that he had not been a carrier boy because "I was brought up where they didn't distribute newspapers."

But in a message to Canadian carrier boys, the prime minister said "in their work our newspaper boys are demonstrating qualities of initiative and seriousness of purpose for which they are to be commended."

The boys received the certificates, in recognition of the good job they do day by day, on behalf of some 25,000 carrier boys across the country.

Ottawa's three daily papers, The Citizen, The Journal and French language Le Droit, each selected one of its carriers to receive an award on the basis of his work and personality.

Atlantic Provs. Now Ready To Help Themselves

By FORBES RHUDE

Canadian Press Business Editor HALIFAX (CP) — The Atlantic provinces today are united and ready to help themselves, C. W. Wilson of Truro, N.S., president of the Maritime Board of Trade, said Sunday at the board's annual meeting.

He was speaking in his annual report, of the establishment of the Atlantic Provinces Economic Council, which held its first meeting here Sept. 28.

The council's objective is to make an assessment of Maritime resources and the best way of developing them.

A. I. Barrows of Halifax, reporting to the meeting on the council, said formation of such a body few years ago seemed impossible; more recently it had seemed improbable; but now it was a fact.

The Maritime board presented the new baby, formed in co-operation with the four provincial governments, in time for the arrival of business men from across Canada who are taking an eight-day look at the Atlantic provinces in connection with the annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

CAMPBELLTON GREETING

En route to Halifax, delegates from other parts of Canada traveling by special train were greeted Saturday by the city and Board of Trade of Campbellton, in northern New Brunswick; and then spent 12 hours as guests of the city and board of Moncton.

The Moncton stay included a tour of the city and its industries, a visit to a lobster plant at Shediac on Northumberland strait, and then a lobster dinner at Moncton. Sunday at Truro, W. J. Borrie of Vancouver, president of the Canadian Chamber, presented a gavel to W. H. Yeadon, president of Truro's board of trade to mark its 65th anniversary.

Delegates were guests of the Halifax Board of Trade at a reception Sunday.

The Maritime board will continue its meetings today. The Canadian chamber will hold meetings of its policy committee, and general sessions Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Stassen Works On "Save Asia" Economic Plan

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Harold Stassen, director of the United States' foreign aid program, is working on a "save Asia" economic scheme which he hopes to unveil at the Colombo Plan meeting in Ottawa next week, an official source told Reuters Saturday.

Details of the plan were not disclosed, but it was learned that Stassen favors a two-fold plan which would:

1. In a "crash operation" speed up the evacuation and relief of refugees from Communist-occupied Viet Nam in Indo-China and strengthen the economy of the south. This portion of the plan would be aimed at preventing the Communists from exploiting the vacuum left by the armistice.

2. In a long-range operation, build strong and prosperous national economies in Asia through direct aid, low-cost loans, technical assistance and trade stimuli.

Stassen will lead the American delegation to the 14-power Colombo plan consultative committee meeting beginning Monday.

Members of the Colombo plan are: Australia, New Zealand, Britain, Pakistan, Ceylon, India, United States, Laos, Viet Nam, Cambodia, Burma, Thailand, Nepal and Canada.

Communist Journalist Nabbed As "Third Man" in French Defence Scandal

By PIERRE LEGROS

PARIS (AP)—Andre Baranes, a Communist journalist nabbed as the "third man" in France's defence leaks scandal, Sunday was formally charged with endangering the security of the state.

A military instructor magistrate, Maj. Jean de Resseguiere, lodged the charge against Baranes quoted by authorities as confessing that he relayed secret information on meetings of the National Defence Council to the Communists even while serving as an informer for French police.

Under French law, an instructing magistrate acts as a sort of one-man grand jury. If convicted, Baranes would face a maximum of 10 years in prison and a fine of 4,800,000 Francs ($13,713).

CIVIL SERVANTS HELD

Two high civil servants were arrested Friday on a charge of giving secret information to non-qualified persons.

The two, both extreme leftists, are Roger Labrousse, who was in charge of "national protection" at the defence ministry, and Rene Turpin, chief of the personal secretariat of the defence ministry's secretary general, Jean Mons.

Mons was suspended Saturday by telephoned order of Premier Pierre Mendes-France on suspicion of endangering the security of the state through negligence. He was not jailed. His office is a clearing house for the most vital French military secrets.

