Rotating Poultry Colony From Year To Year

OTTAWA, Sept. 17 — Having a colony house or poultry shelter close to the farm home is naturally a great convenience, as it saves many steps. But it is not always a good idea unless there is sufficient room to change the range areas from year to year.

Land used too long as a poultry range, even though on well-drained sandy soil, is bound to become sour. Then it soon becomes an ideal breeding place for harmful organisms which bring intestinal troubles.

Experts of the Department of Agriculture say the answer is to rotate the poultry range. At the Experimental Farm at Harrow, Ont., the large paddocks are rotated with poultry one year, a hoed crop the second, then oats and alfalfa the third year. The alfalfa provides a good range for the poultry during the

FIND FUR COAT

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 20 — (Reuters) — Detectives found a fur coat worth 500 pounds hanging on goal posts on a football field here today. They said they linked it with a recent house burglary. Hundreds of pounds worth of jewelry taken in the robbery was found in a street gutter Monday.

ACCUSING FINGER — Lying on a stretcher in the courtyard of a hospital in Taegu, one of five survivors of a North Korean massacre points to a Red soldier he accuses of taking part in the slaughter of Yanks on Hill 303, near Waegwan. A Russian-built machine gun of the type used in the killing is beside him. (Photo by NEA-Acme Staff Correspondent Stanley Trelick.)

MORE ATROCITY VICTIMS — Their hands tied behind them, these American soldiers were shot by their North Korean captors in the Waegwan area, where 36 other Yanks were slain by the Reds earlier. Gen. MacArthur, meantime, has renewed his warning to North Korean leaders they will be punished for such atrocities. (Exclusive NEA-Acme photo by Stanley Trelick, staff correspondent.)
