Molotov Quits Post As USSR Foreign Minister

MOSCOW (CP) — The Supreme Soviet Friday accepted the resignation of Soviet foreign minister Vyacheslav Molotov, the official Russian news agency Tass announced.

Dmitri Shepilov, 51, editor of the Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda and a rising light in the Soviet hierarchy, has been named to replace Molotov.

During last autumn's foreign ministers' conference at Geneva, Soviet sources had unofficially predicted that he would replace Molotov.

Molotov at Geneva confided to several foreigners that he was getting old and planned to retire "shortly."

BEFORE TITO'S VISIT Molotov has given most of his life to the Communist cause and many of those years to carrying out the policies of the late Joseph Stalin, under attack from the Communist party recently for his promotion of the "cult of personality."

In addition to his post as foreign minister, Molotov was a first deputy chairman of the Soviet Union's council of ministers. A Moscow radio announcement did not indicate whether he had stepped down from this post as well. (The Associated Press said, however, the wording of the announcement indicated Molotov had kept his other job.) The foreign ministry shift came on the eve of the arrival of President Tito of Yugoslavia on a visit to Moscow. Molotov was one of the Soviet leaders under Stalin who at one time denounced Tito as a renegade from communism.

(Western diplomats speculated the Tito visit may have been a motivating factor in the timing of Molotov's resignation.)

Shepilov was named a secretary of the central committee of the Communist party in February, 1956 at the conclusion of the party's 20th congress at which Nikita Khrushchev denounced Stalin.

Simultaneously Shepilov was elected a candidate member of the Politburo—the most important group in the Soviet Union.

Shepilov in 1949 attained great authority in inner Communist party circles when he became the chief of the propaganda and agitation section of the party's central committee.

APPEARED INSECURE Molotov's position had appeared insecure since he made a public recantation last October in the magazine Kommunist for mistakingly stating in a speech that only the "foundations" of socialism had been established in Russia. He was upbraided for thus implying that full-scale socialism had not been established. Friday's announcement said: "The U. S. S. R. supreme Soviet (parliament) presidium has accepted the request of the first deputy chairman of the U. S. S. R. council of ministers, V. M. Molotov, to relieve him of the duties of foreign minister."

Molotov long has been a master in the use of "nyet"—the Russian no.

With a deadpan air of confidence, he pursued the Soviet line in Moscow, Paris, the United Nations and other world centres. Blandishments, friendliness, persuasion, anger and the cold shoulder alike were powerless to move him when it was against Soviet policy to compromise.

One of the most durable of Russia's leaders, "Old Bolshevik" Molotov was a leading figure in the 1917 Communist revolution and later served with both Stalin and Lenin, founder of Russian communism.

He survived successive changes of leadership and served as chairman of Russia's council of ministers (premier) from 1930 to 1941, when the post was taken over by Stalin himself.

It was while Molotov was premier that the Soviet Union signed a non-aggression pact with Germany before the Second World War.

French Army Combat Team Near Victory Over Rebels

ALGIERS (AP) — A French Army combat team Friday closed in for the kill on a big Algerian rebel band trapped in the "gates of iron" gorges of the Biban mountains southwest of Bougie.

French dispatches said more than 100 rebels had been slain or captured since the troops launched the roundup Thursday.

Powerful mechanized detachments of the French 7th Division, supported by air units, were reported tightening a ring of steel on some 400 Arab nationalists in one of the biggest pitched battles of the 18-month-old uprising. French casualties were not disclosed.

Victory would give the French complete control of the southern edge of the disrupted Soummam valley on the fringes of the Grand Kabylie, a favorite rebel haunt. Helicopter-borne troops pitched grenades on nationalists hiding out in the sun-baked gorges, supplementing a deadly fire from mobile artillery.

French headquarters said the battle raged unabated throughout the day.

