STRICT ATTENTION to Business, Honesty and Square Dealing, and paying Cash every time, is what has placed

L. E. PROWSE
to the front of all competitors, in CLOTHING, HATS, &c.

He does not advertise to sell goods at cost, but he guarantees to sell from 10 to 25 per cent less than those who do advertise to sell at cost.

He does not try to deceive the people by making a big blow and offering paltry rewards, but tries to do things right and has the goods to back him up in what he advertizes.

He has now about 6,500 HATS and $4,000 worth of CLOTHING, which he guarantees to sell from 10 to 25 per cent less than any house in the trade. A lot of this Clothing was bought less than half price, and will be sold less than half price.

He does not ask the people to believe his advertisement until they see his prices; he knows then they will believe, and knows that the goods and prices back him up every time.

All goods freely shown, or sent to any part of the town.
Please don't forget to call.

ABSOLUTE PURITY.

The following analyses (made by the Dominion Analyst) of three BAKING POWDERS sold in this market, should put a stop to the unjust efforts of the Royal to mislead the public as to its being the only pure Powder. These impartial tests show that other Powders are as pure and wholesome:

W. SAUNDERS, Dom. Analyst, St. John, N. B. reports:
Royal—Contains Alkali Carbonate—a mixture consisting mainly of Bi-Carbonate of Soda and Cream of Tartar—adulterated with about 20 per cent of Starch.
F. BEST, Dom. Analyst, St. John, N. B. reports:
Pure Gold—Contains Cream of Tartar, Carbonate of Soda—fresh and pure.
Nov. 18, 1885—Not adulterated; same as usual.
April 7, 1885—Not adulterated; same as usual.
June 4, 1884—Fresh and pure; same composition as usual.

MAYNARD BOWMAN, Dom. Analyst, Halifax, N. S. reports:
WOODILL'S—Of good quality; contains nothing injurious.
WOODILL'S German Baking Powder has a reputation for purity and wholesomeness now nearly 30 years.

Tales of a Big Wind.

Stories of the recent cyclone in Ohio are coming in quite freely, but they do not approach the marvellous stories of the tornado that swept up the valley of the roaring Corlorus in York County, in the cold spring of 1842. After the storm we speak of one farmer found that his well had been pulled up by the roots and was hanging on the limbs of a white oak tree four miles away. A cellar belonging to one of his neighbors had been split in two, one-half of it had been thrown through a stone quarry and the other half turned up endwise against a haystack in the adjoining county. A flock of geese were completely stripped of their feathers by the wind, and dried-apple pie was blown through the side of a schoolhouse, terrifying the teacher and scholars, besides ruining a large map of the grasshopper district of Kansas. A large barn containing fifteen tons of hay was lifted off its foundation and carried bodily six miles down the valley, where it settled down so squarely that the doors could be opened without prying them. The wind blew the tails off six Durham cows, and a Berkshire pig weighing 200 pounds was blown completely through his skin, the hide remaining in a standing position and preserving an expression of naturalness that deceived many visitors. The boundary lines of several townships were bent all out of shape, so that they looked like a curled hair mattress on a hot griddle, and the air was blown so completely out of the valley that people had to go up the hills when they wanted to breathe.—Philadelphia Press.

A Dangerous Game.

THE SEDUCTIVE BUT PERILOUS PLEASURES OF "DRAW."

The Buffalo Courier tells an interesting draw-poker story, and insists that it is true. The game was played in a Buffalo hotel by seven men. One of the players had won $200 and was about to jump the game, when he picked up a hand of four kings and an ace. It was inevitable because they were not playing straight flushes. All came in, one of them raising the ante $10. Mr. Four Kings just chipped along, not wishing to keep anybody out. The others stayed and all drew cards, the man with the kings throwing away his ace and drawing one card rather than spoil his chances of getting bets by standing pat. The man who had made the $10 rise took two cards. Then the betting began. All were driven out except the man with the four kings and the man who had drawn two cards. They whacked back and forth at one another until at length, having exhausted all his chips and gone shy for many dollars, the man with the kings felt that he had won all he wanted to, and called! To his horror his opponent laid down four aces. The beaten man howled and claimed fraud, for how could the other man have four aces when he himself had one before the draw? The explanation was simple. There being seven players there were not cards enough to go around after the first deal, and so the discards were shuffled up and dealt for the draw. In the draw the man who took two cards and was drawing to three aces got the ace that the man with four kings had discarded, and was thus able to beat him out of his boots.

