CHICKENS COME HOME TO ROOST. 'You may take the world as it comes and go. And you will be sure to find that fate will square the account she owes. Whoever comes out behind; And all things bad that a man has done, By whatsoever induced, Return at last to him, one by one. As the chickens come home to roost. You may scrape and toil and pinch and while your hoarded wealth expands, Till the cold, dark shadow of the grave Is nearing your life's last and sad stage. You will have your balance struck some night. And you'll find your hoard reduced; You'll view your life in another light. When the chickens come home to roost. Sow as you will, there's time to reap, For the good and bad as well; And conscience, whether we wake or sleep, Is neither a heaven or hell. And every wrong will find its place, And every passion loosed. Drifts back and meets you face to face— When the chickens come home to roost. Whether you're over or under the sod, The result will be the same; You cannot escape the hand of God, You must reap what you have sown. No matter what's carved on a marble stone. When the items are all produced, You'll reap exactly as you have sown, When the chickens come home to roost. —Cable.

Remarkable Rivers. Several rivers which enter the sea some distance from land are known. The following is the explanation: In limestone districts, streams of water, and even rivers of considerable size, often sink into the earth through crevices and run for miles under ground. They usually reappear at the surface at a lower level, and continue their course above ground, but in some cases they flow upwards till they pass below the bed of the ocean, and when they find an exit they flow into the sea. Their waters, being higher than salt water, rise to the surface. Several of these submarine rivers are known in the Mediterranean. The most remarkable is Anavolo, in the Argolic Gulf, between Kiveri and Astros, where a body of fresh water, fifty feet in diameter, rises with such force a quarter of a mile from shore as to produce a visible convexity of the surface and to disturb the sea for several hundred feet around. A similar case is said by Humboldt to occur off the South coast of Cuba, and others exist in the Pacific among the Sandwich Islands.

The Russian Officer's Honor. Two young Russian officers attached to the Orsk infantry regiment recently quarrelled over their cups in a cafe chantant at Orenburg, and one of them struck the other across the cheek with his open hand. The subalterns were intimate comrades, and the aggressor made an ample and satisfactory apology when he came to his senses. This was cordially accepted by his friend, but the regimental court of honor decreed that the officers should fight, and a duel was arranged with pistols at twenty paces. The young lieutenant had received the affront and forgiven his friend was hit in the thigh and crippled, and consequently is unfit for further service. The tragicomic proceedings of these military courts of honor (writes our correspondent) are as stupid as they are mischievous.—London Daily News. Bananas, California oranges and lemons received this morning at Beer & Goff's.

Not a Successful Remedy. "Doctor, didn't I understand you to say that brandy is a good remedy for dyspepsia?" asked a Dallas society lady of her family physician. "Yes, Mrs. Yerger, it is an excellent remedy." "I don't agree with you, Doctor. Before I kept brandy in the house my husband had dyspepsia every few weeks, but now he suffers from it every day, and it seems to be getting worse and worse."—Texas Siftings.

Not in His Line. "The palmist tells us about the line of life, the line of fate and all the other lines," observed Mrs. Morecomb, who was interested in the science, "but the palmist who wrote this book—" "Have you been buying a book on palmistry?" asked Morecomb. "Why, yes." "Had your hand looked at, too, I suppose?" "I have." "What did it cost?" "Only $5. H'm! What did the palmist say about your line of economy?" "He didn't say anything. There isn't any such line, is there?" "If there is," snorted Morecomb, "the palmist never sees it in the hand of anybody who visits him!"—Chicago Tribune.

An authority on weather declares that tornadoes are most frequent between noon and 6 o'clock, and that the rainiest hour of the day is 4 o'clock in the afternoon. This is the report of a meteorological expert, not a weather prophet. The Eskimo Bulletin is the only journal published within the arctic circle. It is printed at Cape Prince of Wales, Alaska, and is issued only once a year. Two tons of dynamite exploded under a steam vessel in New York harbor to get it out of the way lifted the water for about two acres fully 500 feet. There is less difference between the ancient and the modern Greek tongues than between Chaucer's English and the English of today. All is Grist to the Grindstone. Flossie (little daughter of a newspaper woman)—Oh, mamma, Mabel and I have a lovely secret about our dolls. I'd like to tell you, only— Her Mother—Only what, Flossie? Flossie—Only I'm afraid you'd write it up.—New York Times.

