Plowing Competitions Scheduled For Spring

Carl Willis, Sherwood and Edwin Mills, Bay Fortune will go to Chilliwack, B.C., early in April to participate in the Canadian plowing championship meet which is scheduled for April 14, it was revealed yesterday at the annual meeting of the P.E.I. Plowmen's Council.

The two plowmen earned the right to represent the province in British Columbia when they were the winner, and the runner up, respectively, in the P.E.I. championship meet staged last autumn by the Council in co-operation with the Prince County plowing association.

Mr. Willis is a scientist who specializes in plant pathology and holds the degree of Ph.D. (doctor of philosophy). Mr. Mills is a farmer who is a veteran of Canadian plowing competition.

Raynell MacNeill, O'Leary RR, will go along as coach and team manager. The plows will be shipped prior to the meet. The plowmen will use tractor companies as is normally done in such cases.

MISS COADY

Club Praises 4-H Winner

The feat of a Hazelbrook girl Paula Coady, in winning the Fururity Class established by the P.E.I. Jersey Cattle Club last year, was warmly praised at a meeting of the club here this week.

Miss Coady won with Coadydale Acme 5, Claudette—it was for three-year old heifers—and the young animal completed a fine lactation in record of performance tests. Her production was 100 lbs.

Raymond Acorn, Dundas, reported for Kings County. The plowing meet there is always held the second week of September, it was explained.

B.B. Jones, Bunbury was named president for the current year. Arthur Hudson, Cascumpec, vice-president, and Graeme Linkletter, Summerside, was re-elected secretary treasurer.

The meeting was held in Birch Court, Experimental Farm.

Miss Coady was classed as "a top 4-H Club member" by Jersey Club spokesmen.

Also revealed was the fact that she had been the choice as a Jersey Princess for the Royal Winter Fair, Toronto in 1965. It was the first time a Maritime Province girl was offered this honor.

E. A. Myers, Hazelbrook told how Robert Hall, Eastern Canadian Jersey fieldman had asked him if Miss Coady could accept the honor. At the time the Hazelbrook girl was to be on the National 4-H Club trip to Toronto and Ottawa and she had to turn it down.

Also revealed by Mr. Myers was that Paula had won a $200 teaching scholarship at Prince of Wales College, where she is taking a course leading to the teaching profession.

Miss Coady is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Coady.

Provincial Wildlife Items Discussed At Conference

Officials of the Canadian Wildlife Service and the provincial government met yesterday at the Charlottetown Hotel for sessions dealing with the acquisition of land for water fowl use and discussions on the migratory bird habitat.

Attending yesterday's sessions from the Canadian Wildlife Service in Ottawa were Dr. David Monroe, chief of the CWS; Dr. Victor Solman, staff specialist; A.G. Laughrey, superintendent of the eastern region of CWS; and Nolan Perret, supervisor of conservation and development of the eastern region CWS. Also Richard Fyfe, a biologist with the CWS from Sackville, N.B.

Representing Prince Edward Island were Leo F. Rossier, minister responsible for the provincial wildlife division; Charles Bartlett, chief of the wildlife division and Eugene Gorman, deputy minister of fisheries.

In a talk with Dr. Monroe, he said it was hoped that the breeding productivity of the black ducks and similar birds could be increased on the Island. He pointed out there were many estuaries here that if they were developed properly would be suitable for these species of birds.

Remarking on the decline in the number of black ducks, Dr. Monroe felt that part of this could be traced to the increased use of pesticides in the areas the black ducks frequent.

He said it was difficult to resolve the extent of the decline in the black duck population. Dr. Monroe said that it was much more difficult to do censuses on the black duck because of their habitat. Geese censuses are done visually and geese frequent open marshes and plains which don't present any great difficulties.

Black ducks on the other hand are woodland birds which are normally found in the wooded country of Ungava and Northern Ontario in the summer and in the wooded areas of the southern United States in the winter months. Both these areas are difficult to traverse and this makes census taking by sight nearly impossible.

Much of the discussions that took place yesterday dealt with the acquiring of marshes and wetland areas for use of the migratory birds. The group explored ways and means which this could be done with co-operation between the federal and provincial governments.

Charles Bartlett said this is an area of the program of the Canadian Wildlife Service where P.E.I. should be participating. He said his division was anxious to help in this regard.

Mr. Bartlett did not foresee any major difficulty in acquiring the province's land, he pointed out the land that is good for migratory birds is land that is not good for agricultural purposes.

One of the items in the program of the CWS is its desire to establish the need for migratory birds permits, to be issued by the federal government. Hunting licenses are now the jurisdiction of the provincial governments and here on the Island farmers, fishermen and their immediate families do not even need a provincial permit. Mr. Bartlett estimated that approximately 60 per cent of the Island hunters are people who fall in this category.

Mr. Bartlett is hopeful that