Far to the west in the Oran department the newly-called French Army reserves underwent a baptism of fire in an attack on a rebel unit about six miles from Launel. Fifteen rebels were reported killed in 24 captured. French casualties were said to be two wounded.

In Algiers, sullen Arabs pulled a general strike in the Casbah—the native quarter—in protest against the French clampdown on nationalists said to be hiding out there.

French police watched the movement of Arabs in the Casbah warily, fearing a violent outburst. By late afternoon, some Casbah shops reopened and tension eased somewhat.

Pick Up Two Jail Escapees

AMHERST (CP) — RCMP said they picked up two Quebec jail escapees early today after a chase on the outskirts of this northern Nova Scotia town.

They said they arrested Gerald Potvin, 25, of Robroy, Que., and Joseph Marson, 30, of Drummondville, Que., when their car plunged into a ditch.

The car was reported stolen earlier in early Springhill, N. S., police said. Constables in a patrol car were said to have chased the pair several miles before the car ran off the highway. At one point they ran through a police roadblock.

Search for the two began Thursday in wooded area near Southampton, 25 miles from here, when two men jumped from a car after being stopped by police making a routine highway automobile check. Police said this car bore Massachusetts licence plates but a pair of Quebec plates were found inside the vehicle.

Striking Men To Demonstrate

SHERBROOKE, QUE. (CP) — Striking workers from four Quebec province mills of the Dominion Textile Company will stage the first of a series of demonstrations tonight. Some 3,000 workers from Mills in Sherbrooke, Magog, Drummondville and St. Gregoire will attend the rally.

Workers struck at Drummondville April 2, Magog May 8, Sherbrooke May 11 and St. Gregoire May 18. Negotiations for a wage increase have been proceeding for more than a year.

A union spokesman said the rally will call public attention to what he described as the justice of the workers' claims. It would also show that laborers want to keep the peace during the dispute. Other rallies are planned for Magog and Drummondville.

REPEATED SCENES OF BEDLAM

Pipeline Closure Pushed Through By Government

By ALAN DONNELLY. Canadian Press Staff Writer. OTTAWA (CP) — A government closure motion limiting debate on the semi-final stage of its bitterly-fought gas pipeline legislation was jammed through the Commons Friday amid chaos never before seen in Parliament.

Opposition shouts of "dictatorship" and "fascism" rang through repeated scenes of utter bedlam. CCF leader Coldwell at one point strode to the centre of the chamber and shook his fist at speaker Rene Beaudoin, demanding to be heard.

On one of the day's many votes, the opposition took the unprecedented step of refusing to vote—an action veteran observers said they could not recall ever happening before.

OPINION REVOLVED The disorder broke out in the first minutes of the day's sitting beginning at 11 a.m. Speaker Beaudoin summarily ruled out of order a motion Thursday night by Colin Cameron (CCF—New Brunswick) to ensure statements in two letters printed in the Ottawa Journal this week criticizing progressive members in the three-week Commons pipeline fight. The Speaker refused to hear opposition members who were striving to speak and promptly called a vote on their appeal of his ruling.

The disorder swelled to open revolt in the next two hours and again after the luncheon recess as the Speaker put two more questions to a vote without hearing

Progressive Conservative and CCF members who were on their feet clamoring to be heard. Each time Speaker Beaudoin simply called for the division. The bells rang to call in members for the votes. Opposition members milled in the chamber's centre aisle around the mace. Mr. Drew and others strove to speak. Most of their words were drowned out by desk-thumping and noisy singing from Liberal ranks.

SILENT AND PALE At one point Mr. Beaudoin said he was taking full responsibility for his action. Much of the rest of the time he sat silent, his face pale.