Too Much Government. Patron—That bread you sold me was stale. Baker—Yah, I com'd to my country and go to work mit a horse an wagon, and bakery and a schmell boy. Virst dot Society for de Prevention of Cruelty to Animals makes me droubles about mine horse, and den dot Society for de Prevention of Cruelty to Shildren makes me droubles about dot schmell boy. Now vot can I do? Maybe, if I fresh bread zell, von society for de prevention of cruelty to dyspeptics will zend me to dot penitentiary.—New York Weekly.

The Sweetest Place on Earth. Kezanlik is beyond all dispute the sweetest smelling place on earth. It lies on the upper Tunja, near the foot of the Shipkas pass, in a valley full of rosebushes. Kezanlik is the chief seat of the industry in attar of roses. It takes 20,000 of the roses that grow in that valley to yield by distillation as much genuine attar or otto of roses as equals in weight a 50 cent piece.—Exchange.

Rubbing It In. Never use a liniment for rheumatism, say a high medical authority. Don't rub it in—drive it out. Take something that removes the acid poison from the blood—take something that will improve your digestion and build up the body to the erection of robust health. That "something" is Scott's Sarsaparilla, a remedy that obtains the best results in the shortest time. $1 of all druggists.

A MOTHER. Could I but have my baby back again From the dim vastness of the great unknown, How would it ease my poor heart's silent pain As I sit here in shadow and alone! That heaven is vast but makes me more afraid, Who shall its hesitating footsteps guide? Far cooler the nest my love had made, Or so my heart feels, since my baby died. Cold was the night I left my bosom warm— A night of wintry tempests and wild wild into that world of darkness and of storm Went forth alone my little toddling child. I lay alone, for who hears angels' feet? Faint as the throes, though we dream they come? We hear not even death, the robber fleet? We only know a void is in our home. Mother! the very name is sorrow's own. A synonym for heartache and for trial; 'Tis she must tread the wine press all alone, And when the tears would start must wear a smile. What is the faith of priest, of Christian brother, Of mislead bishop, though they kiss the roset? Weak seems their worship when a trusting mother Yields up her pretty, smiling babe to God. —Arkansas Traveler.

In a Hurry to Get There. "If our will never get down town at this slow gait," said a restless, pale faced woman as she handed her fare to a Third Avenue surface conductor the other night. "For a time the conductor was silent. Then, turning, he whispered: "Do you see the glitter in her eyes?" "Yes, very plainly." "In another hour she will be crazy." As the car rolled down the Bowery the woman looked through the window, and the light fell full in her face. Her eyes gleamed red and bright. Then the conductor leaped in at the door and said: "It isn't far now—only a few blocks more." "You fool," she replied, "how dare you drive so slowly! Had I known this I should have come another way," and half rising from her seat she glared through the door. The conductor smiled sadly. "If ever there was a hopeless case," he muttered, "hers is one." "Have you known her long?" was asked. "Yes, a year or more. She often comes down on my late run. At first she was quiet enough, but now she grows worse and worse." "What caused her insanity?" "Insanity," he turned as though in astonishment. "Why, she is not insane. She hits the pipe. Wait till we get to the Chinese district and you will see." His words were true. She left the car at Mott street.—New York Herald.

Women and Actors. Capone, the French tenor, was the recipient of volumes of letters from lady admirers both here and in Paris. On the English stage, besides Mr. Irving, Mr. Alexander, Mr. Hare and Mr. Bancroft have been overworked with a goodly number. But I am told by one who knows that no actor living ever received such a number of admiring epistles from the fairer sex as the late John Clayton. Among actresses Mrs. Bancroft has perhaps the most of the kindest attentions. Mrs. John Wood, too, on the first or last night of her play had always her dressing room converted into a perfect bowery of flowers, and little gifts of jewelry literally poured in upon her. There was an inscriptions on the inscription "Bless your art." Whether it was Mrs. Woods' heart or that that was blessed remains a riddle to this day.—London Gentlewoman.

The Mexican Boundary Line. The international boundary line between the United States and the republic of Mexico is marked by pyramids of stones placed at irregular distances along the line all the way from the Rio Grande to the Pacific ocean. Wherever it was found practicable to do so these pyramids were built on prominent peaks at road crossings, fords, etc. The line was not surveyed, as is the usual custom, the location of the monuments being based on astronomical calculations and observations.—St. Louis Republic.

A Farsighted Man. Fogg—Munnivorth was always a farsighted man, and his ventures were almost invariably successful. Figg—But what good is he to society? He will give money for the heathen, thousands of miles away, but he never can see the suffering right at home. Fogg—He was a farsighted man, —Boston Transcript.
