Midsummer Love Stories.

A young German carpenter was married to a pretty Bohemian girl in Omaha the other day after a six months' courtship, which must have been conducted entirely in pantomime, as neither can speak a word of the other's language. The services of an interpreter were needed at the altar, but the young couple seemed as happy as if they had talked sweet nothings into each others ears all their life-time.

Sam Peters is a good looking young negro, who has been hauling water melons into Quitman, Ga., from his master's farm in Brooks county. On the way he always kept a sharp lookout for a pretty yellow girl who sometimes flirted with him from the roadside. Last Monday as he was passing her house, she cried out: "Wish I had one of dem arc water-millions." Sam said he would give her the biggest one in the lot if she would ride into town with him, and she accepted. By the time they had reached town Sam had persuaded her to marry him, a preacher was hunted up, and the knot was tied.

A romantic wedding took place at Edwardville, Ill., the other day, when Prof. James O. Duncan, of Vandalia, a widower, was married to Mrs. Lillie Carroll, of Springfield, a widow. The marriage was the culmination of a series of coincidences in the lives of the wedded pair. The Rev. J. B. Thompson, who performed the ceremony, officiated in the same capacity at Prof. Duncan's first marriage, and also at Mrs. Carroll's first marriage, and preached the funeral sermon at the death of Prof. Duncan's wife and at the death of Mrs. Carroll's husband. It was this strange fatality of circumstances which induced the couple to seek again the services of Mr. Thompson.

A pretty Nebraska widow, who had embraced the affections of many respectable farmers living near Wynman, was recently ordered to leave the country by a band of "regulators," under penalty of a coat of tar and feathers. Nothing daunted by the threat the widow bought a double-barreled shotgun and awaited developments. When the regulators approached the house to carry out their threat, the sight of the loaded gun pointed from one of the windows deterred them, and one of the number in admiration of the widow's pluck, advanced under a flag of truce, proposed marriage, and was accepted on the spot. Then a person was called in, the marriage was celebrated, and the night wound up with a round of festivities.

Henry Wynn, a bachelor from the West, who was recently visiting his brother at Owen Sound, Ont., expressed the desire one day to get married before his return. The day of his departure had already been set, and to expedite matters he offered his brother's wife a deed to 50 acres of land if she would get him a wife by the Saturday following the date of the offer. After exploring the town without success for several days, on Friday Mrs. Wynn met a Miss Melrose, who was willing to accept the offer. She was introduced to her prospective husband on Saturday evening, just before the boat was leaving. A consultation was held, the pair were married on the spot, Mrs. Wynn was handed over the deed for the 50 acres of land, and the bride and groom steamed away for their prairie home.

A middle-aged tradesman, whose corpse has just been discovered in the Bois de Vincennes, at Paris, not only died for true love, but lent a tinge of romance to his death. His body was found leaning upright against a tree with a revolver in his right hand and a bouquet of flowers spattered with blood clamped in his left. The flowers concealed a folded parcel addressed to the cruel one, named Louise, in which the deceased had written his farewell. "Before I die," wrote the tradesman—who evidently was meant by nature for a poet—"I gather for thee, Louise, my beloved one, a bouquet of Spring flowers, which I will clasp in my right hand while with the other I send a bullet through the heart that for love of thee ceases to beat. On these humble flowers, I let fall my last tears, I press my last kiss, before leaving for another world, and I pray the person who finds my lifeless remains to deliver to thee the bouquet and the revolver in the hope thou will keep them as souvenirs of my deep affection." The poor fellow's wishes were carried out, the police causing the souvenirs to be conveyed to Louise.

Stanley Thought to be Safe.

The report of Stanley's death is universally disbelieved, and the details of the latest official news from his expedition seem to fully justify the scepticism as to the vague rumors of his assassination. If he was killed, it must have been after leaving the Auriwimi, but the news of his departure thence, all well, for Wadelai was sent by steamer and express messengers at the swiftest possible speed by a route much shorter than that by which the report of his murder reached the coast, hence there are good grounds to believe that he is still safe and pressing forward for the relief of Emin Pacha. The few who think him dead have little grounds for their belief beyond the fact that a common rumor long anticipated the news through the regular channels of three fatalities in Africa—the murder of the French Prince Imperial, the assassination of James Carey and the death of Gen. Gordon. Mr. Appleton, who has booked Stanley to lecture through a tour, which, if made, will yield over $100,000, scorns the idea of the explorer's death and declares his firm faith in his safe return. It is a curious fact that Stanley is pursuing the same route proposed by Gordon when he contemplated going for the King of the Belgians in 1884 to the Nile country by the Auriwimi, a branch of the Congo.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN are made pallid and unattractive by functional irregularities which Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" will infallibly cure. Thousands of testimonials. By druggists.

