CONTRACT BRIDGE By B. JAY BECKER

spades, considering his three little clubs and other losers that required assistance. But North had sufficient all - around values to continue on to four spades and that became the final contract. Par for North - South was to reach four spades. Par for East-West, was to defeat the contract. The natural lead for West is the singleton club, and the natural play for East is to cash his three club tricks immediately. The burden of defense falls upon West who must be careful to make the correct discards on the clubs, otherwise the contract is fulfilled.

It will be noted that if West throws two diamonds on the high clubs as East cashes them, South will inevitably score ten tricks consisting of seven spades and three diamonds. West should allow for the possibility declarer is void of hearts. This is not an extreme view to take, since seven hearts are in open sight in dummy. West should discard the six of hearts and then the ace of hearts as East cashes his clubs. A heart return then by East guarantees West a trump trick regardless of what declarer does. Aces are not ordinarily tossed about with reckless abandon, but where the discard of an ace is necessary to assure defeat of a contract the deed must be done.

Pearson Suggests Free Trade For The North American Area

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (CP) — North America's best economic interests lie in gradual establishment of a North Atlantic free trade area, Liberal Leader Pearson said Tuesday night. Mr. Pearson said most Canadians would be reluctant to accept free trade with the United States, or North American economic inter-dependence, because they believe it would mean United States domination of Canada. However, Canada recognized that the great need today is for an expanding and diversified export trade. "So we wish to recreate the North Atlantic triangle on a broader basis and with a more formal arrangement than that which existed in the past," he said. "Our best interests—and I believe your (American) best interests—lie in the gradual establishment of a North Atlantic area with the freest possible trade."

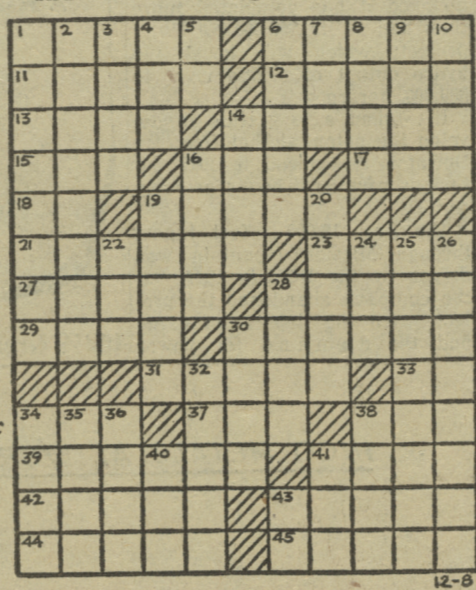

No Bottled Christmas Gifts, Five Provinces In Agreement

By THE CANADIAN PRESS No two provinces in Canada have the same approach to liquor control but five are agreed on one point: No bottled gifts at Christmas. A Canadian Press survey shows Saskatchewan, Ontario, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland have laws against giving or receiving liquor during the festive season—or any other time of year. Despite the laws many residents of the five provinces are bound to find a bottle under their Christmas tree. "It's illegal, although we know a lot of it is done," said J. J. MacIntyre, chief of the Nova Scotia Liquor Commission. "Well now, I wouldn't say it was legal, but I know it's done," said a secretary for the Newfoundland Liquor Control office. The Ontario Liquor Control Board has issued a warning against accepting liquor as a Christmas gift. It's just as illegal as giving it, said the board, and the onus is on a person with liquor to prove he obtained it legally.