FLED ON BICYCLE

Police informants said Baranes—arrested in east central France Saturday in flight on a woman's bicycle toward the Swiss frontier—admitted a role in the leakage during 15 hours of uninterrupted questioning by four French counter-espionage agents.

Sees Maritimes

generally between the Maritimes and other parts of Canada. However, in such a regard, the preponderance of class-rated traffic flows between central Canada and this territory, the net result would be further increases in freight rate charges to persons and industries in the four Atlantic provinces.

"Maritime shippers are finding their competitive situation transportation-wise worsening from day to day and, with implementation of equalization, will find their relative position in many instances further adversely aggravated."

The commission last May had passed a resolution opposing any rate proposals which would in any way jeopardize Canadian export trade and the use of Maritime ports. The resolution had been prompted "by certain rate proposals which if implemented, would result in increased charges on export and import traffic through Maritime ports."

WANT UNIFORM SIGNS

H. W. Jamer, of Saint John, N. B. reporting on traffic safety, said a comprehensive safety program should be developed in all provinces. Experience had shown that establishment of uniform traffic signals, signs, markings and regulations were an essential primary step in the development of such a program.

Despite constant interchange of motorists in the Maritime provinces, there still were a number of important differences in the systems of signals and markings. He added:

"A New Brunswick driver, who is accustomed to comparatively rigid enforcement of the regulations governing crossing a solid white line on curves, hills, etc., is invariably amazed and confused by the apparent disregard for such lines by Nova Scotia drivers."

Edmonton's Oldest Citizen 101 Sunday

EDMONTON, (CP) — Believed Edmonton's oldest citizen Alexander W. Josey celebrated his 101st birthday Sunday.

A contractor here for 20 years before retiring at the age of 90, the native of Spry Bay, N.S., had a hand in construction of many of Edmonton's best-known landmarks.

New Prospect For S. A. Premier

By the account of these informants:

Baranes admitted passing on to the Communists information which he said he received from Labrousse. He said Labrousse dictated the information directly to him, or sometimes gave it to him through intermediaries.

The dejected-looking Red writer said he had never met Turpin and had no contact with him. This conformed with statements police attributed to Turpin.

Baranes said he had given information to Jean Dides, chief police inspector, but only after it had been altered by the Communist party. Dides, an anti-Communist, was suspended two weeks ago after counter-intelligence agents found in his possession a report of a meeting of the national defence council—secret material he was not supposed to have. The chief said he got the paper from Baranes.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, (Reuters)—South Africa's 72-year-old finance minister, Nicholas Havenga, is No. 1 candidate for the South African premiership if Daniel Malan retires.

Reports that Malan would give up the post have been heard frequently since his 80th birthday last May. Though Malan has rebutted the reports, it appears likely that he may not be able to postpone a retirement decision much longer.

But it is not considered likely that he will give up active political leadership before the next session of Parliament in January, when the climax may come for one of key racial segregation measures—removal of colored mixed blood voters from the common electoral roll in Cape Province.

For the last three years this issue has been the core of a bitter political fight between Malan's Nationalists and the opposition United party.

Reports of the prime ministers impending retirement have gained strength from the fact that his private home at Stellenbosch, outside Capetown, has recently been reconditioned.

Despite his age he has shown few signs of fatigue in the last year, but his public appearances have been fewer.

One thing that may have influenced him to remain in office is his desire to push through his program of strict racial segregation.

He is reported anxious to have Havenga succeed him, although there is determined support within the Nationalist ranks for 60-year-old Lands Minister Johannes Strydom as his successor.

Strydom is the party's "strong man" and Malan and Strydom have been reported as leaders of rival factions within the Nationalist government.

The Shrine that went forth to greet the Emperor. Bandagi, a holy man who died in 1568 and is buried under a shrine in Amethi, District of Lucknow, India, regretted to his dying day that the Emperor Akbar (1542-1602) never found time to come and visit him so that he could show the ruler his reverence. Ten years after Bandagi's death Akbar finally visited Amethi and it was on that occasion that his disciples moved the holy man's shrine six paces so that the dead man would have the satisfaction of having advanced to honor the monarch.—Tomorrow: The community that is a cemetery for old houses.