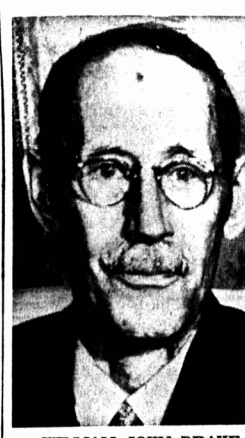

Finally, just before 3 p.m., the Speaker left the chair despite opposition protests and the House moved into committee of the whole. Awaiting the committee was a motion made Thursday by Prime Minister St. Laurent to impose closure on the committee stage of the pipeline bill—the second last stage before its Commons passage. Committee chairman Edward T. Applewhite immediately put the closure motion to a vote. He ignored Donald Fleming (PC—Toronto Eglinton) and others who tried to speak.

"Have we come to fascism here completely?" Mr. Fleming cried to the chair. "You are abdicating the proper function of the chair." The closure motion was carried 144 to 51.

SEVEN VOTES The Liberal majority was backed by the Social Credit group and Carl Nickle (PC—Calgary South), who backs the pipeline proposal. All other conservatives and the CCF voted in the minority. The same line-up prevailed on each of the votes—there were seven divisions during the morning and afternoon.

After closure was carried the Speaker asked to go out of the repeated opposition protests. They then launched into repeated attempts to have the proceedings declared out of order. Procedural wrangling and votes occupied the remainder of the afternoon.

Thursday the opposition won a major tactical victory when they took off for the whole day the taking of a vote on the closure motion.

ALMOST HEARTBROKEN

By HAROLD MORRISON. Canadian Press Staff Writer. OTTAWA (CP) — The opposition almost broke the heart of Speaker Rene Beaudoin in the Commons Friday.

Never before had a speaker's words aroused such fury and rebellion from the opposition. Never before had a Canadian Speaker been faced with a motion of censure, a motion that could mean his downfall if carried by the House.

At the height of one tumultuous scene, angered opposition members stormed the aisle separating the two sides of the chamber, gathered around the mace, symbol of authority and democracy, and pointing directly at Mr. Beaudoin cried: "Puppet! Dictator! Garroting of Parliament!"

It got so bad for the 44-year-old director of House order and procedure that at one point he dragged himself from the chamber with what a reporter thought were tears in his eyes. He denied that he had been crying.

The motion asked the Commons to resolve it no longer has any confidence in the Speaker for: "1. Improperly reversing his own decision without notice and without giving any opportunity for discussion."

"2. Repeatedly refusing to allow members to address the House on occasions when the rules provide that they have the right to be heard."

"3. Subordinating the rights of the House to the will of the government."

AIMED AT SPEAKER BEAUDOIN

Angry Demonstration Of Rebellion In Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — An unprecedented opposition demonstration of rebellion erupted in the Commons Friday. Wild disorder reigned for 30 minutes.

It was aimed at Speaker Rene Beaudoin, who refused to hear Progressive Conservative and CCF members on points of order and privilege.

Though the storm had been brewing all day, it burst suddenly and without warning as the House resumed its pipeline sitting at 2.30 p.m. After a two-hour morning meeting.

AFTERNOON SESSION WORSE Throughout the 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. sitting, the opposition, fighting the pipeline legislation to the last rampart, had been getting angrier and angrier with the Speaker. Opposition leader Drew tried to censure the Speaker but his motion was ruled out of order.

Later, the opposition, in an indirect censure action, refused to vote at all on a point raised by the Speaker himself.

But the morning bedlam was nothing compared with the afternoon outburst.

As soon as Mr. Beaudoin took the chair he put to a vote a ruling by chairman E. T. Applewhite, while the House was in committee, that Prime Minister St. Laurent's proposal to shut off debate on the semi-final stage of the pipeline bill was in order. IGNORES PC MEMBER Davie Fulton (PC—Kamloops) was immediately on his feet with a point of order. Normally, points of order and privilege take precedence over other House business.

But Mr. Beaudoin kept reading the motion, ignoring Mr. Fulton, who stayed on his feet talking.

This in itself is open rebellion, because when the Speaker is talking other members must take their seats.