John Bigham fell from the iron work of the Canada Pacific bridge, at Merrickville, Ont., Sunday, striking on the top of one of the piers. Death resulted in half an hour.

FROM JOHN F. WYMAN, formerly Postmaster, South China, Me.: "Too much cannot be said of Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam, as it is the best remedy for coughs, colds, etc., that I have ever seen; and to its wonderful effects I owe my recovery. It is well worthy of praise, and I would advise all to use it who are afflicted." Trial bottles 10 cents.

Strikes Cost Big Money.

The coke strike at Pittsburg, Pa., has been one of the most stubbornly contested battles ever fought, between capital and labor. For eleven weeks and four days the fight went on, and it is not yet entirely over. The amount of money lost by the iron idleness cannot be accurately calculated, but it runs up into the millions. When the strike began four-fifths of the 11,000 men in the region had money of their own, but very few of them have enough money now to take them out of the district, if they wanted to leave. For the first six weeks all of the 11,000 were on strike. The average wages paid, including mine boys at 75 cents a day and coal miners at from $2.50 to $5 a day, is $2.05. Counting at that rate, the men lost, during the first five weeks, $553,500 in wages. Then A. Carnegie gave the advance and 3,000 men went to work. For six weeks the remaining 6,000 have been carrying on the strike, and have lost $442,800, making a total loss in wages of $996,300. At a sliding scale equal to 12 1/2 per cent. advance is arranged for them, it will take a year and nine months' steady work to make up for the time they have lost. The operators have also been heavy losers. The pumps have been kept running at all the pits, yard and pit bosses, superintendents and clerks have been drawing salaries, and mules and horses have been getting fat on oats and hay that they did not earn. At West Leisenring, where the Pinkerton men have been stationed, the expense has been over $1,000 a day since the strike began. Beside this, the ovens have become cold and badly out of repair. Fully a third of them all over the region will have to be overhauled before coal can be put into them. Then, too, the coke trade has fallen off, and it will take time and money to build it up again. It is estimated that the actual expense to the operators has been from $7,000 to $10,000 a day, while their loss entire will foot up over $1,000,000.

The St. Thomas Horror

The St. Thomas horror was made possible by two railroads crossing on the same level. But this was not the cause of the accident. The Port Stanley train ought, according to custom, to have come to a halt within two hundred yards of the crossing, and it failed to do so. The lights and the semaphores were turned on, so that the usual warning was not wanting. The inquest may throw some light on the cause of the catastrophe, though in some cases the lights shed at inquests is sometimes feeble. Such accidents cannot be altogether prevented by any process short of abolishing level crossing, and though this ought to be done in cities, it can hardly yet be hoped for everywhere. The melancholy side of such accidents is when they teach no lesson by which it is possible to profit. Somebody must be trusted, and if that somebody goes wrong, a calamity is the consequence.

Give Them a Chance!

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.
When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.
Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

The Mayor of Cork presided at a public meeting of the National League, Monday night, in that city. In opening the meeting he said that the cause of Ireland would proceed despite coercion, and that if the League was unable to hold public meetings it would meet in private. Great enthusiasm was manifested during the meeting. The police made no attempt to interfere.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind. mar17 eod & wky

A Murphy, N. C., negroess awoke in the night to find a huge snake coiled about her neck. Instead of fainting, she grabbed the reptile, flung it against the wall with her force, and went to sleep again. Daylight revealed one of the largest rattlers ever seen in the vicinity.

The body of a man has been found in the river, opposite St. Laurent, Quebec. It has been placed in the morgue at Quebec. It is very much decomposed. It is supposed to be that of Sylvester, who threw himself overboard the last trip of the Parisian.

"Mister Gody," said one of Buffalo Bill's Indians the other day, in London, "can I have the aggregation temporarily?" "Why, Bounding Panther?" asked Buffalo Bill. "Saru an I'd like to visit ne old home at Ballykilmucky, when I'm so nare it."

The Pope has decided that there is no ground for papal interference with the Knight of Labor question.