Maxwell Interviewed.

When a reporter called upon Maxwell in his cell in jail at St. Louis, a few days ago, he found the man stretched upon his bed reading. When asked how he liked the transfer from his former cell to the murderers' row, he replied: "I like the change very much; it is much more quiet up here, and I don't have so many callers to bother me." "Does the verdict weigh heavy upon your mind?" asked the reporter. "No, sir; the only way in which the verdict affects me is to cause a postponement of arrangements I had made, being certain of acquittal." "What were these arrangements?" "Well, when I was given my liberty I was going either to lecture or to enter a dime museum in order to earn enough money to repay to Preller's heirs in England money I had taken from him, and to take me back to Hyde, where I was going to engage in the practice of law with my brother. All this will be off for some little time; when I get my new trial I am sure I shall be acquitted."

Plunging to Death.

A Canadian Pacific freight train went through the iron bridge at Pilewawa, 10 miles west of Pembroke, Ont., on the 7th. Conductor Williams was instantly killed and a number of others dangerously injured. It appears that one of the cars was being transmitted to Smith's Falls, and when the train was crossing the bridge some part of the shovel caught in the framework of the bridge and caused the train to leave the track and pitch over into the river, some forty feet below. The engine and tender came safely over and was at once despatched to Pembroke with all the wounded who could be found and afterwards returned with two doctors who did all in their power to alleviate the sufferings of the unfortunate victims.

She Needed a Protector.

Little Ada—"Are you coming around to call on sister Nellie to-night?"
Young Simpkins (delighted)—"Indeed I would like to, but you know I was at your house only last night, and I don't think it would do to call again so soon."
"Oh, I guess it wouldn't make any difference. Nellie said she wished you would come every night except Saturday and Sunday."
"I should be only too glad to do so, but I am afraid you misunderstood your sister."
"Oh, no. You see, when Nellie has a caller she don't have to study, and she's in Greek verbs now."—Chicago News.

Prince Jerome Napoleon publishes a protest against the passage of the proposed expulsion bill. He predicts that the Chamber of Deputies, by conduct such as the passage of this bill, will drive the Republic into civil war.

The Bishops of the English House of Lords are so overworked that notice has been given by Lord Shelbourne of a resolution to appoint a chaplain to "assist" them in the duty of reading prayers in the House of Lords.

The infant King of Spain enjoys the almost unique distinction of having been born a monarch. There is no other like instance in the history of Spain, nor of England. In France there has been one such incident, in the case of John I. in 1316.

During the celebration of the anniversary of Gen. Garibaldi's death, at Padua, Italy, an anti-Austrian demonstration resulted in a riot and conflict with the police, in which several persons were wounded more or less seriously. Fifty-eight of the rioters were arrested.

The names of the baby King of Spain are Alfonso-Leo-Fernando-James Mary-Isidore-Pascal. Shortly after the royal birth the Spanish Gazette announced that by royal decree Senor Rafael Alcadery Burrill had been appointed surgeon-dentist to the new King. Whereupon the Globe, a Republican journal, shocked the Madriene aristocracy by inquiring whether the young sovereign had been born with teeth.

The courses at a Chinese dinner are peculiar. The meal begins with a smoke, then thick, mucilaginous, but delicately-tasting soup, with sea slugs, mushrooms, and pigeons eggs floating on it, is served. After this come courses of fish, pheasants, wild ducks—all cooked to be very greasy. Dried pumpkin seeds are a sort of Chinese olives, and dried watermelon seeds are considered in the nature of bonbons.

Perhaps no better indication of the thrifty habits of the peasantry of France can be given than that which was disclosed by the new loan of £20,000,000 sterling by the French treasury on May 12. The French Government asked but for £20,000,000, at 3 per cent, and the applications made by the peasantry and tradesmen amounted to £400,000,000. Perhaps in no other country in the world could such results have been shown.

Wednesday evening, at Aspen, Col., a party of young ladies climbed to the top of the fire bell tower, 60 feet high, to obtain a view of the city. Eppa Stewart stepped to the edge of the tower and was leaning against a corner post, looking over the country, when the janitor, not knowing of the presence of the young ladies, seized the bell-rope to call a meeting of the fire company. The sudden clang of the bell startled Miss Stewart, and she plunged from the dizzy height to the pavement. Both her legs were badly crushed, the feet having been driven to within a few inches of the knees, the bones of the left arm were broken into splinters, and five ribs on the right side were broken and torn loose from the spine. There is no hope of her recovery.
