MARY HAWORTH

Mate's Hostile Criticism Is Response Of Neurotic

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 25, married over six years and have two small children.

The problem is my husband, who demeans me in front of people with little digs about my failings. Mostly it's when something didn't go right for him at work, but it is becoming more frequent and really getting me down.

It's getting so I don't want to be around other people because of the way he acts towards me. In these moods he seems to feel it's a crime to be considerate of me (at home or in public).

I don't understand his badgering about my cooking, housekeeping, looks, weight (125 pounds), the way I am built, etc. I am not the world's best cook or housekeeper, but not the worst, either. Though I don't always look my best at home or when we are shopping, I take care to look nice when we go out socially and usually get compliments.

My husband is a fairly good man. He works hard, doesn't throw his money around, comes directly home from work and doesn't drink except socially. He doesn't always look like a prince to me, but I don't criticize and I don't interfere with the way he does his job.

I see only the good in him, though he has faults, like everyone. Why can't he accept me as I am and see the good in me? When we discuss this he acts as if he isn't wrong and doesn't intend to change. He says he loves me but I am beginning to wonder. He says he is trying to impress me with the need to look nice, etc.

My thought is, when I feel like looking nice, I will; his nagging will make no difference, except that the more he criticizes, the worse I feel and look. But I still don't look as bad as he makes out. I hope you can understand what's wrong and tell me what to do. B.F.

Dear B.F.: Your husband's behavior, as described, is "rejecting." It amounts to saying, in the presence of others, that he declines to be identified with you.

As for what ails him, or what impels him to act so destructively (With the result that onlookers surely must think even less of him than he professes to think of you), I gather that he suffers from what used to be called an "inferiority complex."

Also, the vintage of your marriage probably figures in the problem, too.

Marriage specialists report that most marriages tend to encounter stormy weather along about the fifth year (assuming they've stayed afloat until then).

By the fifth year, approximately, the initial brand of attraction that sparked the marriage (puppy love, romantic love, sex magnetism, whatever) has begun to grow stale. If, by that time, the couple isn't maturing, as individuals and partners, into a different, more deeply integrated, more rational and social (less self-centered) relationship to each other and to life than existed to start, their marriage may fall apart.

You've noted that you husband seems increasingly moody about conditions at work. At such times he verbally beats you over the head about your imperfections.

I take it he feels frustrated in his job world; and perhaps he suspects the fault is within himself. In any case, when down in the dumps about his sense of failure, he tends (despite appearances to the contrary) to turn to you for ego support, as if you might afford assurance (in your own person) that he is a strong, able, significant man, not just a social cipher.

But you seem blind to his neurotic needs of sort. Moreover, you are disposed to be innocently content with yourself and him "as is," if he'd let you be. That's what touches off his nagging tirades, wherein his anxious self-contempt is aired in terms of displeasure with you.

At such times he probably feels a deep hunger a pipe dream) to be married to a rich, bright, beautiful, soignee, sweet, sophisticated, gifted, glamorous heaven-sent helpmate whose glorious assets would radiantly redeem his routine mediocrity (as it seems to him).

My advice is, don't cringe defensively from is unreason. Take the story to a family relations counsellor for evaluation. Systematic assessment of your version of the marriage, with specialist help, is necessary to get to the heart of the conflict. Only then can you determine how to save the situation, if possible; or how to safeguard your own self-respect. M.H.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Young Piglets Checked Before James Retires

"See you!" Curiosity, the sizable cat grins before slipping out at James' heels into the night. His coat is golden. Outdoors, it will be overlaid with the silver of moonlight, as are the spring - trails along which he will pad.

On a last round of his day, James goes. We should like to have come with him, but there is a coolness in the air, which inclines one to remain by the fire. He goes to see that all is well with the animals, as does also the younger farmer from his house across the lane. To add a bit of bedding here or there, and pause to appraise this or that one, of those that will before long, go out to the pastures. Maybe they will girt one, to determine thus, whether or not satisfying gain is being made.

The barn - cats will nap on a sill, waking to blink at the lights. The bantams in a precise and attractive row will be asleep, high up on a water - pipe below the deck of a loft.

