CHAPTER XIII

"It is the first time that I drank so much whisky," he observed pathetically. "It is more savage than cognac and I don't think I will drink it again. At what time do we sail, captain?"

"I want to get away pretty soon," the latter told him. "We've got to work clear of this bunch of trouble to the westward before sundown. I wouldn't mind spending a couple of days around here, but we've got to make Suva as soon as we can now, or the New Zealand Gov't will be fixin' up for someone else to take on your job here, mister. Not that they're likely to send any one along in a hurry, but still they'll be glad to know that you're safe."

Strang had come into the room while he was speaking. "I'm sorry you're off so soon," he said. "We don't get visitors often enough to want to see the backs of them as quickly as this. I'd say, 'Come again,' but I'm afraid I can't offer you any inducements in the way of trade. Sorensen takes all that I can produce, and it wouldn't be worth his while to come if I started splitting it up."

"Sure not!" the captain agreed. "An' I wouldn't want to butt in on his round anyway. But I'm glad I looked in here all the same. You wasn't too pleased to see me the last time leastways old Porson wasn't — an' this sort o' squares things up."

Strang laughed. The captain finished his coffee noisily and rose to his feet. "Well, if you're feelin' good an' ready, Doc, I reckon it's time we pulled our freight."

The doctor agreed somewhat listlessly, and they all four made their way down to the jetty together. Strang shouted an order across to the boys' quarters as they left the house, and before they had got half-way down the slope they were overtaken and passed by the crew of the trader's whale-boat. By the time they reached the jetty, the boat was manned and waiting for them at the foot of the steps.

"Well, it's aloha," the captain said with a sigh, turning to shake hands with Strang. "I don't reckon to be headin' this way again for a bit, but believe me, mister, I ain't goin' to forget last night in a hurry! That dinner was bonser, an' I reckon you keep the best whisky in the Pacific. If Sorensen should die on you or pile his hooker up or anything, just let me know and I'll take on his job with pleasure. It's a bit out o' the way from my general run, but it's worth an extra week's sailin' to get a show like that at the end of it!"

"I'll let you know!" Strang told him with a laugh. "An' here's wishin' you luck, mister!" the captain went on to Thurlow. "But if you ask me, you've got it. Memory or no memory, this is a snug gillet. The only trouble I can see ahead of you is that you'll be puttin' on more weight than you'll know what to do with!"

The doctor made his farewells in a more subdued manner, but for others it will be factory work in Central Canada, or in the Army and Navy officer training camps. Times have changed since students would not even consider leaving the Province in search of summer employment; now students of St. Dunstan's can be found during the summer on practically every continent whether it is for factory work, service training cruises or study tours.

The members of the graduating class were guests of Father Roche on Friday night when they attended a "smoker" in the Science Building. Mr. Eugene Gorman spoke on the value of humility in the affairs of life. Besides lunches and a movie they had a brief introduction to the Alumni Association of which they will soon be members. It will be principally through Father Roche, as Secretary-Treasurer of the Alumni Association that they will have contact with their Alma Mater after leaving here. In addition to the extra interests he has in all the students (among which can be mentioned the weekly religious bulletin which records the events of the College year so that all sons of St. Dunstan's may keep abreast of activities.

On May 19th at 7:00 p.m. in the College Chapel, benediction and the Baccalaureate sermon, will be given by Rev. Dr. Charles I. Boyd of St. Dunstan's Parish, Fredericton, N.B. On May 25th at 3:00 p.m. graduation exercises will be held in the Alumni Auditorium with Judge Sylvère DesRoches giving the address to the graduates.

The "Week" would extend to all members of the graduating class sincere congratulations and a fond farewell. Rarely has one the opportunity of associating with such an exemplary group who in every field set a worthy example. In this class are found champion athletes and debaters, accomplished writers, actors and actresses and, above all real Christian ladies and gentlemen, who each and every one can well measure up to any similar group in Canada. In them can be plainly seen much of that invaluable stuff that St. Dunstan's is built on—courage, zeal, character, dedication and self-sacrifice. Great things come from only great men and it is for this reason that we can expect the best. Again our fondest wishes for we are better for having known you.

With this we complete another year of "Weeks". Until next fall, then, may you enjoy much happiness, prosperity and health—we at S. D. U. wish you well.

The Week at S.D.U.

Frank Zakem's prom committee is well under way in its preparations for the Junior Prom in honor of the graduating class of '53. His assistants Miss Ellen Mullally, Don McCarron, Charles Morrison, Louis McGinn, Leo McQuaid and Jerome Quinn are taking care of their respective tasks from mailing invitations to putting up decorations. The big dance will take place in the Alumni Gymnasium on May 25 from 9 to 12:30 with music by "The Down-towners". This is the most talked-about social event of the last term and one which never fails to give everyone an exceptionally good time. Things are in the control of a very good man this year and it should be bigger and better than ever. It is always a very special occasion too, for besides being a send-off party for the graduates, the Junior Prom is usual! the last function at which they, and the other students are present in a body. No other occasion will find all these old friends together again.

Leonard Shea the newly-elected President of the Amateur Athletic Association, with his executive recently chose the following managers who will comprise the executive committee. These are: for football, Andy MacDonald; hockey, Russell McInnis; basketball, Gerry Johnston; softball and pool, Earl Handrahan; tennis, handball and ping-pong, Gerald Coady; track, Art Seaman; rink, John Gavin, and representative of High School, Neil Gillis.

Congratulations to Father Adrien Arsenault and his Laval Chorists for their fine showing at Thursday night's session of the Music Festival! Besides their presentation of two French choruses, they won a class for Gregorian chant with a mark of 83. Father Arsenault here but one year, has already done much to promote music and art and a great deal more can be expected from him in the future. The Glee Club, holding its late-acquired tradition of increasing inactivity, did not enter competition.

With the summer vacation less than two weeks away and with the exams in progress, there is considerable reason for excitement these days. Besides the extra push at the books, one of the paramount concerns of everyone is that of finding suitable summer employment. For the vast majority, the summer break cannot be considered a holiday or vacation unless in the sense that "a change is as good as a rest." The "change" for some will take the form of work on the family farm, while

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

AXYDLBAAXE

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

his last words to Thurlow were a repetition of his faith in his complete recovery. "I could not wish you a better place for your convalescence," he said. "Here you will have little to worry you, and it will only be a matter of time before your memory completely returns. I shall say so in my report to the authorities." They went down to the waiting boat, and the other two remained watching from the jetty as they were pulled off to the schooner. It was with an odd sense of loss that Thurlow turned and began to walk slowly back along the jetty beside his companion. "Well, that's the last visitor we shall see till Sorensen turns up in three months time!" the trader observed. "We ought to have got used to one another by then!" To be continued

Mach 0.97—Mach 0.98—Mach 0.99—MACH 1... Tap Tap—Mach 1 Plus!

To the civilian the speed of sound is about 765 miles per hour. But to the keen, young RCAF fighter pilot the speed of sound is at "Mach 1".

On his instrument panel, as the needle of the Mach-meter hits "Mach 1" he hears a light tap-tapping on the canopy behind his head... and swoosh... he's beyond the speed of sound.

Today, breaking the sound barrier is no problem to him. In his Sabre jet, he does it all the time.

If you can measure up, you too can be a Jet Pilot in the RCAF... enjoy the thrills and opportunities of the new era of supersonic aviation. Decide now to fly for Canada.
