TWELVE LOCKED UP.

Senator Sorghum and the Punishment of the Grasping Trusts.

"I'm sorry," said Senator Sorghum in a tone of gentle remonstrance, "to hear you joining in this thoughtless clamor about the failure to catch the trusts where they can be punished."

"But," said the man of eager manners, "don't they always get away, and is there anything they want that they don't get?"

"Yes, sir," was the emphatic reply. "There is a great deal they want that they don't get. I have no doubt that the Sugar trust frequently experiences sensations of pain and resentment when it realizes that the Match trust and the Cigarette trust and a number of others are getting money which it will never see. That's enough to make any trust irritable."

"And I suppose you think after their having all that trouble there ought not to be a chance of anybody's being punished when a trust is brought to trial."

"But there is a chance of somebody's being punished."

"I defy you to cite a case where the trial of a trust has caused anybody to be locked up."

The senator looked, seemed at a loss and scratched his forehead with his forefinger, but his embarrassment was only momentary.

"Your statement merely demonstrates," he said, "that you have neglected to carefully inform yourself on the topic you undertake to discuss. And, you will pardon me for saying so, but that being the case you have wasted not only my time, but your own."

"I have given a large share of attention to the subject."

"But you said that nobody had been locked up as the result of a trust trial."

"And I repeat it."

"Thereby displaying your lack of information. As many as a dozen men were locked up because of such a trial only a short time since."

"A dozen?"

"Yes, sir. They were the members of the jury that couldn't agree."—Washington Star.

Paine's Celery Compound
the Popular Medicine
With the People and the Medical Profession.

Only a truly great and effective remedy could continue, as Paine's Celery Compound has done, to hold its high place in the estimation of the ablest physicians and of the tens of thousands of busy men and women whose only means of judging is from the actual results in their own homes or among their friends. No remedy was ever so highly recommended, because no other ever achieved so many grand victories over disease and sickness.

For feeding exhausted nerves, building up the strength of the body, giving a natural and healthy appetite, and as a promoter of refreshing sleep, Paine's Celery Compound stands today without an equal in the world.

Mrs. Garland, 675 Crawford St., Toronto, gives her experience with the world's best medicine as follows:

"Your Paine's Celery Compound has most wonderfully improved my health. Before using it my appetite was poor—almost gone; I was also weak and debilitated and suffered from pains in the head."

"Paine's Celery Compound does all that is claimed for it. I have recommended it to my friends, and they all speak highly of the results received from it. I wish Paine's Celery Compound the success it so richly deserves."

TREES AND LUMBER.

The Spanish yew is a heavy wood, a cubic foot weighing 50.43 pounds.

"Doatiness" is a speckled stain appearing on the bark or wood of a tree.

"Brash" wood is porous, of a reddish color, very friable and regarded as a sign of age and decay.

Lumbermen say that the best times of the year for falling timber are mid-winter and midsummer.

"Dry rot" is the putrefaction of the vegetable albumen in wood and can be prevented only by some process of hardening or extracting this element.

The best process of seasoning is that accomplished by placing lumber under dry sheds, leaving it entirely open to ventilation, but protected from rain.

The time for seasoning wood varies very greatly, extending from weeks in the case of some timbers to many months or years in the case of hard, dense wood.

Timber is best hardened and preserved by withdrawing its fluid constituents, hardening its albumen and filling the cells as far as possible with antiseptic preparations.

As a rule trees which grow in moist ground produce wood that is more sappy and less durable than those which grow on dry earth. To this rule, however, there are several notable exceptions.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET.

Disease May Lurk In the Draft With Which It Refreshes.

Let us now examine into some of the conditions surrounding domestic wells and springs in the larger towns and villages, conditions which also prevail sometimes even about rural homes. We shall then be better able to understand how a well, like a Nevada silver mine, may have "millions in it," and how "the old oaken bucket" may bring from the depths elements of disease with the same draft that refreshes the thirsty throat. For convenience a well is situated in the back yard, perhaps a rod away from the house, or it may even be nearer. Certain other things, also for convenience's sake, are grouped close about the back door. Here is a cess-pool but a short distance, perhaps only a few feet, from the well. There is a vault, a filthy institution, which is an open disgrace to civilization. A little farther away is the garbage heap. In other adjacent localities are the chicken coop, the pigpen and the stable, with their accumulations of decomposing filth. It may be that in a corner a dead animal has been buried to save the trouble of conveying it to a distance. A damp and reeking spot near the back door marks the place where the slops have been deposited since the drain to the cesspool became stopped up with the accumulated refuse of half a dozen years.

Every one of the sources of contamination mentioned is a contributor to the well. A part of the putrid material floats upon the ground and is disposed of by evaporation, but the greater portion of it soaks into the ground. It is a common error to suppose that whatever has disappeared into the ground is destroyed. The filth which has disappeared from the surface may be out of sight, but it is not out of existence. If the soil is filled with refuse of various kinds, the well will be contaminated. Every rain washes the filth a little deeper down until it reaches the well proper or one of the underground veins of water by which it is fed. It may not be generally known that a well will draw water a distance of 60 feet.—Arena.

The Bell Organ & Piano Co., Ltd.

Dear Sir,—Allow me to compliment you on the qualities of the Piano ordered from you for the Toronto Conservatory of Music. The tone is remarkably pure and brilliant throughout, while the bass is deep and powerful. The mechanism is apparently perfect, the touch elastic, and in appearance the entire Piano is a work of art.

Yours truly,
