BURGESS BEDTIME

nose to the ground and was sniffing and snuffing. Of course he didn't find Peter's scent. He came back. For just a minute he stood on the bank and looked right at Peter's wobbly little nose without seeing it. Then he started along the bank down Laughing Brook, sniffing and snuffing. For all his sniffing and snuffing he found nothing at all.

In a few Gray Fox was out of sight. Perhaps this time he would keep on going. Peter hoped so. He hoped so with all his heart. Never in all his life had he hoped for anything more than he now hoped he had seen the last of Gray Fox.

Now Gray Fox is nothing if not persistent when he is after a dinner that he is sure is somewhere near. Peter was just going to take his feet off the bottom and swim ashore when that pesky Fox came trotting back along the bank. This time he sat down back to Peter and only a little way off. He was studying. Yes, sir, he was studying. He was trying to think how Peter could have gotten away without leaving any scent. Peter knew that he couldn't stay in that deep water much longer. What to do? Peter just didn't know. As I told you in the beginning he was doubly in deep water.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Around The Armouries

Recruiting is continuing at the same pace and the boys of the P. F. have plenty of work. However, there is always room for a few more anxious to get into uniform. One noticeable thing is that the recruiting drive is upsetting local unit appreciators. They are losing many of their senior N. C. O.'s to the Active Force or on callouts.

There was a real break in the routine of Army life last week when the Garrison N. C. O.'s annual Victoria Day Ball was held at Sandy's. Undoubtedly it was one of the top parties of all time for the local Mess. Most of the top brass were on hand and to all intents and purposes had even more fun than their hosts.

Real tribute must be paid to the members of the committee who organized the annual Ball and carried it through to such a thoroughly successful conclusion. It was apparently the responsibility of the combined house and entertainment committee under the chairmanship of Sgt. E. Fardy. He and his fellow members can take a well deserved bow. And they did not forget the decorative angle. As usual it was the West End Nurseries, through Sgt. Paddy Smith, making a gift of the flowers to add to the pleasure of the occasion.

We heard a really good fishing story about a couple of top-ranking Sergeant Majors. Early on the holiday morning they met at the Armouries and headed for their favorite fishing grounds. One of them admits he is not a keen fisherman, the other definitely is. They had excellent luck and when they finally landed their boat on shore each had a full creel.

One of them took his and placed it under some bushes until the boat was beached, dried out and loaded back on top of the car. They then climbed in and drove the nearly 50 miles back to the city. On arrival it was discovered that the fishing basket so carefully placed under the bushes was apparently still there. It certainly was not in the car.

Thinking they knew exactly where they had placed it they drove all the way back to the country, but there was no sign of it. Sgt. Maj. Ryan claims he did not catch his trout by waiting for the tide to wash them over the bank to him. Sgt. Maj. Jessome would just as soon not talk about it at all.

The annual Mess Dinner of the 21st Field Ambulance will be held this year on June 9. For a change it will be at Keppooch Beach Hotel and should prove one of the highlights of the Medics social season.

There are several officers missing these days from the local units and the Messes. Among those who have gone on active service are Capt. Vern MacDonald, who has already taken one draft to Toronto, and Capt. George MacRae who was scheduled to leave this week.

Others include Lieut. Elmer Blanchard, now in Halifax on callout as an instructing officer, Lieut. D. F. MacEachern, Mermaid, who has been S.O.S. the 21st Field Ambulance to take a short term commission and is now on an infantry course.

The P. E. I. Regiment officers are busy these nights back at school again. Each night the officers qualifying school is being held at the Ordnance Compound with senior officers of the Recce acting as instructors.

The Medics also lost a couple of their soldiers recently when Privates J. R. Doyle and E. J. Cahill were struck off strength on leaving to accept positions with the new development work going on in Labrador.

Mr. W. L. McKenna has been named an officer cadet in the Command Contingent with the 28th L. A. A. Regiment and has been assigned to 114th Battery.

At the same time Mr. Ronald Burns Smith, a former Flying Officer in the R. C. A. F., has been taken on strength with the same unit.

Lieut. Gordon W. Wellner, 28th L. A. A., has returned to duty here following several weeks' absence. While away Lieut. Wellner took a troop deployment and sound ranging course at Shilo, Manitoba.

The Garrison N. C. O.'s Mess is adding another feature designed to make it even more attractive than at present. New venetian blinds are due to arrive today for installation over the windows. They will match the general color scheme of the Mess with green blinds and maroon plastic tapes.

Lieut. W. K. Sharpe has been named new Quartermaster of the 21st Field Ambulance. He replaces Capt. G. A. Godfrey who has been transferred to the Supplementary Reserve List, Infantry, but who will still be attached to the unit.

The Recce Regiment will have its first week-end scheme shortly. It is understood that plans are presently being made for the first two-day training session of the season. Probably the scheme will be carried out at Squaw Point Range, but nothing definite has been announced as yet.

The boys of that unit will also probably be interested to learn that there is an excellent possibility of a pay parade being held next month. Anybody mad about it?
