NOT THE WAY IT WAS.

Things Had Not Changed at All Since He Was Young.

Three young men were sitting together in the rotunda of one of the big hotels. They were discussing the progress of invention.

"It's strange," said one, "how completely old ways of doing things have been superseded. You may talk about its being hard to introduce inventions, but if a scheme is any good it'll be universally adopted nowadays in no time.

At this juncture a man with entirely gray hair folded his paper preparatory to departing and looked at the crowd near him. One of them, observing him, ventured to ask what he thought about it.

"Pretty nearly right, I guess," he said. "Now, I suppose," began another, "you can remember when the horse car was the only known method of metropolitan conveyance, when bicycles were a thing to come, when telephones were an experiment, when they didn't make any ice in July, when most of the steel in buildings was in the door locks, when newspapers printed two sheets and thought them heavy, when fountain pens were an undisturbed dream, when aluminium was a theory and when harvesters were beginning to be talked about."

"No," returned the person addressed. "I'd like to agree with you, but I can't do it. The facts are otherwise. When I was a young man, business men used typewriters. A good many were thinking about putting in a phonograph. People who didn't own any bicycles or feel like paying for a cab usually traveled around town in a cable or electric car. Telephones cost 10 cents a try just as they do now, unless you knew somebody you could sponge on. Airships would go up and come down pretty much as they do now. The Sunday papers were so full of ads that it took till Monday to find anything to read. Smoke consumers were making Chicago a beautiful place to live in."

The gathering was now looking incredulous. Things seemed to need an explanation. So he concluded: "You see, I got this gray hair trying to make a soda water manufactory pay in Kansas. Then a beard will add a few years. I was 27 last March."—Chicago Times-Herald.

McMillan & Hornsby's QUEEN STREET

THE FUNNY ENGLISHMAN.

Some of the Pranks He Plays on His Unsuspecting Victims.

To successfully annoy a policeman is quite one of the little arts. Try this: Go up to the Bobby and say, "Please can you direct me to such and such an address?" To which Bobby answers, "Go straight down there, take the first turning to the right, the second to the left and the first to the right again."

And here is a new way of aggravating mathematicians. Say to your victim: "Think of a number; double it; multiply it by 9; add 165; subtract 17; divide it by 22; add 365," and so on until the man begins to get impatient.

Which reminds me of a simply horrid game for ladies I once invented. Here it is: "Think of your age; multiply it by 2, and then you get your real age."

I will conclude with a piece of advice—a warning. Without doubt the person best adapted for the profession of a practical joker is a champion of the racing track. The man who lacks that fleetness of foot, and yet wishes to practical joke, had better wear at least treble seated trousers—London Exchange.

To Write on Glass.

The easiest way to write or paint on glass is to take a solution of fish glue and distribute it with a soft brush over the surface of the glass. Of course the solution must be carefully filtered, and when it is applied to the glass pane the glass must be held over a stove or lamp in a slanting direction to allow the surplus solution to flow off and to dry thoroughly without streaking.

Balloon Accidents.

"The cause of so many balloon accidents," says Professor William Kendall, an aeronaut of Philadelphia, "lies in the fact that the beginner does not realize what a delicate piece of mechanism a balloon is, and, after having been employed about a balloon outfit for one season, imagines he knows it all. These people manage to get a balloon, usually an old, weather beaten affair, and then secure an engagement at some amusement park. Statistics show that nine out of every ten such aeronauts meet with accidents, and in nine cases out of ten it is all because they haven't mastered the intricacies of their profession."

HERO AND MAN.

Stories That Are Told of the Great Duke of Wellington.

The worlds of reminiscence and history agree that there was some thing about the Duke of Wellington which rendered empty pretense quite impossible in his company. He was absolutely genuine, a man without vanity or desire of display.

"Oh," said he, "it's very easily done! We pommelled them, they pommelled us, and I suppose we pommelled the hardest. So we gained the day."

"I make no distinction in the service. Those gentlemen had paid me the compliment of a visit, and I invited them to dinner. You were not among them. So I omitted you in the invitation."

"What do you mean by a bargain?" asked the duke.

"It was valued at £1,100," said the steward, "and we got it for £800."

"In that case," said the duke, "you will be kind enough to carry the extra £300 to the late owner and never to talk to me of cheap land again."—Youth's Companion.

SHINTO OFFERINGS.

ocular Gifts With Which the Japs Decorate the Shrines of the Gods.

The influences of the nineteenth century have little affected the real spirit of Shinto, if they can be said to have done so at all, in any part of Japan. The faith remains not less earnest, though its manifestations often assume a character peculiar to the Meiji era.

At nearly all of the greater temples and at many of the smaller ones you can see spoils of the war with China. Among these are gatling and Armstrong guns, canister shot and 32 centimeter shells, manlicher rifles and martini, bolt revolvers and Winchester repeaters, not to speak of Chinese banners, uniforms and lances—a vast part of the captured armament having been thus disposed of.

The festival for the military dead is celebrated now with horse races and with modern gymnastic games. But the old belief in the real presence of hero souls makes the same appeal as in other days to the heart of camps. How little also the influence of Buddhism has been weakened, even in the military world, may be divined from the fact of the great festival held in 1896 on behalf of the spirits of the cavalry horses that perished in the war.—Lafcadio Hearn in Atlantic.
