THE CONFERENCE

Dr. Carman's Rousing Speeches.

The Christian Minister in Politics.

Methodist Indian Missions and State Aid.

FRIDAY, JUNE 24.

Morning session met at 9 o'clock.

Retiring President Harrison led in prayer.

service lasting for one hour, participated in by clergymen and laymen alternately.

The service closed with a powerful and impressive prayer by Dr. Carman.

General Conference Superintendent.

After singing a hymn Dr. Carman took the chair and the Conference roll was called.

the delegates with few exceptions answering to their names. Balloting for the choice of a President was called and some six names or more were put in nomination on the first ballot.

of whom the favorites were Rev. Elias Slackford and Rev. Isaac Howie. On the fifth ballot Rev. Elias Slackford was elected president, with Rev. I. Howie a close second.

The President elect amid enthusiastic cheering was called to the platform, and briefly addressed the Conference.

Mr. Slackford spoke feelingly of his conversion, under the late Rev. Mr. Smallwood in the old Methodist Church of Charlottetown some 40 years ago; and now near the spot where he took his first vows to God and the Methodist Church.

the Conference had paid him this high honor. He thanked them for his election, and hoped to prove worthy of the trust confided in him.

Rev. Thos. Marshall was re-elected secretary but resigned on the ground that he had held the position four years. His resignation was accepted and on ballot Rev. James Crisp was elected secretary.

Dr. Carman's Address.

Rev. Dr. Carman being called upon came forward and delivered a powerful and eloquent address, of which we regret to be unable to give a verbatim report to our readers. The address was characterized by freshness of thought, intensity of conviction and a general mastery of the situation which few but Dr. Carman could command.

He began by expressing his pleasure in attending a Methodist conference in Charlottetown, the capital of this beautiful Isle of the sea, which in his opinion was nearer his ideal of the "Better Land" than anything he could think of.

Al though this conference was not so large as others it was marked by the spirit of brotherly love and was happily rid of the rush and drive of business usual on such occasions. Here was more room for the play of sentiment and these quieter but most potent influences. The speaker expressed his delight in the progress of their educational institutions at Sackville, which he considered were everything that could be desired from top to foundation stone.

The Dr. spoke in a happy easy manner, and paid a high compliment to the college professor the christian editor, but said the greatest of all was to be a mighty revivalist preacher. Commendatory words were also spoken of the Wesleyan newspaper, and the work that had been accomplished through Epworth League Societies. As far as the Christian Endeavor Society was concerned he wished it well, if good comes to our own institutions by its broader fraternity. Its success was attributed to the harmony of its principles with the methods long in practice in the Methodist church. We want no dried up Methodism, if it is not living bread we offer our young people we dare not in the interests of Christ's kingdom forbid them in going out to seek it among others. He would not say that God intended the conversion of the world only through Methodists, but there is much we cannot give up. Let us avoid, as it is said, "slapping over" sentiment, that is it makes no difference what a man believes. There are the great conquering doctrines, knowledge of sin, the demonstration of the spirit, personal faith in God, we can never surrender.

In ritualism and worldly pomp we are left far behind, perceiving to be distinguished by our simple faith, self-sacrifice and toil in God's service.

The Church can not live within itself but must go work as to permeate all worldly affairs. It must not be content to keep away from the evils in the world it must lay hold of all moral reforms.

Here is the liquor traffic, monopolies, and tyranny which grinds down the widow and orphan facing us.

The Mission of Christ is in vain if it does not affect these. Nothing outside of practical, experimental religion that takes hold of the moral and political and social forces can destroy them. It was often said preachers should not go into politics. He took the other side of the question.

If he were a merchant he would not go into politics, he might lose the sale of his goods; if he were a mechanic he might lose the shoeing of a horse; if a doctor and a grit he could not give a tory pill and contravise; if a lawyer he might lose his fees, but being a minister of Jesus Christ he dare not stay out of politics—the great political and moral questions which affect the welfare of the human race. He did not see a better thing to do than settle down on the liquor traffic. If political parties had taken hold of this ten years ago when the opportunity was given them, it would have spared us an infinite amount of confusion and disgrace.

There are more important matters than commercial policies. It was degrading to a country to pivot its destinies on such. Men will not make heroes debating questions like these. The venerable gentleman waxed eloquent and seemed inspired with youthful vigor as he denounced in scathing words the bootlegging and corruption of modern days, and told of the pain that had come to his heart, when those whom he had looked upon as tried and trusted had been swallowed up in the vortex of disgrace. Don't preach, my brethren, said the speaker, but Grit in and put Tories out, but preach boldly and fearlessly the principles of the doctrine of Jesus Christ, which would destroy all such iniquity. He declared if there were two things in the world he loved it was his church and his country. They are here together to do a grand providential work for this Dominion, the only satisfaction he saw in the extensive emigration of our people to the States was in the fact that they needed them, and the grand work they were there accomplishing for God. God has given us a great heritage in this Canada of ours and it comes to us to be a true, an honest and a patriotic people. Religion and patriotism have always been bible sentiments, and mine, said the Dr.

He never wanted to see the day when any other flag waved over these provinces. A union of church and state was not desirable, but he firmly believed in a union of religion and patriotism. While we are building up a church we should not let politicians run away with our country; we want it for our children and grandchildren. The church must bring its influence to bear that only good men are sent to parliament. We must get clear of political knives and tricksters. Elected only honest men who have conscientious convictions and beliefs; there are questions of ten times greater import than "protection" or party considerations.

It is a trick of the devil to make men believe the preacher has no right to meddle with politics. Let Methodists brethren preach, practise and speak out plainly that every man may do this duty as a true citizen as well as a Christian. Dr. Carman was loudly cheered at the close of his speech. The benediction was pronounced by the President.

Afternoon Session.

Conference met at 2.30, the General Superintendent in the chair.

Rev. Dr. Lathern, of the N. S. Conference, and editor of the Wesleyan was introduced and in a brief speech conveyed to the Conference the greetings of the Nova Scotian brethren.

Rev. A. C. Dennis was appointed reporter for the Wesleyan.

The Conference placed on record its appreciation of Rev. Mr. Dobson, who removes from the Conference. Various Committees were then appointed.

It was unanimously agreed to place on record the Conference's appreciation of the able manner in which the retiring President, Rev. Mr. Harrison had discharged the duties of his office.

The following young men were granted permission to attend Sackville University for one year with aid:—

Hedley D. Marr, St. John District.

Sedgwick Bailey, St. Stephen District.

J. S. Gregg, Miramichi District.

W. P. Reid, Sackville District.

Harry Harrison, St. Stephen District.

Rev. Mr. Chapman, being first reserve, was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of Rev. Mr. Dobson, in the list of general conference delegates. Not having much to do this afternoon, Conference adjourned itself in electing a first reserve. Twenty three votes were necessary for a choice. Until the third ballot the votes were scattered too widely to make an election. Rev. Mr. Howie was chosen.

Mr. Evans, chairman of the missionary committee, reported for the year as follows:

St. John district 1764.76

Fredericton " 1528.03

Conference met again at 5.15. Several reports were read and the adjournment was moved.

Stirring Missionary Addresses.

The evening session opened by singing and prayer by Rev. John A. Clarke. A very pleasing anthem was rendered by the choir, after which Rev. E. Evans, Secretary of the Missionary Society, read the
