Canadian Coach Struck By Stick

By JACK SULLIVAN

INNSBRUCK, Austria (CP)— Rev. David Bauer, coach of Canada's young Olympic hockey team, was a casualty of Canada-Sweden championship game won 3-1 by Canada Thursday night.

He was struck on the forehead by a stick thrown by Sweden's Karl-Goran Oberg.

The Roman Catholic priest suffered a cut just above his right eye.

The incident occurred in the third period, with Canada leading 3-1 at the time, when Oberg broke his stick near the Canadian nets.

He skated by the Canadian players' bench and threw the remnant of his stick into Father Bauer's face.

Oberg, who had a tryout with New York Rangers of the National Hockey League last Autumn received a two - minute penalty for the offence.

As play halted, Sweden's captain Sven (Tumba) Johansson went to the Canadian bench and apologized to Father Bauer, who told him: "That's okay."

Immediately after the game, Oberg also apologized to the Canadian coach and was told to "forget it."

Another Canadian official was not so charitable, however.

Art Potter, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said after the game:

"That was one hell of a thing to do. That guy had no business pulling that kind of stuff. He should have been thrown out of the game or at least given a 10-minute penalty.

"But this is the kind of thing we get from the Swedes."

Tenders have been called for the Cardigan project and they will close Feb. 15, he said, with construction to begin soon afterwards. Tenders for the Morell building will be called in the near future. All four of the buildings will have provisions for additional government offices, Mr. Mullally noted.
