway slippery once again, however shortly after dark the temperature once

Canadian Stage's First Lady Dies In Oshawa At 79

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) - Mrs. Catherine Lovela (Kitty) Marks, 79, sometimes referred to as the first lady of the Canadian stage, died in hospital here Thursday. Her stage career began in 1901 at Brockville when she married Ernest Marks, one of the seven Marks Brothers who were famous in Eastern Canada for their touring stage companies. She joined the troupe at that time and continued on stage until 1921, when she and her husband retired and bought a theatre here. Her husband died in 1953. When her sister-in-law, Gracie Marks died in 1957, Mrs. Marks became the last surviving member of the troupe. Under the stage name of Kitty Marks she started her career singing between acts of plays presented by the Marks Brothers at fall fairs in towns and cities throughout Ontario and the Maritimes. "HAD GOOD VOICE" "I think I had a good voice," she recalled in an interview in 1958. "The miners in Cobalt used to throw coins on the stage when I sang." Later in her career, she became the leading actress in the Ernie Marks Company and toured Canada and centres in the northern United States. At one time, the company played under canvas in Hamilton for six weeks. Saturday nights in Kingston usually meant a running battle with students from Queen's University. "We shouted our lines and the audience shouted theirs right back and everybody had a good time," Mrs. Marks recalled in the interview. When she retired from the stage, she sold tickets for her husband's theatre for eight years. She gave up the job when Mr. Marks was elected mayor of Oshawa in 1951.
