ELLEN'S DIARY

"April!" Crows Call And Sure Enough 'Tis Here

This afternoon, our farmers turned steps toward the woodlot over the fields to take up once more the harvesting which had suffered an extended suspension due to a hindering depth of snow there. "We never know when we lay down an axe. . . James began when he came by for his jacket. . . or a utensil of housewifery" we chuckled. "When, or if ever we'll pick it up again." We nodded. "That thought sometimes comes to mind at the house-work. Just last evening when the supper dishes were being put away it was to question whether they should be left assembled in the cupboard for a quick move to the breakfast table, or each item put in its proper place — the cups and plates and all, with their fellows. James' face was sober. "There does come a last time" he said. "Though" he shrugged into his jacket "as now, we may often come back to work that's been rested. And it's very nice too. . . I often think of that neighbor-boy who away for years came home again to the district to visit. He was quite a hunter and trapper when a lad, and a good fisherman too. He knew where to find the trout! And had an eye out for salmon. He was so happy to find the fish-hook and pole still in the tree where he had left them years before after a last spell of fishing. But the tree had grown up. The hook was caught high up in the branches. . . I wonder how he is. I suppose" he paused trying to picture any change of the years, "he's gray-headed by this. Yes, there is a

EASTER MORN

Over the hill, the soldiers are coming. They are bringing their prisoner in. The guards, with their bayonets gleaming. And faces, stern, and grim. The crowd press ever onward, What has he done? they cry: For he was ever a friend to us; Some others make reply. He stands before them; pale and calm. And looks on with a pitying eye. He is Our Heavenly Father's son. They have condemned to die. But the wrath of their Lord was kindled. And the ocean was tempest tossed; And there was darkness o'er all the land. When our Saviour was nailed to a cross. Before the day was over Kindly hands took our Saviour down. And tenderly wrapped him in linen. Then laid him to rest in a tomb. But before the sunbeams crossed the sky. Just at the dawn of day, He came forth in quiet splendor, And the stone was rolled away. He suffered the Cross of Calvary. And for us a new world was born: But he left us that glad sweet message: There will always be, Easter morn. Mrs. Edgar Gillespie, 76 Douglas St.

MARY HAWORTH

Act Now - Without Delay

Dear Mary Hayworth: I certainly need your immediate help! I am a happy married wife and the mother of two children. But for the last few years I have the insane desire to steal—a kleptomaniac, I guess I might be called. I have stolen from my friends, from grocery stores, department stores and most anywhere I happen to be, this strong desire overtakes me. Of course I am so ashamed of myself, for I know it is terribly wrong. But I can't help it.

I just hate to go shopping by myself any more. I've never stolen large articles, just small insignificant things — perfumes, candy, etc., that certainly don't need it. It is like a sickness.

Should I tell my husband and ask his help? I know it will hurt him terribly and may even destroy his faith in me. Please help me, but don't suggest that I go to a psychiatrist. In the first place I can't afford it, and in the second place I am sure your help will be just as good, if not better for me. — F.S. . . .

HELP SO IMPERATIVE

DEAR F.S.: If you had acute appendicitis, that called for emergency surgery, would you expect me to help you from this distance? Or if you had an aching tooth and a swollen jaw, and couldn't rest until relief was had, would you insist that only I, the columnist, could administer corrective treatment?

Not if you were in your right mind, you wouldn't. And the same rule applies to your present predicament. You urgently need specialist help, at first-hand in getting relief from this compulsive urge to pilfer. This psychiatric counsel is indicated. So why fight it?

As you say, kleptomania is a of Alberton, now residents of Ottawa, Ont., left recently by air on a tour to Europe, Heidelberg, Zurich, Milan, Venice, Florence and will be in Rome for Easter. Then to Grenoble, Nice, Paris, London and finally Edinburgh. They leave Prestwick end of April for home.

Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell McLean are arriving in Charlottetown on Thursday from Saint John for the Easter holidays.

Mrs. H.A. Jenkins is spending three weeks visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Melville Andrew, Charlottetown. Wing Commander Jenkins is stationed at Lyneham, England.

cleanness. It just doesn't make sense to be stealing useless trifles, thereby risking arrest and legal reprisal, and damaged reputation, and public scandal to your family.

Obviously you are intelligent and well informed, as you show in diagnosing your case so aptly, using the medical term for your aberration. No doubt the sensitivity of your temperament is a factor contributing to this ailment. Kleptomania usually is rooted in emotional injuries, carried over from early childhood. And unconscious dread of exploring the nightmare past is probably back of your scared resistance to consulting psychiatry.

In the town from which you write, there are two excellent advisory agencies, either of which could steer you into helpful channels. One is the Family Service (combined with the local Travelers' Aid). The other is the town's Child Guidance Centre — staffed with psychiatrists and psychologists, who will understand, protect and help you in finding the treatment suited to the case.

So act now, without delay, and thus establish the basic honesty of your intentions. This is better than pitching the problem at your husband.—M.H.

NEEDS CASH LOAN

Dear Mary Hayworth: I am a government employee, here since 18 months ago. My wife and children are in Europe. I would like to borrow money to bring them to this country.

I realize that many types of financial institutions lend money, and I suppose you will suggest that I get help from such a place. But at present I just can't afford any regular monthly payments, as my budget is stretched to the last penny.

Therefore do you know of any place where I might borrow and repay at my convenience? Please I don't want a gift, only a loan. Your advice will be greatly appreciated.—S.L.

Dear S. L.: Try the Home Service department of the Red Cross chapter in your locality, as a source of creative counsel, regarding possible solutions of your problem. Also, check the private welfare facilities of your church; or, if you aren't a church member, the facilities of the church that your wife and children belong to; or that your parents may have supported. Thus whether Quaker, Lutheran, Roman Catholic or whatever, it's possible the church for preserving family ties; and that your case would qualify for a "convenient" loan. —M.H.

HIGHFIELD W.A.

The regular monthly meeting of Highfield United W.A. was held on February 27 at the home of Mrs. Sterns with Shirley Weeks as devotional leader. The opening hymn was "Breathe on Me, Breath of God", followed by Scripture reading from Philippians, Ch. 3, verses 1-21. The leader then gave a reading on "A Mother's Love". A prayer and the hymn "Take My Life and Let It Be" closed this period.

The president then took charge of the meeting. Roll call was responded to by fifteen members. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Marion Hurry reported the sum of $150.00 realized at the Valentine turkey dinner after all expenses paid. Bessie Creed moved a vote of thanks to the committee in charge.

Norma Vessey reported for the sewing committee, $18.72 taken in for sewing to date. The president thanked the ladies who had taken part in the sewing also for making the tablecloths.

The friendship secretary reported one Get Well card sent during the month. The treasurers report showed a balance of $150.78 on hand. It was moved and seconded that $150.00 be passed in to the Building Fund of the Church.

Collection for the evening amounted to $3.75. One member paid dues. It was decided to have a social evening in the church basement. May Clark, Norma Vessey and Bessie Creed were appointed as a committee to make plans.

Mrs. Roberts invited the members for their next meeting when Helen Sellick will be devotional leader and Bessie Creed and Ada Frizzell, lunch committee. The meeting closed with the Misph benediction after which a lunch was served by the hostess and committee in charge.
