

WHAT AM I BID?

A curious assortment of antiques, paintings and other objects have been collected by the Centre's Women's Committee for today's second annual auction to begin this afternoon in Memorial Hall at 2 p.m. Contributions will be accepted right until sale time and the public may view the collection from noon until 1:30 p.m. FROM THE LEFT is Mrs. Guy Fichaud, Mrs. A.J. Murehison and Mrs. R.R. Bell, members of the sponsoring Committee. Proceeds will help purchase additional prints for rotation throughout city and provincial schools.

MARY HAWORTH

Wife Falls Easy Prey To Book Huckster's Pitch

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My wife, 20, is very impressionable and easy-going. She can't say "no" to salesladies who knock at our door. Every time I get one of her investments paid off, she gets stuck with another.

The worst yet is a contract she signed a few days ago, towards the purchase of 35 books, contents ranging from fairy tales to scientific research. Total cost: $261. She paid $7 down, and pledged monthly payments of $7.50.

Later she learned the contract isn't subject to cancellation. We have a sign on our door that says "No salesmen or solicitors." So why don't they stay away.

My take-home pay is $300 monthly. We have two children and are expecting a third. Our monthly rental is $115. We have car payments, medical bills and other regular expenses. We are always in debt, never have enough money and simply can't cover this latest "investment."

My wife would like to get out of the contract but I say she can't. She thinks it's possible that, as she isn't yet 21, her signature wasn't legal. She realizes her mistake, but still can't muster sales resistance.

Is there anything she might read, or anyone whom she might consult, to learn how to ward off these hucksters? I'm not a penny pincher, but we are always arguing about this problem, while I try hard not to lose my temper, especially during her pregnancies. Please advise F. V.

DEAR F. V.: In your letter, here condensed, you mention that your wife was persuaded to sign for these books you can't afford by the "book peddler's two hours' sales talk about the education your children should have."

According to the peddler's pitch, as you report it, the children's education should start early, with your wife reading to them from the fairy tales, until the youngsters are of an age to read for themselves, when, presumably, they will browse their own way through the scientific research volumes.

I wonder if you personally have dealt first-hand with a door-to-door book salesman's (or saleswoman's) campaign to make you the beneficiary, at least, of the sort of bargain your wife fell for? I have, and it is a formidable contest of stamina and will, trying to stand one's ground in saying "No!" "No thanks!" "I'm not interested in that type of investment at this time," etc., while he salesperson continues to bombard you with disarming entreaties in favor of buying.

The point of my reminiscence is, don't think too harshly of your young wife's bumbling surrender to that kind of pressure, which betrays you into debt, time and again.

As for getting out of the contract, there's a chance that you might. I've done some checking and a spokesman for the Legal Aid Bureau in your town, as well as a spokesman for the family service agency in my city, concur in thinking that the contract may be found non-enforceable, all things considered.

The Legal Bureau spokesman advises you to telephone the bureau for an appointment, to go over details with a lawyer. And the family agency spokesman urges your wife and you to get in touch with the Family Service of Northern Virginia, for sympathetic intensive counseling help, in overcoming your wife's unstable spending bias.

These agencies will adjust their fees to fit your purse. And the telephone information operator can give you the numbers to call.

Get to work on the problem along these lines, and you may come up with answers designed to prevent relapses. M. H. Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Guardian.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS
Powdered borax is an odorless, effective moth preventive, but it should be used liberally.

Salvage a piece of marble from an old bureau or washstand and have it installed in your kitchen counter. It's great for cutting pastry, bread, cookies.

Before baking a sponge or angel food cake, wash all necessary utensils in hot, soapy water. The slightest trace of grease spells failure for your cake.

BRONWYN MURRAY MARY HOLLAND

Local Girl Guides Attending Newfoundland Heritage Camp

Bronwyn Murray and Mary Holland were the first girl guides leaving PEI to take part in 1966 Heritage Camps. They will be leaving on July 3 for Newfoundland Camp at Beachy Cove, held from July 4-18th. This camp for 32 girls will have two girls from each province and is linked to the provinces' 1966 theme "Come Home to Newfoundland in 1966".

Heritage Camps are held in preparation for the big National Heritage Camp to mark Canada's Centenary in July 1967.

Seven provinces will host some 470 Girl Guides and Rangers from across Canada this summer at camps during July and August. Each camp will have a special theme, highlighting the heritage of the area in which it is held. Campers will learn local folk-lore and participate in activities suitable to the site.

The travel expenses of the girls will be partially defrayed by a Youth Travel Grant from the Canadian Centennial Commission.

BALTIC
Mr. and Mrs. Harold Burns of Avon, Connecticut, are spending their holidays with relatives in this area and are the guests of Mr. Burns' brother, W. H. Burns and Mrs. Burns, Baltic.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Adams have returned to Kensington after spending a holiday at their summer home in Sea View.

Allan Cousins, Baltic, returned to his home after spending the past two weeks visiting his brothers, Lorne and Grant Cousins of Oshawa, Ontario.

Wendell Mountain left by car on Saturday for Montreal after spending a two week holiday at his home in Darnley. He was accompanied by his brother, George Mountain, who plans to go on to Oshawa.

ELLEN'S DIARY

No Holidays On Farms In The Growing Season

"So you haven't the holiday spirit" we remarked to James with a chuckle this morning, when we talked of this one or that.

"If you mean, Ellen, that I feel I should like to take the day off from the farming, just more or less, to take a trip somewhere, why, I wouldn't give it a thought."