Before James comes away he will open the shutters before the horses' stalls to put handfuls of grain in the mangers. Seeing, we think, not so much those we have now handy as they are about, but some remembered friend - of - man from years gone: she that was so good in the stumper ("Man! whatever was that?" one of the young'uns will ask) Or the young mare that would haul "for every inch that was in her." Or that filly, "such a pretty thing — coal black, she was" that never lived to grow up. Those, and others, from the younger and more challenging days of his farming, James will see.

He will, we know, look in on the litter of piglets, the recent snowstorm brought by lanternlight, and be grateful that tonight, a pressure of a finger will flood the piggery with light.

"Did you ever read by candlelight?" Alex queried today.

"Odd times" we replied.

"One can" he nodded. "There when the power was off for a while because of the storm. Mother read to Peter and me by the light of one. And" he smiled "we enjoyed it!"

"Snowdrops lost again!" Pana Starling, who had been whistling cheerily in his breezeway commented in the sun of this morning. "But they'll come back! Rock in that was the poor man's fertilizer, that last snowfall, we got."

"Come, Dear" Mama Starling called from indoors.

"Oh, oh! It's that spring-cleaning!" he said, smiling a bit ruefully as he turned away.

"This is certainly a beautiful night, Ellen" James offers, hanging up cap and jacket. "So calm and bright. Looks as though we'll get another nice day, tomorrow!"

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good - night....

WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

Margate Church Entered In Beautification Contest

Mrs. Lorne Adams was devotional leader at the April meeting of the Margate United Church Women, held in the church vestry.

The worship service opened with a hymn followed by scripture reading and meditation "Our Daily Work", and prayer led by Mrs. Wilfred Pickering.

The president, Mrs. Robert Heaney opened the meeting with a meditation and roll call was answered by a verse containing the word "go".

Secretary Mrs. Bruce Clark, read the minutes of the previous meeting. The treasurer, Miss Vivian Woodside, reported $115.10 cleared from the afternoon tea, with total receipts of $321.16.

Members voted to donate $200 toward the painting of the exterior of the church and it was decided to enter the Margate Church in the Beautification contest.

Plans were made to cater to the CGIT, Tyros and Tuxis groups if they would like a banquet.

Mrs. Wilfred Pickering who presented the program on "Missions", gave an interesting talk on the different problems of the life of the Northern Indians.

Meeting closed with a hymn and the Lord's Prayer in unison.

CLINTON WI

Mrs. Wilfred Pickering was hostess to the members of the Clinton Women's Institute in April.

Mrs. Harold Heaney presided and the secretarial report was given by Mrs. William Cotton.

The sum of $2.00 was voted toward the Korea, orphan boy, and $3.00 for the CAC membership. It was decided to bring used books and magazines to next meeting for Riverside Hospital Library.

The questionnaire from the provincial convener of agriculture, Mrs. Louise Marchbank, was read and filled in.

The May meeting will be held at the home of the president, Mrs. Heaney. Roll call will be answered with an exchange of flower slips, flower seeds and bulbs.

Mrs. Thomas Sullivan presented the program.

Refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Ivan Pickering.

BURTON WI

Mrs. Lance Dalton was hostess to and also presided at April's Women's Institute meeting in Burton.

House cleaning hints were given the response to roll call.

Committee reports were hard and correspondence included a number of letters in response to a request for letter friends in a western newspaper.

Two members volunteered to assist with the Retarded Children's fund collection.

Next month's hostess is Mrs. Peter Dalton when members will exchange plant slips and seeds.

Visitation committee appointed was Mrs. Clifford Colleutt and Mrs. P. Dalton.

Refreshments were served.

VICTORIA WI

In response to the roll call at the April meeting of the Victoria Women's Institute, members donated cards, magazines and books for the Riverside Hospital.

Various committees submitted reports and $10 was voted towards books for the rural school.

Representing the WI for May at the school will be Mrs. Karl Boulter and Mrs. Don Waddell with Mrs. Ken MacLean as convener of the sick committee.

The program leaders, Mrs. N. P. MacQuarrie and Mrs. Ivan Craig had group singing and a facial make-up demonstration with Mrs. Ken MacLean as the model and Mrs. Don Waddell, the beautician.

After a sale of remnants by Mrs. Keith Boswell, lunch was served by the committee - in - charge.

NEW LONDON WI

"The Easter Parade", and the collect in unison opened the meeting of the New London Women's Institute, held in the school Tuesday evening, April 14 and presided over by Mrs. Daniel Morrison.

