

CAMPUS COMMUNITY

Bagnole to visit

Leone Bagnole, Provincial Minister of Education, will be the guest at the SU Council's regular meeting this Sunday night at 7:30 in 237 Kelley Building.

Michelle Dorsey, SU President, says the Union asked for the meeting because they "want to see what the Minister has been up to." Mrs. Bagnole will be questioned on the student loan crisis in P.E.I., and on the Established Programs Financing (EPF) system whereby funds coming from the federal government supposedly for use in education are not used by the provincial government entirely for that purpose.

"We're concerned about the future of UPEI," added Dorsey.

Three Gemmies adrift in Chester, Nova Scotia

By Carol Doiron

The votes are in — the Netted Gem has passed a crucial review of its membership in Canadian University Press. The voting was made at the annual conference held over the holidays.

The main concern of CUP and the reason the paper was under review was our previous ridiculously close ties to the Student Union.

The Netted Gem, however, is now looking to the future of their organization. "We are drawing up a constitution for the paper, re-affirming our dedication to editorial freedom," says one staff member.

Topics for discussion at the conference included gay and lesbian rights and women's issues. One of the three Gem delegates has suggested that the paper will now be looking at these areas more than they have in the past.

Recruitment problems, especially for the smaller papers, were found to be quite common, so successful papers made suggestions. This semester, the Netted Gem will be trying quite a few of them.

Amid cries for "fiscal responsibility" from the Gauntlet's vocal dino (a dino is someone who has been around CUP for many years) the details of the organization's budget were set.

One major change that affects the Atlantic region is the addition of a second staff person for the region. This will mean more attention can be given to the Atlantic papers, which will probably result in much better papers.

CUP is planning to dissolve its partnership with the Canadian Federation of Students in their ownership of the Common Printing Groups. This is the company which does all the printing for the two organizations as well as some commercial work. The reason given for dissolving the relationship is that CFS has not been supplying working capital to the company, even though CUP has Carolyn Ryan, editor of the Netted Gem, was elected to the Board of Directors of Campus Plus, the organization which brings in national ad revenue to the CUP papers. She is representing the Atlantic region. Her term began last week and ends at the next annual national conference.
