The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♣	1♥	1♠	Pass
2♥	Pass	2NT	Pass
4♠	Pass	6♠

Opening lead—ten of hearts.

Lots of so-called guesses in the play of the cards are not actually guesses when you examine them closely. For example, take this deal where the contract is six spades and West leads a heart.

It is clear that South will go down one if, after ruffing the heart and drawing trumps, he follows the normal procedure of cashing the A-K of clubs in the hope of dropping the queen. Declarer would lose not only a club, but also a diamond when he later attempted a finesse in that suit.

Misguessing the club can be marked up to bad luck, if you're so minded, but actually, South can practically assure the contract by following a different line of play.

After ruffing the heart lead in dummy, he enters his hand with a trump and ruffs the king of hearts. He then cashes the ace of clubs and plays another trump to his hand.

Once declarer learns the spades are divided 2-2, the contract is certain to make. He leads a second club at this point. If West shows out, as might happen, dummy wins with the king and puts East on lead with a club. East has to return a diamond or a heart, either of which gives South the rest of the tricks.

If West follows to the club lead, declarer finesses the nine. If the finesse works, as it would in the actual case, twelve tricks become certain. Declarer loses at most a diamond trick.

If the finesse loses, meaning East was dealt the Q-x of clubs, the contract is likewise certain to make. East wins the queen, but has no safe card to return. A heart return permits South to discard a diamond and put his other diamond loser on dummy's fifth club, while a diamond return from East proves equally ineffective.

The so-called guess in clubs is not really a guess at all, so far as making the contract is concerned. South takes steps to assure the hand without worrying whether or not he guesses the true club situation.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