Fifteen members answered roll call by telling "How we benefit by attending our Women's Institute meetings".

It was decided to collect books for Riverside Hospital, also to send entries to the craft exhibit in Charlottetown.

A beautiful quilt top was donated to the Institute by Mrs. Stanley Brown.

A letter was read from the Stanley Bridge committee, asking for numbers for their annual concert.

A paper on "Agriculture" was read by Mrs. Oscar MacKay and the questionaire discussed and filled in.

The May meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Wilbur Mac Kay.

A program was presented by Mrs. Mont MacEwen and Mrs. Wilbur MacKay.

Anglican WA Elects Exec.

Holy Communion at St. Peter's Cathedral was celebrated by Bishop W.W. Davis prior to Friday's session of the P.E.I. Diocesan Board of Women's Auxiliary Anglican Church of Canada.

Returning to St. Paul's Hall, delegates received reports from Miss Carrie Thompson concerning Girls Auxiliary Links and from Mrs. H.K.S. Hemming about the refugee project. She told of the 20 adoptees of the WA still in German camps, who are so appreciative of the money, food and interest given by the P.E.I. branches.

Mrs. Maurice Wilkinson, chairman of the candidates department of the Dominion Board, spoke of the efforts of candidates secretaries whose work is inspiring rather than frustrating, in placing workers in a foundry hospital in Hong Kong, a secretary for a bishop in India, and worker in an Indian reservation in western Canada.

Mrs. Wilkinson made these people live for her audience and stressed that quality is needed, people who are willing to be servants of their people in the overseas field.

Refreshments were srved by St. Peter's Cathedral branches in the Cathedral Hall.

Election of officers resulted in three new members on the executive: president, Mrs. H.L. Palmer; 1st vice president, Mrs. G.B. Whiteside candidates secretary, Mrs. J.R. Davies. The meeting concluded with group conferences.

New Service May Reduce Ocean Fares

GENEVA (Reuters)—A transatlantic car-ferry ocean service that may cut up to 40 per cent off existing passenger fares will be operational for the summer of 1967, a private company said here.

The Israeli company of Somerfin with headquarters in Geneva said it plans to have the first of a fleet of 15,000-ton "floating models," each capable of transporting about 1,000 passengers and 240 cars, on the North Atlantic run in two years.

The first of these vessels will cost an estimated $14,000,000 to $15,000,000. Shipyards in Britain, Belgium and France are among the countries bidding for the contract.

A spokesman for Somerfin said here the reason the car-ferry "floating motels" could undercut existing transatlantic prices was that all passenger facilities on board would be on the self-service basis.

Apart from the crew operating the vessel, staff dealings with the passengers would be reduced to a minimum.

All meals would be served cafeteria style with passengers serving themselves and paying only for what they ate. Coin-machine hamburger stands and fountains would also be installed.

The spokesman said the cabins would be small but would have modern conveniences.

No tariff had yet been fixed for the transatlantic service.

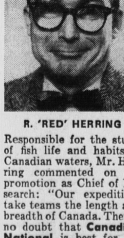
Selected to Lead Research Expeditions



R. 'RED' HERRING

Responsible for the study of fish life and habits in Canadian waters, Mr. Herring commented on his promotion as Chief of Research: "Our expeditions take teams the length and breadth of Canada. There's no doubt that Canadian National is best for our needs. The low fares we enjoy with CN's Group Travel Plans are a whale of a bargain. Teams of between 10 and 22 persons can save as much as 20% with CN's Party Fares... over and above the big savings on Red 'Bargain' and White 'Economy' Days. He added "For larger projects, involving all our 63 scientists, we charter a CN coach or sleeping car. We have the exclusive use of a roomy, air-conditioned coach for the entire trip at ocean-bed prices... up to 33⅓ savings! For large groups it's cheaper to charter — and smarter by far. This is one bargain we won't let get away!"

Household Hints

Make your own furniture polish with equal parts of boiled linseed oil, turpentine and vinegar.

Outdoor furniture made of genuine reed, cane, bamboo or wicker needs a good wetting now and then to prevent drying and splitting, but don't use it again until it has dried completely.

Revive the finish of glazed chintz by adding a small amount of candlewax or paraffin to boiling starch. Use when cool and iron chintz on the right side when nearly dry.

Eggs, milk and butter used in recipes should be at room temperature. Take them from the refrigerator at least an hour before using.
