Hutchison's Book On Late Mr. King

By Clyde Blackburn (Canadian Press Staff Writer)
OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—Mackenzie King's fear of trouble in Korea brought him close to a break with his chosen successor, Louis St. Laurent, two years before the Korean war broke out, Bruce Hutchison reports in his book, "The Incredible Canadian," published Saturday.

This is one of the previously-untold stories in the newspaper man's painstaking account of the life and times of Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada for 22 years before his retirement in 1948. (The book is published by Longmans Green.)

In more than 150,000 words, Mr. Hutchison, editor of the Victoria Times and author of "Canada, The Unknown Country," gives a frank and sometimes cruel account of Mackenzie King's thoughts, motives, actions and utterances during 50 years of Canada's oft-turbulent political history. The book gives evidence of a most-exhaustive study of the records and an intimate personal relationship with the late Prime Minister.

The book attributes to Mackenzie King a great deal of wise statesmanship, a great deal of cold, ruthless political astuteness, and a degree of pettishness and absurdity.

Most incredible of the stories—that describing Mackenzie King's capitulation to cabinet demands for conscription in 1944 in the face of a real or imaginary threat of revolt by the army—has already appeared in print as an extract.

Mr. St. Laurent's "capitulation" at a private dinner with Mr. St. Laurent at Laurier House after the latter had said that "naturally he must resign if King repealed his policy," and the Prime Minister had replied that resignation was unthinkable.

"This affair so carefully hushed up, marked a watershed in the political lives of King and St. Laurent," Mr. Hutchison writes.

"King was no longer the dominant power in government. He was too old to fight. St. Laurent, a rising man, had challenged and beaten him."

In a different vein the book describes "the comic side" of Mackenzie King's obsession with the danger of Communism. It apparently came from a conversation with the Prime Minister after the 1946 espionage trials.

"One of his servants, said King, was a Communist, probably a spy, and this man he watched with continual amusement. To draw him out King would talk at length about the virtues of Communism, pretending a warm sympathy for Russia. . . . Actually, it was nonsense but King enjoyed his little game of hide-and-seek."

Mr. Hutchison says Mackenzie King was "incensed." He was obsessed with fear of war in Korea and believed such a step should not have been taken without consulting him.

"Isley prepared to resign," the book says. "St. Laurent said little but made it clear that he could not remain if his action in the U. N. was repudiated."

"On learning this King was incredulous. He had expected no more rebellions in the last illustrious months of his reign. Isley had always been brittle of course and had never pretended to like his leader, but St. Laurent was not only King's closest colleague but the man already chosen to succeed him."

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—(AP)—Minot Jelle, 22, heir to an oil-magnate fortune and major figure in a New York City vice probe, today pleaded guilty to illegal possession of two pistols. Jelle also faces a nine-count indictment charging he influenced women into prostitution and lived off their earnings.

Midgell and Vicinity

Church Road School was closed on Tuesday, Armistice Day.

Miss Freda MacCallum and Miss Joan MacEwen of Charlottetown spent a recent week end at St. Peter's Bay.

Mr. Leith Sanderson of Church Road made two more trips to Nova Scotia the week of November 2-8th.

Mr. and Mrs. George Jackson and Mr. Stanley Jackson of Brackley and Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Mosher of Suffolk attended the funeral of the late Mr. Homer James of Church Road.

Friends of Mr. Tom Cullen of Midgell regret very much to hear that he met with a very unfortunate accident while working on his farm with his tractor. In some way the tractor pinned him against a tree. He was taken to the Charlottetown Hospital where he was found to have one leg broken above the knee. Latest reports are that he is resting comfortably.

Mr. Irving Sanderson of Church Road left Friday morning, November 7th, for Halifax where he has a permanent job during the winter months. He spends the summers at his home here, and resumes his duties as freight handler at the Halifax water front every fall. His son, Billy, who is employed in Pictou, N. S., spent a weekend with him here recently.