"But you have taken holidays away from it."

"Yes, odd times. And enjoyed them too, if I wasn't neglecting something at home at the time. Perhaps it's because I've been farming since a young lad, that the responsibility stays with me. I believe to be a good farmer, one can't be too long away from his farm. His fields and his stock need his oversight and care."

"So we shan't holiday today?"

"How can we? I couldn't be content to holiday with our wedding not yet complete."

"There will be other days, no?" we queried. He shook his head.

"I can't see them," he smiled. "Remember, on farms, there is a time, and a season for the work. Catch it, and all's well. Otherwise, well, there's nothing so discouraging as to find you've been 'a day too late for the Fair!'"

The wedding then it was, with our farmers observing thus, and happily, the blessings, the freedoms of the great land, which hallow for them the acres, the farms that are theirs.

"They enjoy the farmwork" the one girl offered, when we spoke of it. "And I enjoy spending the holiday like this" she smiled, arranging the dewy blossoms she had gathered from the flower-border, in holders, to brighten the rooms.

A young miss from the Mainland joined her this afternoon, a dark-eyed dark-haired girl, a friend of her recent school-year.

A student, now on the weekend holiday from summer employment, she is renewing a acquaintance with the Island, formed on a former visit when she was just a little girl. This evening the two are spending in town. They will visit the Confederation Centre, and the other places of interest there, our summer guests like to include in their outings while vacationing.

A smiling, "young leddy" of lass, she herself comes from an old and busy, and very lovely Capital - City. We wonder what her impressions of farming life will be. Will she be charmed by its quiet, here, where only echoes of the world outside come in to die along the fields? What will she think of the wood-stoves we cook on? Will she admire the chicks and the kittens with Alex and Peter, so proud and pleased to show them to visitors? Will she share the one girl's delight when they come to see "Millie's Filly" on pasture in a near-field? And be interested in hearing of the farm-work from those who today hoe his rows?

"Wouldn't it be funny if she should find herself an Island farmer, and one day marry him and settle over here?" Alex, a dreamy lad, mused with a smile. Meanwhile, our Island puts on her best finery for her guests - her prettiest greens, her summery field-waves, and shadows her balmy winds, her loveliest skies. And may all our visitors at parting, take away with them only pleasant memories of their holiday!

Until tomorrow... Diary... Good-night.

CNST. AND MRS. WILLIAM DEWSNAP

June Wedding Solemnized At Cent. Christian Church

The marriage took place on Saturday, June 11th, 1966 at Central Christian Church, Charlottetown, P. E. I. of Donna Ernestine Molyneux, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ernest Moly-neaux, Southport, and William Alfred Dewsnap, RCMP, Montague, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eric J. Dewsnap, Harrie Ont.

Mr. W. O. Weale performed the double-ring ceremony. The organist, Mrs. Alison MacRae, accompanied Mrs. Frank Hickox as she sang "The Wedding Blessing" during the signing of the register.

The church was decorated with baskets of red, white and yellow gladioli, and white satin bows, and yellow mums marked the guest pews.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white, pead de sole fashioned with empire waist, scooped neckline and long, fly-point sleeves. Alencon lace trimmed the bodice and panel of skirt front and chapel train.

A four tier bouffant veil of tulle illusion was held with a single crown of matching Alencon lace. The bride's only jewelry was cultured pearl earrings, a gift of the groom. She carried a cascade of large white and red sweetheart roses.

The maid of honor was Dorothy Molyneux, sister of the bride. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Everett White, cousin of the bride, and Ruth MacCallum, classmate of the bride.

The attendants wore identical street length gowns of yellow crystal charm styled in A-line. The bodice and cap sleeves were overlaid with white lace. The back featured a flossing panel from the empire waistline. Their wedding pins, headresses were of matching crystal charm with MONTREAL, July 7th - You'll never, when you're travelling, have to worry about losing money... when you're carrying Traveller's Cheques from THE BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA. If you lose them they'll be replaced quickly and meanwhile no one can legally cash them. You're the only one who can cash them, and you can do it anywhere in the world. Traveller's Cheques are available in 10, 25, 50 or 100 Canadian and U.S. dollar denominations... Sterling in denominations of 2, 5, 10 or 20 pounds. So take a trip to your nearest Scotiabank branch before you take a trip anywhere in the world!

"WHAT'S FOR DESSERT?" is a question I'm sure you hear often and SHIRRIFF has the happy answer - two delicious Pie Fillings. Banana Cream and Coconut Cream have joined everyone's favourite - Shirriff Lemon Pie Filling! They're so easy and convenient to prepare - no sugar to add (it's already in the mix). And the famous "Flavour Bud", with liquid flavour sealed in an airtight sugar shell, releases its freshness just at cooking time. I serve Shirriff's smooth and creamy Pie Fillings in tarts - as cake fillings - and in special fancy desserts, too. Try all three - a boon to easier Summer cooking.

WALDORF, CHEFS, TOSSED - or FRUIT-FULL... whatever your choice of salad, Dominion has the very best makings! Because I always shop at Dominion, I can have wonderful salad days all Summer-long! If you haven't already, I suggest that this week you switch to Dominion for a Summer of good eating - for dew-drip salad produce and food at prices you want to pay. You'll soon discover what so many Canadians have found, that at Dominion, where everything is guaranteed, the shopping is best - not only for salad days - but mainly because of the meat!