Then Donald Fleming (PC—Toronto Eglinton) and Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre), two others who have spearheaded the opposition attack on the government's pipeline legislation, also rose and tried to make themselves heard.

"I have no right to sit in that chair," shouted Mr. Drew.

SHAKES FIST AT SPEAKER The division bell began to ring for the vote.

At that moment, CCF leader Coldwell, who had been with fury, strode from his front-row seat to the centre aisle of the Commons to a spot in front of the Speaker's mace — symbol of parliamentary sovereignty and democracy.

He shook his fist angrily at the Speaker but his motion to censure was ruled out of order.

members slammed their desks covers in unison adding to the uproar. Mr. Fleming pointed his finger at the Speaker and shouted something that could not be made out. Then Mr. Drew and other members rose and joined Mr. Coldwell in front of the mace. The division bells kept clanging.

The Liberals began singing, but only half-heartedly. Some appeared stunned by what was going on a few feet in front of them.

SPEAKER WHITE-FACED They sang two new songs—There'll Always be a Pipeline and We've Been Working on the Pipeline—as well as Home on the Range, Pack up Your Troubles, Tipperary and the French folk song A S' Malo.

At one point they burst out with Hall, Hall, the Gang's All Here, What the Heck do We Care Now. When a small group of Liberals began singing Onward Christian Soldiers there was a volley of opposition cries of "Shame, Shame."

Mr. Beaudoin sat white-faced in the Speaker's chair, looking straight ahead.

He did not try to restore order. Opposition members, including Harold Winch (CCF—Yamoucheville) and others, kept mingling around in the centre aisle. Hands on hips, Mr. Coldwell kept staring at the Speaker.

Eden Accuses Greece Of Using Foul Propaganda

NORWICH, Eng. (AP) — Prime Minister Eden Friday accused Greece of using propaganda "of the foulest character" to stir up terrorism in Cyprus.

He said the governor of Cyprus, Field Marshal Sir John Harding, and British troops trying to restore order in the strife-torn Mediterranean island colony have been subjected "to the most scurrilous attacks by Greek press and radio."

He added: "It is certainly contrary to the whole spirit of NATO that one of its members should seek by radio propaganda of the foulest character, directed from its capital, Athens, month after month, to stir up terrorist activity in the territory of another."

Eden said while the Athens broadcasts continue "there can be no confidence, still less friendship."

Britain several times has protested the Greek broadcasts in diplomatic notes. But this was Eden's most outspoken criticism of the Greeks to date.

PREPARES NEW MOVES Anti-British partisans, demanding union of the island with Greece, have taken an ever-increasing toll of British lives on the island in recent weeks. Britain is reported preparing new diplomatic moves to settle the issue and some question now one between the island fortress is one of the ideas now under Whitehall consideration.

Eden, addressing a meeting of Conservative supporters, said he wants the whole world to know there can be no question of Britain yielding over any essential element in the defence of its legitimate and vital interests of its territory and life.

He added: "Our country's industrial life and that of western Europe depend today and must depend for many years on oil supplies from the Middle East. "If ever our oil resources were imperilled we should be compelled to defend them. The facilities we need in Cyprus are part of that defence. We cannot therefore accept any doubt about their availability."

SUMS UP He summed up the situation this way: "No Cyprus—no certain facilities to protect our supply of oil. No oil—unemployment and hunger in Britain. It is as simple as that."

"The Cyprus question," said the prime minister, "is not and never has been essentially a colonial question nor one between ourselves and Greece alone. It has far wider implications. It is international."

"A relatively small minority of terrorists is directing its savage attacks against Cypriots and British alike.

A few days ago some pistols and a mask were found in the buildings of the bishopric of Paphos. Ballistic tests have proved that one of these pistols was used to shoot a Greek civilian and a Turkish policeman.

"How can anyone defend an attitude in which leading priests not only refuse to condemn violence but aid and abet it?"
