

Says More Women Needed On Bench

HAMILTON—(CP)—Judge Helen Kinnear of Cayuga, who has been presiding over Haldimand County Court for nine years, feels it's high time other Canadian women were given a chance to sit on the bench.

Judge Kinnear, who believes she is the only woman judge in the Commonwealth, said in an interview here while attending the Ontario Bar Association meeting that despite tradition, there is no reason why there should not be more women judges.

stenographer were all women. Judge Kinnear is a pleasant-looking woman who wears quiet shades and uses just a trace of make-up. Her wavy brown hair is streaked with grey.

RESCUED FROM ICE

BORDEN, P.E.I.—(CP)—An exhausted deer struggling among the ice cakes in Northumberland Strait was rescued by crew members of the ferry Abegweit. The deer was revived in a warm cabin and turned over to police here. Now it is being nursed back to health on an Island farm.

Whirlwind

by Norma Newcomb CHAPTER NINE Part Three

Helen was rather surprised when she received the telephone call from Mike. She was engaged in washing the breakfast dishes when the phone rang, and had beat Sally to it only by a hair's breadth. But she was even more surprised when Mike told her why he wanted to see her.

Forced to speak guardedly, then realizing that guarded tones and words would get neither anywhere, she promised to meet him before going out for her swing-shift term of duty. Sally miffed, went back to the bedroom in a huff.

"A fine thing, Helen! It could have been for me."

"For you? Who'd telephone you?"

"I'm not exactly undesirable," Sally mentioned delicately. She posed in the doorway with a hand on her hip, rather pleasing even to Helen's jaded eye, in yellow pyjamas. "There's Philip, you know."

"Philip?" Helen just managed to control her start. "Have you read this morning's paper?"

"I refuse to read about Jimmy's escapades." Out went Sally's smile, like a light being switched off.

"On the society page it says that Philip and Catherine Wingate are to be married. The date is set for the first."

"You're lying!" Sally's voice was electric with fury. "You—You're lying!"

Helen picked the paper from the sofa and carried it over to her. She opened it, indicated the notices, then marched toward the kitchen, feeling just a bit angry herself. Liar, indeed!

CHAPTER TEN

Part One

"But it can't be, Helen. There must be some mistake. Philip is in love with me."

"How interesting."

"Well, he is. And you needn't be so sarcastic."

"And you should watch your tongue, Sally." Unable to control herself, Helen whirled to face her.

"It's about time that you realized that other people have feelings, too."

Surprised, the stewardess could only stare at her. Then she hurried forward soothingly. "I'm sorry, Helen, I—I just couldn't believe it."

"Well, you may believe it now."

"But . . ."

"It's quite true. I don't wish to discuss it further."

And Helen continued to the kitchen, so furious that she actually broke one of her prized willow-ware plates . . .

Mike threw up his hands in mock defense as he let her into the apartment a few hours later.

"Why not let her take her licking?"

"And Philip? Come, Helen. You know perfectly well I'm not built that way. Why should Sally ruin his life?"

"She won't. Haven't you seen the morning paper? Mr. Philip Jethrup and Miss Catherine Wingate are going to be married."

His face came aglow. "Then all we have to do is knock some sense into them and everything will be all right."

There passed peacefully away at his home in Crapaud, P.E.I. on Feb. 7 George L. Nicholson, one of Crapaud's oldest citizens at the age of eighty five years.

He was born at Crapaud on Feb. 16th 1867, son of the late George and Eliza Nicholson, and his entire life was lived at Crapaud. He married Annie McCallum of Brackley Beach three years ago. He has left to mourn his passing two sons, John on the homestead with whom he resided, and Hubert, a professor at the University of Vermont, seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, and one sister, Mrs. Joseph MacDonald, Seattle. His daughter Marion, Mrs. Ernest Harvey predeceased him two years ago.

The funeral was held on Feb. 9 with a short service at the home followed by service in Crapaud United Church. Both services were conducted by his pastor, the Rev. R. L. Bacon who so faithfully visited him in his falling years.

At the home the hymn, "The Lord's My Shepherd" was sung and at the church the choir with Mrs. John Simmons as organist, led in the singing of "Jesus Lover of My Soul" and "Rock of Ages".

The pallbearers were Charles Harvey, Gordon Dunsford, Joseph Trowsdale, John Rogerson, and John and Arthur Simmons. Burial was in Crapaud Cemetery.

Card Of Thanks

The family of the late George L. Nicholson wish to thank their neighbours and friends for the many kindnesses shown them at this time. Also to those who sent flowers and messages of sympathy.
