China's 'Brink Of War' Talk Seen Slanted To Russian Ears

An AP News Analysis
By WILLIAM L. RYAN

Communist China's brink-of-war talk about Southeast Asia, ostensibly aimed at the United States alone, could be intended just as much for Soviet ears.

By baiting the United States in Laos and South Viet Nam, Mao Tse-tung may also be angling for some sort of showdown with Premier Khrushchev.

Behind Peking's belligerence, sometimes mixed with touches of prudence, seems to be the Communist world's quarrel over strategy and tactics for Communist expansion. Peking wants the whole Communist world, including Soviet power, united in unrelenting pressure against imperialism, confident the West will crack and scornful of dangers involved.

Mao has a talent for frightening the Kremlin. The Russians say over since the 1957 world Communist meeting in Moscow, Mao has deliberately fostered the notion he welcomed the prospect of war, that even if 300,000,000 Chinese died it would be good because such a war would spell the end of imperialism.

There is a risk of war today from the Southeast Asian situation. The Chinese seem to have sniffed the distant smell of victory in Laos and South Viet Nam, and to be hoping the Americans can be driven out either by a new neutralization conference or by a determined war of attrition.

INSURANCE WANTED

Peking does not relish the idea this attractive prospect might be delayed or even thwarted by a significant increase in the U.S. effort in Southeast Asia. But if the increased U.S. efforts are to be countered by stepped-up Communist measures, Peking would like some insurance against accident.

Only the Russians could provide such insurance, by letting their military power be an implicit shield against American might in the event of a U.S.-Chinese clash.

There is no insurance there now. According to Moscow's hints, it is by no means certain Russian military aid automatically would help a China in trouble, despite the 1950 Soviet-Chinese mutual assistance pact. Guarded Soviet statements indicate Peking in effect already has placed itself outside the Communist orbit by its behavior in the red camp's quarrel.

Yuri Zhukov, the authoritative voice of Pravda, complains China is playing a dangerous game which can "undermine the foundations of Chinese-Soviet friendship."

Moscow shows little enthusiasm for becoming involved in a confrontation with the United States over Southeast Asia. Evidently, Moscow would prefer some sort of marking - time diplomacy which might favor long-range but safer Communist gains and provide time to deal with the Communist world troubles.

COULD MAKE THINGS HOT

If the Kremlin is successful in its efforts to convene a world Communist meeting — over Peking's objections — Mao would make things hot for Khrushchev by steaming up the South-east Asia atmosphere. He could present world Communism with the choice of supporting a Communist cause in Asia, or turning its back on a Communist nation threatened by the imperialists.

Moscow wants neither to stand up and be counted at this time nor to risk eventual involvement in a nuclear war. So Peking's toughness, implying a threat of Chinese hostilities with the United States, also serves the purpose of warning the Kremlin.

Orchestra Conductor Dies At 89

HANCOCK, Me. (AP) — French-born Pierre Monteux, 89, a commanding figure among orchestra conductors for 50 years, died early Wednesday at his home after a long illness.

Monteux's sister, Mrs. David Michlin, said he had been confined to his bed for several months and died in his sleep.

Monteux's first conductorship was of the Ballet Russe in France in 1910. The company toured the United States in 1916 and Monteux stayed on in the country to become conductor of the French repertory of the Metropolitan Opera for three years.

He then took over as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for five years and was concertgebouw of Amsterdam's Symphony for nine years.

In 1934, he returned to the United States and picked up the pieces of the faltering San Francisco Symphony, directing it for 17 years.

Monteux and his wife, Doris Hodgkins Monteux, lived on an estate near her birthplace here for many summers. They moved here permanently in 1952, when Monteux stepped down at San Francisco.

Opening lead — king of hearts.

Sweden defeated Italy 66 to 49 during the World Bridge Olympiad played this year in New York, but the result hinged largely on a successful guess by the Swedish declarer on a key hand.

The hand was played on Bridge-a-ma before an audience of a thousand people. The spectators, regardless of their sympathies, were in a high state of tension when the hand was shown on the huge electronic device. They saw that the Swedish North - South pair could make a grand slam by simply guessing which opponent had the king of spades.

A great roar came up from the audience when South (Svenerik Berglund) contracted for seven diamonds. They already knew that the Italian North-South pair, when they played the deal at the first table, had contracted for six diamonds and made precisely six.

The Italian West led the king of hearts, promptly taken with the ace. Now Berglund took five long minutes to study the situation as the spectators argued back and forth whether he would or should guess the location of the king of spades and thus avoid a heart loser.

Most of the audience thought that declarer would cash the ace of spades and then lead the queen, discarding the six of hearts when East followed low.

The spectators sat transfixed when at long last Berglund played a club to the ace and then returned the ten of spades, playing low from dummy when West produced the seven.

At this point pandemonium broke loose. The cheers, the groans, the shouts, the applause, and the I - told - you - so's the followed must surely have been heard in Stockholm.

Berglund made the grand slam after ruffing his clubs in dummy and discarding a heart on the ace of spades. The Swedish team gained 13 international match points on the deal instead of losing 16, which would have been their lot had Berglund gone down one.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
