Tired but Sleepless

Is a condition which gradually wears away the strength. Let the blood be purified and enriched by Hood's Sas-saparilla and this condition will cease.

"For two or three years I was subject to poor spells. I always felt tired, could not sleep at night and the little I could eat did not do me any good. I read about Hood's Sarsaparilla and decided to try it.
Before I had finished two bottles I began to feel better and in a short time I felt all right and had gained 21 pounds in weight. I am stronger and healthier than I have ever been in my life." JOHN W.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD

How the Brigadier held the Kings
BY
A. CONAN DOYLE.

It was at that moment that I learned to bless those months which Oriant, the descendant of the Irish Kings, had spent in teaching me the tongue of the English. My ankles had just been freed, so that I had only to slip my hands out of the cords, and with a single rush I had flown across the field by my side where I lay by the fire, and hurled myself into the saddle of poor Vidal's horse. Yes, for all my wounded ankle, I never put foot to stirrup, but was in the seat of a single bound. I tore the halter from the tree, and before those villains could so much as snap a pistol at me I was beside them.

"I surrender to you, sir," I cried, though I dare say my English was not as good as their own. I had been wounded, rode straight down in the direction of the English camp. Very soon we had opened our hearts, for we each liked the look of the other from the beginning. He was of the nobility, his brave land, and he had been sent scouting by Lord Wellington to see if there were any signs of our advancing through the mountains. It is one advantage of a war-torn life like mine, that you learn to pick up those bits of knowledge which distinguish the man of the world. I have, for example, hardly ever met a Frenchman who could repeat an English title correctly.

If I had not traveled I should not be able to say with confidence that this young man's real name was Major Horatio Russell. He had just been an honorable soldier in the light cavalry of the King's regiment, so that it was as the Bart that I usually addressed him, just as in Spanish one might say "Don." As we rode beneath the moonlight in the lovely Spanish night we spoke our minds to each other, as if we were brothers. We were both of an age, you see, both of the light cavalry of the King's regiment (his was the 10th, mine the 12th), and both with the same hopes and ambitions. Never had I learned to know a man so quickly as I did that night. He gave me the name of a girl whom he had loved at a garden called Vauxhall and for my part I spoke to him of little Carole of the opera. He told me that he had loved a girl called Vauxhall and for my part I spoke to him of little Carole
of the opera.

CHAPTER V.
Finally he began to speak of what the English called sport, and he told me of the money which he had lost over which of two cocks could kill the other, or which of two men could strike the other in a fight for a prize, that I was filled with astonishment. He was ready to bet upon anything in the most wonderful manner, and when I chanced to see a shooting star he was anxious to bet that he would see more than me, twenty-five francs a star, and it was only when I explained that my purse was in the hands of the brigands that he would give over the idea.

Well, we chatted away in this very amiable fashion until the day began to break, when suddenly we heard a great rush of hoofs, and I saw through the front of it. It was very rocky and broken ground, and I thought, although I could see nothing that a general engagement was about to begin. The Bart looked at the sound came from the English camp, where every man emptied his piece each morning as to make sure of having a dry priming.

"In another mile we shall be up with the outposts," said he, "and I perceived that we had trotted along at so good a pace during the time that we were keeping up our pleasant chat that the dragon was not so far off as I had supposed. I of sight. I looked on every side, but in the whole of that vast rocky valley there was no one save only the Bart and I—both of us unarmed, you understand, and both of us well mounted. I began to ask myself whether after all it was quite necessary that I should ride that mile which would bring me to the British outposts.
Now I wish to be very clear with you on this point, my friends, for I would not have you think that I was acting dis-honorably or ungratefully to the man who had helped me away from the brigands. You must remember that of all duties the strongest is that which a commanding officer owes to his men. It was my duty to see that the war is a game which is played under fixed rules, and when these rules are broken one must at once claim the forfeit. If, for example, I had been a parole, then I should have been an infamous wretch had I dreamed of escaping. But no parole had been asked of me. Out of overconfidence and the chance of the horse dropping behind the Bart had permitted me to get upon equal terms with him. Had it been I who had taken him I should have used him as a horse, and he would have had the same time I should have respected his enterprise so far as to have deprived him

IT PUT NEW LIFE IN ME.

