IN MEMORIAM Alberton, United Church Guild

CHARLES COSTAIN

Charles Costain, well known and well loved fisherman of Ebbesfleet, P. E. Island, passed away at his home on Saturday morning, August 30th, at 10 o'clock.

Three Christ-like qualities he had: firm undiminished faith in God; his love for little children; the world knew he was kind, for saint and sinner called him friend.

After sixty years, occupied with the ancient and humble task of fishing which, for him, combined pleasure and duty, he has entered his last haven.

An orphan from early childhood, having missed the benefits of the school built by his fathers, he learned to love the sea, perhaps because his forbears built their farmstead near its shores, on the western coast of P. E. Island.

When first settled on the untilled virgin soil, crowded by forest trees, perhaps, too, it was that in his heart there called to him through dim forgotten years, the innate blood of Celtic isles washed by the sunset seas.

A philosophic wisdom, born not of books and learning's lore, set him apart, a gentle heart that nourished a gentle mind born of a gentle race. The learned taught in wisdom's arts and crafts found knowledge there that quite confounded years of study, search and thought.

Class he knew not, for he loved only good, the great and the lowly, with love not unrequited. Himself a simple fisherman, called strangely forth the love and interest of the proudest and most learned, as also, of the crowd that daily laboured at his side.

Faults and failings, he had a number as the natural man might measure, but his great kind heart and magnetic personality outweighed all imperfections, neither did they drag down his soul, nor did vain pride and aspiration puff up ambition into the dangerous atmosphere of life.

He lived, loved, toiled and gave liberally of his worldly goods to needy ones about him, asking naught of life but a small boat, favouring winds, calm seas, and daily bread.

His natural gift of wholesome humour, and something of original, spicy wit, fell among his associates like beams of sunshine, glinting through the clouds and rains of daily life, at work as also in his later years of retirement.

The religious teachings of his gentle father's home, revered to the end, more in practical life than in public demonstration, had a part in all his activities, as also in his conversation. "There is One above who directs all things" was his favourite conclusive argument in all controversy.

He saw the cross fall neglected, by the spire of the church built by his fathers and the church itself finally sold to the church in which he had learned his Bible, where, beside his dear and gentle mother, he had listened to his father directing his choir and leading with gifted voice in holy song. He only said, "God doeth all things well".

Disension he shunned retirement, finding at last God's altar on the sea and heaven everywhere.

His love for little children seemed to increase with years and drew them to him ever. His greatest delight, only to grieve with childlike joy, their sport and pleasure, in moments of relaxed talk, and have his love requited by kiss, embrace and laughter.

The sea and land yielded their secrets of nature and history to his meditative interest and many were the curios and trophies that decked the walls of his home—Indian arrows, stone axes, corals, shells, sea plants, were but a few of the wonders of nature from which he learned the miracles of God's world, lessons in which few books had part except the Bible, of which his knowledge and interpretation quite amazed the theologian, seer of schools and books.

Thus fortified by faith, assured quite of God's wisdom, love and care, he bided his three score years, harvesting from the deep, daily, except Sunday, the rewards of honest toil.

The ranges are lined up at last. The voyage of life is near its close. Angels from the ports of heaven beckon home, welcoming the weary pilgrim in victory o'er his last great foe.

The last great storm is past. Beyond the bourne of time and place so shall he rest. Safe sheltered ever more upon the breast of Him who stilled the stormy waves of Galilee.

MacLeod - Ellands Wedding

One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place at Con-way United Church at four o'clock on Friday, September 5th, when Verna Eleanor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ellands of McNeill's Mills, P. E. I., exchanged marriage vows with Obadiah Ramsay, son of Mr. Alexander MacLeod and the late Mrs. MacLeod, of Victoria West, P. E. I.

The church was beautifully decorated with pink and white streamers, wedding bells and standards of gladiol and mixed flowers forming the floral setting for an arch of asparagus fern and sweet peas. The guest pews were prettily decorated with sweet peas tied with white satin ribbon.

Rev. J. A. MacDonald performed the ceremony and Mrs. Erland Ramsay, Conway, was in charge of the wedding music. Little Miss Ruth Ramsay, Conway, sang very sweetly, "O Promise Me," during the signing of the register.

The youthful bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Lemuel Day, Wellington, made a charming appearance as she entered the church dressed in her wedding gown of pale blue net over nylon sheer with white accessories. She carried a bouquet of red roses with maiden hair fern.

The bridesmaid, Miss Freda MacLeod, sister of the groom, was attractively attired in pink taffeta with white accessories. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses with maiden hair fern.

The groom was supported by Mr. Clarence Ellands, brother of the bride, while Mr. Gordon Murray and Mr. Peter Miller were ushers.

The bride's mother chose for her daughter's wedding, a brown crepe dress with matching accessories and wore a corsage of pink rosebuds.

Following the ceremony a reception for sixty guests was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the rooms were tastefully decorated with bouquets of flowers. The bride's table was centered with a three tier wedding cake and miniature bride and groom in an arch, made by Mrs. Gordon Millar, and decorated by Mrs. Stanley Hutchinson. Those assisting in serving were Mrs. Clayton Day, Mrs. Stanley Hutchinson, Mrs. James Williams, Miss Beth Ramsay and Miss Muriel Wall.

Mr. and Mrs. MacLeod left on a brief honeymoon, touring New Brunswick. On their return, they will reside in Victoria West where the groom is a successful farmer. Their many friends join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. MacLeod all success in their married life.