"ALL I DID WAS JUST TO MOPE AROUND"
"SCOTT'S SARSAPARILLA CURED ME."

The chilly weather of late fall and early winter finds them unprepared to stand the change and hence they suffer. This fact is plainly proved by the following opinions of some who speak from practical experience:
"I felt like a man that could commit suicide. I caught a cold while camping on damp ground, had twinges of awful malarial pains, couldn't eat and couldn't sleep. All I did was to mope around and make up all in the house as miserable as myself. Scott's Sarsaparilla put new life in me, braced me up thoroughly, and since its use pain is a stranger to me." Alex Gray, Toronto.

J. T. McGraw, a mining prospector, writing from Minden: Express me three bottles Scott's Sarsaparilla here before Saturday. Have been a martyr to rheumatism and indigestion brought on by exposure. Scott's Sarsaparilla is rapidly curing me.

Nothing has ever equalled Scott's Sarsaparilla for building up the system, putting the blood in healthful circulation and invigorating the body. Thousands testify to its splendid effects in extreme weakness and all debilitating diseases. On this account no imitation of Scott's should be accepted. Of your local druggists at $1 per bottle, 6 bottles, $5.

"I don't see who can play it best," he cried, pulling out his sword.
I had drawn mine also, but I was quite determined not to hurt this admirable young man, and hence my benefactor.
"Consider," said I. "You say that I am your prisoner. I might with equal reason say that you are mine. We are alone here, and though I have no doubt that you are an excellent swordsman, you would hardly hope to hold your own against the best blade in the six light cavalry brigades."
His answer was a cut at my head. I parried and shore off half of his white plume. He thrust at my breast. I turned his point and cut away the other half of his cockade.

"Curse your monkey tricks," he cried, as I wheeled my horse away from him.
"Why should you strike at me," said I.
"You see that I will not strike back."
"That's all very well," said he. "But you've got to come along with me to the camp."
"I shall never see the camp," said I.
"I'll lay you nine to four you do," he cried, as he made at me with sword in hand.
But those words of his put something new into my head. Could we not decide the matter in some better way than by fight? The Bart was placing me in such a position that I should have to hurt him, or he would certainly hurt me. I avoided his rush, though his sword point was within an inch of my neck.
"I have a proposal," I cried. "We shall throw dice as to which is the prisoner or the other."
He smiled at this. It appealed to his love of sport.
"Where are your dice?" he cried.
"I have none."
"Nor I, but I have cards."
"Cards? Let it be," said I.
"And the game?"
"I leave it to you."
"I accept, then—the best of three."
I could not but agree, for I do not suppose that there were three men in France who were my masters at the game. I told the Bart that I would play as much as he disliked. He smiled also as he listened.
"I was counted the best player at Water's," said he. "With even luck you deserve to get off if you beat me." So we tethered our horses two and sat down on either side of the great flat rock. The Bart took a pack of cards out of his tunic and I had only to shuffle them quarrelled over hussar and dragon, for he was absurdly proud of his regiment, and you should have seen him curl his lip and clap his hand to his hip when I said that I hoped it might never be his misfortune to come in the way of the Third.

ANOTHER DISCOVERY.

Of Interest to Bicycle Riders.

A well known bicycle rider has made a discovery that will be good news to all who locomote on the wheel. He says:
"Since I first began to ride a wheel, which is several years ago, I have been subject to more or less chafing and irritation. Sometimes when heated the itching inside my legs would be so severe that I would feel compelled to forego riding for a time. Nothing that I tried did any material good until my attention was drawn to an advertisement of Dr. Chase's Ointment for all itching of the skin. I tried it and almost from the moment it touched the skin the itching stopped. I also find its occasional use prevents chafing.
Further evidence of the efficacy of this preparation is given by Chas. Roe, foreman Central Press Agency, Toronto, who was troubled with Itching Skin of the most aggravated kind. When the skin became heated during sleep from too much clothing, would wake up with absolute pain from digging into the material, best workman.
Chase's Ointment gave relief from the first application and permanently cured. Price 60c.
